THE BOULDERS TRAIL MAP

Trail Description:

Heart Healthy Trail: 0.5 miles, roundtrip

Green Trail: 1.4 miles, roundtrip

Difficulty: Easy (gentle grades, smooth footing)

Blue Trail: 2.8 miles, roundtrip Red Trail: 2.4 miles, roundtrip

Difficulty: Moderate (uneven footing, elevation changes)

From the southern trailhead on Routes 8/9, the Blue Trail to the boulder ridge is a hike of about 45 minutes. That trail provides a gradual ascent to the 1,395-foot high ridge. From that point visitors, after the leaf-fall, can make out the Taconic Range to the west. The northern trailhead on Gulf Road gives access to an easy walk on the Heart Healthy Trail or an extended hike on the Green and Red Trails.

Natural History:

The Boulders' weathered chunks of gray rock are a handy rest stop after a moderate climb. The bedrock of this property is primarily pelitic rock, a metamorphosed fine-grained sedimentary rock. The large outcrops on the boulders ridge show part of a concentric arcing called a "lunate fracture." These form from an interaction between ice, pressure, and a very hard rock like the quartzite found here. Deer and barred owls are among many animal species here; red trillium and pink lady-slippers show up in spring among many other ephemeral wildflowers.
