

Ross-Ade renovations nearing completion

BY ISRAEL SCHUMAN Sports Editor

For its 100th birthday, Ross-Ade Stadium got a face-lift.

The host-site of Purdue home football games is days away from the total completion of what has been dubbed "Phase 1 construction" by Purdue Athletics. The renovations come with a bill of $45.4 million, funded completely by donors.

As The Exponent has previously reported, major additions include connecting bleacher sections on the south end zone and a new tunnel for players to emerge from before kickoff.

Construction began in December, and the Athletics Department has maintained that the stadium would be ready for Saturday's season kickoff against Fresno State.

The added seating on the south end zone will add about 4,500 seats to capacity, allowing the stadium to fit a total of 61,441 fans - good for 11th out of 18 teams in the conference when it expands next season.

According to Athletic Director Mike Bobinski, the renovations are important in raising Purdue football's national prominence, an increasingly important factor since the advent of NIL allowance.

The new tunnel, dubbed the "Tiller Tunnel" after historic coach Joe Tiller, will be stylized in a railroad theme. Current pictures of the tunnel show a black brick facade and Purdue Athletics depictions of the finished work show a black metal-plated design.

Purdue football is brand new this year.

The program is coming off one of the most tumultuous off-seasons in its history, where essentially every Boiler football figurehead vas replaced.

The uncertainty presented itself as fertile ground for a fan poll, and that is exactly what the Exponent has done, putting out a eries of questions on Twitter for users to answer.

Most polls got about 200 responses, with results covering a multitude of topics:

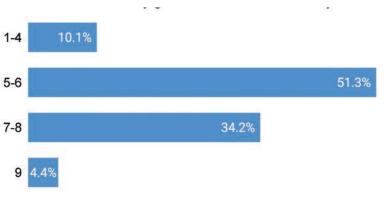

How many games will Purdue win this year?

The majority of fans expect the team to win fewer games than it did last year. The most common response was five to six wins, teetering on the edge of a bowl game.

If the Boilers could get to that six-win threshold, it would continue a strong trend started by Brohm.

In Brohm's tenure from 2017-22, the football team went to four bowls in six years. The last time Purdue did that was from 2003-08 during the glory days of Joe Tiller, the winningest coach in program history.

The fan opinion meshed closely with the line set by FanDuel Sportsbook at 5.5 wins.

What will be better this year, offense or defense?

Offensive Coordinate Graham Harrell On facing the reigning Mountain West champs

"There's no room for errors, especially against a team that's played a lot of ball together, (they) will get you beat."

Head coach Ryan Walters On quarterback Hudson Card

"I think what's most important and most impressive from my vantage point is just his poise, he's got calm confidence."

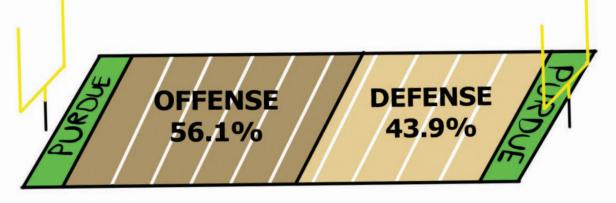

On his often even-keeled personality

"I'm competitive, I'll rally the troops when I need to rally the troops, I'll push them forward when I need to push them forward and I'll hold them back when I need to hold them back."

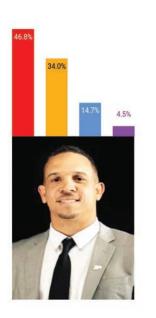

On the coaching staff

"I've been really impressed with the chemistry we have on the staff, with the knowledge that they have on the staff and with the way that they've interacted with and mentored players."

On facing the reigning Mountain West champs "We've got to be prepared to handle adversity when it comes because that's a guarantee, and ultimately just do our jobs and have faith in each other."

Fans favored offense, perhaps due to Purdue's past history or talent like Devon Mockobee and Hudson Card.

What is your opinion of head coach Ryan Walters?

The headliner of Purdue's long off-season shopping list was head coach Ryan Walters.

Fans have very little to judge Walters on as he has never been a head coach before. But despite not having seen him coach, the effects of his recruiting are already paying dividends.

Walters was able to recruit multiple fourstar recruits in his one off-season, something no Purdue head coach has been able to do in 15 years.

Perhaps swayed by the same charm that landed those recruits, fans are overwhelmingly positive about Walters. Fewer than 4% of voters had a negative opinion, and more than 80% were positive or very positive.

Hudson Card?

A junior transfer quarterback from Texas, Hudson Card decided to transfer after losing the starting job to former No. 1 overall recruit Quinn Ewers.

In the short time Card played at Texas, he was quite efficient. Card had a 6-1 touchdown-to-interception ratio and an overall quarterback rating of 153.

