

THE DICKSON STREET HITCHHIKER

Brandon
Allen Finds
Loophole, 4
More Years of Eligibility

Wednesday, April 1, 2015

Hitchhiking Home From West End Since 1987

Vol. 109, No. 3

Marijuana legalized on campus in honor of Wiz Khalifa at SOY

Julia "Tuppz" Trupp
House Elf

The Headliners Committee announced the lineup for the Springtime of Youth music festival Tuesday, and the university is making campus greener than ever before.

Among the variety of performers is critically acclaimed rapper Wiz Khalifa, and the university is preparing for his presence on campus.

"We were not sure about the idea of bringing marijuana to campus, but because Wiz was the big name for our festival, we thought we could make an exception in order to give him a proper welcome," UA officials said.

Marijuana and other substances have been the hit of music festivals since Kanye West hung out with Jesus pre-Woodstock.

"Colorado and Washington have welcomed the plant into their states. This festival has been in the works for ages, and I would not be surprised if it became a national event," senior Cameron Jibril said. "If we have the power to get someone as great as Khalifa here on our turf, then we should be able to provide for not just him, but the student population who brought him to us."

After hearing that Khalifa was on the setlist, students discussed the impact of marijuana legalization in Washington County.

"Fayetteville is already the hip, free-thinking city in Arkansas - we are earthy, organic and basically the greatest connection to nature," junior John Bender said. "I signed a petition of some sort in a tattoo parlor in January, so I'm pretty pleased to see it all worked out peacefully."

DineOnCampus is creating a menu specifically for the weekend of the campus-wide event, according to a university dining representative.

Along with on-campus dining, Taco Bell will be catering the event, and Eureka Pizza will take 80 cents off of their $5 carry-out pizza price. Cheetos, Baja Blasts and Bliss Cupcake Cafe will also be offered throughout the day at various booths.

"Getting $5 large cheese pizzas add up after a while, but when I found out Eureka is making their pizzas $4.20, my whole world changed," sophomore Aubrey Graham said.

Khalifa was unavailable for comment on this subject, but students on campus agreed that with the UofA exclusively legalizing marijuana in spirit of Springtime of Youth, he will be less likely to blow this joint.

Conservatives too weak, should return to feudal system

Broseph Jones
Bro-in-Chief

As I wrote in last week's column "I'm tired of these hippies hating on Monsanto," the UofA has become infested with neoliberal commie pinheads that are ruining my libertarian utopia. I have set aside my initiative to get assault weapons in the hands of every toddler in favor of opposing their most recent shenanigans. This time they're back and they're not your 50-year-old Sagittarius neighbor Brenda who works at the Yoga camp your wife goes to. No, they are among us in the form of so-called "conservatives."

I'm calling out Asa Hutchinson and Charlie Collins in particular. They have claimed that they "slashed the budget" but I still see tons that could be ripped away from the Soviet rag that is smothering American liberty. You could slash the money we spend on roads and bridges by instead contracting the Razorback basketball program as I hear they're "good on the road."

The idea of the public park is asinine and is a concept straight out of the USSR. We should convert these valuable real estate opportunities into fracking zones and keg storage for Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

On that note, I think we should take a look back on the true founding fathers of Western philosophy: feudal lords. There has not been a better time for freedom and democracy than the Middle Ages. Everyone could match up with the cool leaders - Bo Renner - and they got their own castle and stuff. Really it isn't much different from the Greek system. I bet they had some real ragers.

Everyone focused on agriculture so my roommate could expand his grow operation and sell the rest to foreign markets, like NWACC. From what I hear everybody really loved Jesus, especially the Spanish.

"Yeah man, they, like, were devoted," Spanish minor Rudy Sanders said.

They also had my ideal economy called "trade and barter." My brothers already practice this on a daily basis. Sometimes I'll trade a six-pack so I can borrow Aaron's Call of Duty. There are no downsides.

This has lead me and my brothers in ASG to propose an amendment that would reinstate a governing body based on the rule of Richard III. I also predict Brandon Allen as the top prospect for the position as lord. I'm sure he won't disappoint.

Bielema's Burgers will replace Slim Chickens on campus

Drew Haverford
Duke Silver
Pro Hot Takers

Bielema's Burgers is set to replace Slim Chickens on campus for the 2015 fall semester, UA officials announced April 1.

The announcement should come as no surprise, as Bret Bielema has often expressed interest in branching out beyond football and has recently tweeted multiple pictures of his meals from home.

The opening of Bielema's Burgers in Founders Hall will be the first of several locations to come to the Fayetteville and Rogers area in the future.

