Monumental HISTORY IN OUR BACKYARD!

Did you know there are over 500 recorded historic cemeteries in Anne Arundel County, Maryland, some dating as far back as the 1600s? Perhaps you have one on your property, or have seen one in your neighborhood- and wondered. Many are unmarked, remembered only through local lore, while others hide in dense overgrowth, awaiting rediscovery.

Information Source - "A Resource Guide to Historic Cemeteries in Anne Arundel County"

Anne Arundel County is home to many different kinds of burial grounds, such as church graveyards of different faiths, institutional cemeteries, family cemeteries, and pre-Civil War burials of enslaved people. The Great Pumpkins On Display In Annapolis

By Holly Basta

The four pumpkins each weighing well over 1,000 pounds, were trucked in from Altoona, Pennsylvania. Grown on pallets, the pumpkins lay flat on one side so that they can be picked up by a forklift. Multiple artists carved the Great Annapolis Pumpkins for spectators strolling through four locations throughout the downtown area.

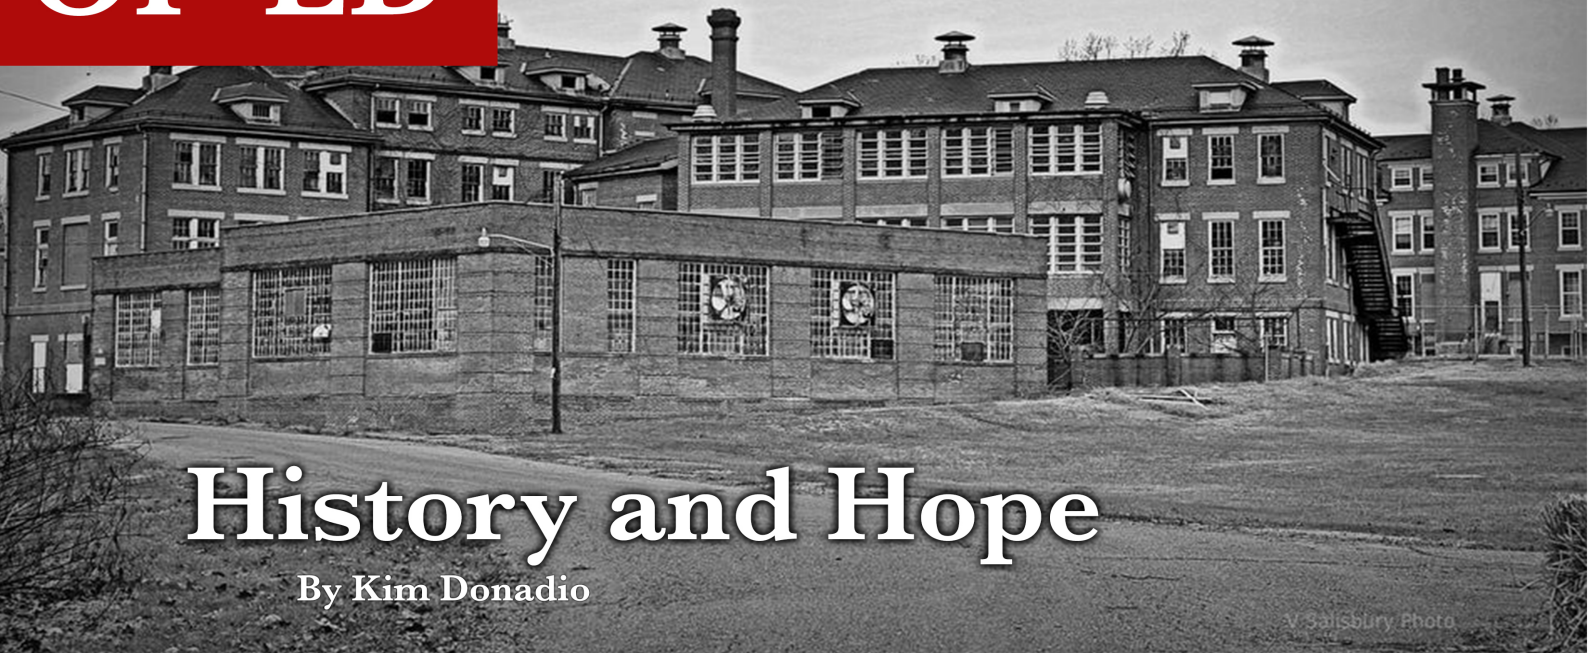

We spotted artists from Gallery 57 West using hand tools to create this one of a kind design depicting King Kong climbing the St. Mary's bell tower. It's on display in front of the Visitor's Center, along with three other custom designed carves. Was that a chainsaw at Market Space ?

The decorated scenes will be lit at nightfall and remain on display for several days (weather permitting). If your photo of one of the Great Annapolis Pumpkins is chosen, you may win a gift card to a local business.

The fun Fall scenery was made possible by Visit Annapolis & Anne Arundel County.

History and Hope

CROWNSVILLE HOSPITAL

This facility was once a beautiful 556-acre estate bought by the State of Maryland and was the first African American mental hospital in America. The hospital was thought to be a state-of-the-art establishment and making history as the premise behind its methodologies were to help the patients regain a sense of self-sufficiency by having the patients “run” the facility.

Oh yes, the patients were left to take the burden of all hard labor and tending the fields for their own food and clothing. All men, women and children were forced to complete strenuous daily living chores without adequate care and support. But worst of all, the “healthcare” facility became a true to life, slaughterhouse of humans (something you would now see on television, similar to the movie, “Saw”, but on a macro-level impacting any person that did not fit the society “norm”. This “torture and death farm” became the dumping ground for Maryland’s minorities, mentally ill persons, criminals (even for minor infractions) and other sick individuals to be forgotten; however not before they were tortured like lab rats and left to die.

The State of Maryland still owns the land, but ironically only uses it to provide space for a few non-profit organizations. There does not appear to be any effort by the State of Maryland to commemorate this site as a National Cemetery or museum to formally recognize the thousands of lives lost in vain. The hope is the location will become a National Landmark and a recognized historical site where all proceeds go directly to the quality care of ALL mental health patients and awareness campaigns.

What is it?

Candy Corn or Chicken of the Woods?

Laetiporus is a genus of edible mushrooms found throughout much of the world. Some species, especially Laetiporus sulphureus, are commonly known as sulphur shelf, chicken of the woods, the chicken mushroom, or the chicken fungus because it is often described as tasting like and having a texture similar to that of chicken meat.

PARANORMAL
INVESTIGATORS

Pasadena Paranormal started twenty five years ago when friends Jared Tracey and Brent Smith started focusing on the supernatural. They would travel throughout the area in hopes of communicating with the dead. Jared said, “I know which locations are best based on a gut feeling. It’s never let me down.”

The group travels all over the Country visiting Civil War sites, Mental Institutions and Old Buildings. Jared claims the most memorable event was in Baltimore at the home of the Von Paris Moving Company. “This place was built in 1810,” Jared said. “Years later the building was used for a dental office, but they never went to the second or third floor, because of the ghosts,” he continued. Jared and his team decided to investigate. What happened next freaked him out.

One night the team decided to investigate the Von Paris House. I’m walking around asking this ghost to come out,” Jared said. “When all of the sudden I felt like someone ran up behind me, breathing heavy and almost pulled my shirt off...It took me 15 minutes to calm down!”

The group is followed like a popular rock band. They have a YouTube channel where you can find all their haunting videos. Just follow the QR code in this story for more!
