ORIGINAL FRENCH CLYSMUS.—A short time has elapsed since the subscriber introduced into the United States the Clysmus of Paris, and its unprecedented sale, and the high approval it has met with, is of themselves sufficiently strong to its peculiar virtues.

It is not impossible that an article of true merit should be puffed and cried to fame, for the purpose of getting it into public use, but the discovery of the nature of the Clysmus is held by those who have given it a fair trial, sufficient to establish its character.

FOR THE TOILET OF LADIES—It is not only pleasant but remedial, and much superior to Cologne Water, being scented with the finest Jockey jasmine perfume. It removes quickly, Brightness of the skin of Sunburn, and renders it soft and smooth, and greatly improves the complexion.

As a GENTLEMAN'S SHAVING WATER—it is very desirable, healing in a short time cuts made by the razor, softens the skin, and prevents the unpleasant smarting often experienced after shaving.

BARNES'S PILLS—for most troublesome and venomous sores, whether from the bite of a reptile or any other remedy, yields to the Clysmus.

TETTER AND ERUPTIONS—Cured and kept cured by the application of this preparation, its superior power upon CHAPPED HANDS, they can testify.

As a DENTIFRICE—the Clysmus stands unrivalled—preserving the teeth, and preventing decay of the gums.

WHEN FRESH—the BREATH AROMA has deceived both. It acts as a corrective, entirely removing it—which, when allowed to remain, is exceedingly unpleasant and permicious to health.

☞ The Clysmus is offered at a very low price, and to Wholesale Purchasers at a very low rate, if large discount will be made.

☞ Having the exclusive dealing existing Agencies for States, Cities or Towns, will please apply to the subscriber, and they will be duly attended to.

All communications (POST-PAID) will receive prompt attention.

SOMETHING ABOUT A MURDER.

FOUNDED ON FACT.

A fair and gentle girl was Barbara Comyn, the only daughter of one of the strictest and sternest old ministers that ever adhered to Calvin. Yet Mr. Comyn was thoroughly conscientious in all his views; and when he frowned, he did it not through love of frowning, but that he hoped, by gathering a cloud upon his brows, to bring down from those eyes upon which he frowned such showers of repentance as refresh and make green the soul, sin-withered and sere from the harsh and hot suns of eve. He was, in truth, a worthy and good man, wrote a little account of her predecessor, to her lover. Not long afterward, so cleverly did she by dress as to deceive even herself, Percival was again at Aberdeen—disguised, should all other methods fail, to carry off his kinswoman on the way, or her bridal, and many a twilight evening was Barbara, in her silver bridal, or his mocks or took his shee-dinner kaup, did these two young creatures, innocent, unnoticed and unsuspected, on the banks of the Dee. But these meetings must soon end, for six months have passed, and Mr. Percival must be called in the house of Davy Bain—is come to wed and take home his old kinswoman bride.

REVOLUTIONARY REMINISCENCES.—The following is an extract from the Diary of John Adams—the illustrious Adams of the Revolution—speaking of his degenerate grandson. It is dated June 16, 1771:

I read to-day an address from the Convention of Ministers, and from the clergy in the Northern part of the country of Hampshire, and from the town of Amisbury, all conceived in very high terms of respect, and confidence, and affection. Posterity will scarcely find it possible to form a just idea of this gentleman's (Gov. Hutchinson's) character; but if the wretched journal should ever be rend by my own family, let them know that there was upon the scene of action, with Governor Hutchinson, an internal enemy to those principles and that political system to which alone he owes his own and his family's late advancement; one who thinks that his character and conduct have been the cause of laying a foundation for perpetual discontent and uneasiness between Britain and the colonies; of perpetual struggles of one party for wealth and power at the expense of the liberties of this country, and of perpetual contentions and opposition to the other party to preserve them; and that this contention will never be fully terminated but by wars, confusion, and carnage. Cæsar, in destroying the Roman Republic, made himself a perpetual dictator. Hutchinson, by countenancing and supporting a system of corruption and all tyranny, has made himself Governor, and, by the mad violence of his party, has always had the instruments of their own servitude—laid prostrate at the feet of both. With great anxiety and hazard, with continued application to business with loss of health, reputation, profit, and as far as prospects and opportunities of advancement as others who have greedily embraced them, I have for ten years together invariably opposed this system and its author. It has prevailed in some measure, and the people are now worshipping the idol, and the instruments of it, and disposing, insulting, and abusing the opposers of it. Edward and Alfred—

"Thank God, I have done my duty, and it gives me the unwilling gratitude of base mankind."
