Will water be pumped, parked and sold?

A number of Tulare County farmers and water managers fear Angiola Water District, which is controlled by majority landowner John Vidovich, plans to pump massive amounts of groundwater out of Tulare into a proposed reservoir, then move it through the California Aqueduct to Semitropic Water District and eventually sell it to southern California in dry years.