Just as Walters' poll turned out, the majority of respondents voted "very positive." Even more impressive was the fact he had nearly half the number of negative votes as Walters.

With the little fans have seen and know about Card, they remain optimistic about his play.

Unlike Card and Walters, offensive coordinator Graham Harrell has years of experience in his role.

Harrell has been the offensive coordinator of three programs since 2016: North Texas, USC and West Virginia.

West Virginia's offense ranked 57th last year, just behind Purdue. Harrell decided to take what could be considered a lateral move, choosing a Purdue program that has won more games than the Mountaineers in recent seasons.

Harrell differed from Card and Walters in the polls, with the majority of responses coming in a peg less positive.

Meet the opponent: Fresno Bulldogs

BY MARY ROSE HOKANSON Staff Reporter

No matter which way Saturday's football game goes, Purdue is guaranteed to do something for the first time: play the Fresno State Bulldogs.

The first game of its kind will open the season for both teams, kicking off at noon in Ross-Ade Stadium.

Fresno State Coach Jeff Tedford is entering his sixteenth season as a head coach and his second year with the Bulldogs.

finished hot on a 9-game winning streak to clinch the Mountain West title, finishing 10-4 overall.

The Bulldogs have reloaded with talent in returning starters as well as pulling from the transfer portal, like quarterback Mikey Keene, formerly at UCF.

Purdue is widely considered a favorite in this game, but Fresno State has won 10 or more games in four of Tedford's six seasons as head coach - the Bulldogs are no cupcake.

The implications for this matchup extend weeks down the line, as the Boilers schedule will only get tougher once Big Ten conference play begins.

The specter of Big Ten Last year, Tedford's team play emphasizes September as the most advantageous month on Purdue's schedule. The Boilers play four of five games at home, including two non-conference home contests.

Volleyball, soccer head west

BY ISRAEL SCHUMAN Sports Editor

Two of Purdue's fall sports will be away for the weekend, with the volleyball team leaving on Wednesday for Kansas and soccer going to Los Angeles and Colorado.

Soccer LA, Colorado bound

The Purdue soccer squad is going on a road trip out west that could help define its non-conference season.

The Boilermakers (2-2) are set to tussle with the No. 19 ranked USC Trojans (2-1), followed by a showdown against the Colorado Boulder Buffaloes (3-1).

The USC offense presents a multi-faceted threat that demands vigilance for Purdue's defense. Head coach Drew Roff emphasized the significance of steadfast defensive play.

"We're gonna have to defend really well individually because they have some special players," Roff said. "The challenge of playing really good teams is you make that one mistake and they'll punish you for that mistake."

After the dust settles from their clash with USC, the Boilermakers will turn their attention to the Buffaloes, a team boasting an impressive 3-1 record thus far.

In contrast to USC's strong offense is the Buffaloes' defense. Four games into the season, just a solitary goal has been given up on their campaign.

"As much as we need to defend well, if we're only defending we're gonna get worn down so we need to keep the ball a little bit," Roff said. "When we get opportunities to finish our chances we really need to dig in and be ready."

Volleyball off to Kansas for Invitational

Coming off a 1-2 weekend against stiff competition, there will be little rest for Purdue volleyball.

The team will play in the Kansas Invitational, a round-robin tournament similar to last weekend's. In attendance are No. 25 Purdue, No. 23 Kansas and No. 19 Marquette.

"Our team had better be getting geared up and ready to play," Purdue head coach Dave Shondell said on Monday.

The Boilers know what they have in their outside hitters, sophomore Eva Hudson and freshman Chloe Chicoine, as well as junior middle-blocker Raven Colvin. That trio led the team in most offensive categories last weekend.

An area of confusion for Shondell is his setter position, where freshman Taylor Anderson has inserted herself into the competition for playing time.

"Taylor Anderson, who everyone knows is a big time prospect, she just came in and played like she'd been there many, many seasons before," Shondell said. "We actually have three setters who are playing well."

QUAN NGUYEN | STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER Junior forward Gracie Dunaway shoots the ball into the goal during a scramble in the Wake Forest box.

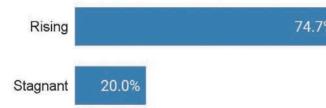

The other two Shondell mentioned are graduate student and transfer Lorrin Poulter and redshirt sophomore Sydney Yim.

Poulter started last weekend, and according to Shondell is "ahead of schedule" in her recovery from offseason surgery. Yim, Shondell said, is "chomping at the bit because she's taken a big leap also."

The focus for the Boilers this weekend will be narrowing down the wide field of talent on the roster.

"We've got a lot of good players," Shondell said. "I think I had 13 people on the floor this weekend. It's really important to get that narrowed down a little bit so they can learn to feed off each other."

What is the trajectory of the Purdue football program?
