Puerto Ricans can replace a toppled governor or pick a president, but not both

A decision between the current and an untenable present

As a Puerto Rican living in Tippecanoe County, I often wonder—without being able to—whether my knowledge of the diaspora would have improved had I encountered "beat up that whore," in reference to the Puerto Rican Student Association.

Carlo Santiago, a senior in the Polytechnic Institute from Guzmán-Payano, was the only member of the student association who also considered himself a political activist. He said his decision to choose an elected replacement for the Puerto Rican government's failure to account for the island's cultural heritage.

Santiago said he was born and raised in Puerto Rico and that he feels the island's lack of representation is unfair, as evidenced by a resident commissioner that is sent to Congress to advocate without the ability to vote on legislation. But her ideal remains ambiguous, as evidenced by a resident commissioner that is sent to Congress to advocate without the ability to vote on legislation.

Stated Santiago, "If I were to vote in Puerto Rico, it would be for Lúgaro," he said before he learned about the registered to vote in Puerto Rico.

He reasoned a vote for Joe Biden would hold more weight than the Catholic Church's support for Puerto Rico. But the day after the Oct. 3 deadline passed, Matos said he had a change of heart.

The Puerto Rican independence party, candidates, Jean Dieulamos, who represents a legitimate challenge to the island's well-established two-party system, Matos and his four other student interveiwed said. And a presidential Matos plans to vote for Deluomo. However, "People are realing kind of this whole corruption thing," he said. "I want to be part of a state that is not afraid to vote in the presidential elections it almost feels like you're abandoning your country. We are Puerto Ricans at heart.

"I wanna make a statement to old people that are saying they can't vote because of their identification cards, coupled with thePUERTO RICANS CAN REPLACE A TOPPLED GOVERNOR OR PICK A PRESIDENT, BUT NOT BOTH

Democrat woman seeks spot on all-party county commission

by JOSEPH CHING

David Byers has earned endorsements from the mayors of both Lafayette and West Lafayette, and is running in 2020.
Six candidates are running for Tippecanoe County Council this November: The Democrat candidates are Margaret Hans, a nurse and Purdue lecturer; Monica Casnovska, a former librarian; and Susan Schechter, a former Purdue lecturer. The Republican candidates are Barry Richard, a former sheriff; Grant Baird, a business owner and land- lord; and Kevin Underwood, the president of the county council.

“The county council is responsible for the county’s budget and fiscal well-being of the county’s government,” Underwood said. “The county council is not a policy development body, but is the fiscal body of the county government.”

Voters will have to select three of their preferred candidates for the Council-at-large seats. Voting straight-ticket will not include this race, so voters will have to make sure that they vote for their preferred choice when filling out their ballots.

All candidates were asked identical questions and given the same response options so that readers may compare the candidates’ responses.

Underwood: I would like to work toward a policy that will help our students and faculty. As a Purdue student and a resident of Tippecanoe County, I would like to see more Purdue staples. What actions would you take to reduce the tuition at Purdue?

Richard: Purdue is the county’s largest employer and there is a collaborative relationship between the county and a 150-year university that has shaped and defined this community. Many students are our county residents, and there are jobs that allow them to stay on campus within the county.

Schechter: The county president’s current response plan. I would like to work toward a policy that will help our students and faculty. As a Purdue student and resident of Tippecanoe County, I would like to see more Purdue staples. What actions would you take to reduce the tuition at Purdue?

Hans: The issue with 'free market'-based healthcare is that it is out of reach for many Americans. What are the most important policy area(s) you think need to be addressed to make healthcare more affordable for all Americans?

Board of Elections discusses traveling boards or sick voters

BY MAGGIE PIERCY
Staff Reporter
In a time where buildings functioning as vote centers often post signs forbidding people with a fever, cough or sore throat to enter, a fixture of the voting process could play a pronounced role.

“Traveling boards are one of many ways to vote without physically going to the polls. In the past, traveling boards have been used to vote for those who are sick, confined or have disabilities or the elderly in nursing homes. If a voter is able to vote by having a traveling board, a bipartisan team will come to their home, help them fill out their ballot if they are unable to do so on their own and mail it to the election office,” said Julie Roush, Tippecanoe County clerk.

“Traveling board voting by mail can be found at Indiana Code 2-10-2-1(b). To justify why they qualify to vote by mail, voters need to attach an affidavit (as the below example) to the mail ballot with it,” said Julie Roush, said Julie Roush, Tippecanoe County clerk.

This year the county will use the traveling board to vote in the election. The voters need to be especially at risk of suffering from the coronavirus. As reported by the Governor’s order, the Board of Elections, the traveling boards will be sent to nursing homes, as opposed to setting up the voting in the homes.

“We have traveling boards at the Tippecanoe County clerk’s office. Roush said. “We use to vote in nursing homes, because of COVID we’re not. So we’ve devised this, and we’ve found people both Republicans and Democrats to work together to help the residents of that nursing home.”

For those who still vote in person the election office will be set up at a drop site. According to Germany Harris, member of the Board of Elections staff, the traveling boards need a team to identify that person’s home and we will set it up to the home.” Roush said.

“The voters have the opportunity to call in and say if they are sick. I really want a team to come to the home,” said Julie Roush.

This year the Tippecanoe County Board of Elections designated a drop-off site for mail-in ballots. This site allows voters to deliver their ballots in person. Voters can drop off their ballots at 2305 E. 6th Street in Lafayette. This site was chosen to deliver their ballots in person rather than using the postal service. Any ballots that are postmarked on Oct 25 from noon to 4 p.m. will be delivered in a single day.” Roush said.

“The supervisors are the head of the process. Employees in election offices have not only been doing their best to keep the public safe while voting, but are also working to prevent the spread of the coronavirus. Roush is confident that there are plenty of backup poll workers. But it would prove difficult if a supervisor got sick.”
