

In an age when technology replaces human connection— NVRH doctors keep it real.

NATIONAL DOCTORS'
DAY | MARCH 30

First celebrated in 1933 and officially recognized by President George H.W. Bush in 1990, Doctors' Day commemorates the first use of general anesthesia in surgery by Dr. Crawford W. Long in 1842, symbolizing the progress and dedication that define the medical profession.

NVRH honors our Physicians on National Doctors' Day

On National Doctors' Day and throughout the year, we are grateful for our physicians. With skill and thoughtfulness, listening and connecting, they treat the folks of our rural communities with respect and kindness, providing high-quality care that we all deserve—close to home.

NVRH physicians go beyond treating illness to earn patient trust, guide our teams, and stay the course when stakes are high. Their work reflects both excellence in medicine and the humanity required to practice it well. In a day and age, when a personal connection may be lost to technology, physicians keep it real.

National Doctors' Day is a formal chance to say thank you in a way that feels credible and personal.

Thank you.