"I've always wanted to run my own restaurant," Bielema said. "Now I finally get to, and I'm so excited to bring the food I make and take pictures of at home to campus."

The menu features several burger options and combos, including the TE Throwdown Burger and BA's Rollout Combo.

The Windbreaker, a champagne margarita and the most popular beverage, is exclusive to Bielema's Burgers and is an option for those 21 and over with a valid ID. Coke products will also be available.

"We've got to get Coke back on campus, man, and I'm sure our older Razorbacks will love the Windbreaker," Bielema said. "It comes in a collectible cup that's shaped like The Golden Boot."

Students are a tad upset to see one of Arkansas' home-grown restaurants go, but are also excited about the addition of a new and intriguing option on campus.

"I'm really going to miss getting out of class and heading to Slim's for a Chick's Plate for lunch," sophomore chemical engineering major Shelby Baughn said. "But I'm really excited to try the BERT, though."

The BERT, the feature item on the menu, is a sandwich made of a whopping 4.25-pound beef patty, eggs, relish and tomato, but that's not the best part, according to Bielema.

"It's all served on Texas toast," Bielema said as he threw the Horns Down sign. "We went in this direction to commemorate how we completely toasted Texas in the Texas Bowl."

Collins' Curly Fries are the feature side item, and as curly and unpredictable as the running back's routes themselves.

Other items on the menu include Bret and Jen's homemade Cod recipe that comes seasoned with garlic, sea salt and lemon. You can also get his special guacamole as a side.

The grand opening of Bielema's Burgers on campus will correlate with the beginning of Fall Camp in early August.

Every combo special will be available for Meal Trade.

Illustration by Broseph Jones

Concept logo for Bielema's Burgers, set to open at the beginning of fall camp.

NEWS

Coke Ring Discovered

Officials uncover underground coke ring using Club Red as business front.

FEATURES

5-year-old Elected New Chancellor

Chancellor Gearhart's granddaughter decided she didn't want to spend time with him, goes into office.

SPORTS

Van Horn Offers T-Ball Pitcher

Van Horn goes all out in attempt to cure pitching struggles.

Underground Coke Ring Discovered on Campus

M. Nightingale
Crime/Noir Reporter, Part-time Jazz Singer

University officials uncovered an underground Coca-Cola ring Tuesday night beneath Pomfret Hall.

"It appears the operation was active for years," Captain Gary Crain said. "Most likely ever since Pepsi came to campus."

When asked how they could have missed this, Crain said that the operation was likely able to carry on in effortless secrecy behind the mask of actual drug operations often occurring in Pomfret Hall.

Perpetrators behind the operation have yet to be found, although many believe they were known as the Guy Fox gang, made up of mostly southerners fond of the iconic beverage.

The UAPD narcotics team and Head Detective Henrietta Granger believe the gang used tunnels beneath the university to transport kegs of Coca-Cola to numerous locations on campus.

"Club Red seems to have been the main front for the undercover ring," Granger said.

Officials arrested a Club Red employee late Tuesday after the K9 unit smelled a sweet, sugary smell on the fingertips of the employee, differing from the stale taste of Pepsi. Granger arrested the employee and was told to use any force necessary to uncover the truth.

The employee, who said they wish to remain anonymous, said that they were tortured with Pepsi products, forced to drink at least a thousand bottles until they cracked.

The employee told Granger that students could come to the counter and ask where they could "open happiness," then the employee would lift a tile at their feet, revealing a secret compartment of Coke products with fake Pepsi labels. In this way, students could appear to be enjoying Pepsi products.

The employee said the undercover Coke ring brought in millions of dollars. Coke products sold for $8 a bottle.

"Students' love for Coke is inelastic," said the employee, a marketing student.

The idea for an underground Coke ring supposedly came to group leaders in a business class shortly after the sweet substance was pulled from university shelves. Students saw a demand and exploited it.

"That's exactly what we're taught at Walton," the student said. "I feel like our professors would be proud of our ingenuity."

YikYak users speculated that the gang planned to place hundreds of kegs attached to dynamite beneath Old Main, blowing up the Mother of Mothers Nov. 5 in protest of the presence of Pepsi on campus.

"It's surprising no one caught on to this before," a regular Club Red customer said. "No one could possibly look that happy drinking Pepsi products."

Follow Us on Social Media:

 friendster®

@BRINGBACK-
JOHNLSMITH

 myspace

@CREEDMUSICLIVE

CHECK OUT OUR
HOT NEW ALBUM!

HOTTAKES4EVER@YAHOO.COM.

WE'LL SEND YOU A LINK TO OUR GEOCITIES PAGE.