Florida bars reopening?

Pastor Joanie Holden:

I've learned to be creative

Editors note: Every one of us has had our life interrupted by the coronavirus pandemic, some more than others. We asked our staff to tell us about their lives being interrupted, in ways large and small, and how they handled their situations, how it has changed them.

For the Rev. Joanie Holden, pastor of St. Timothy Lutheran Church in Crystal River, that means getting an older congregation to give up old, familiar ways and adapt to new ones, including technology — and they have.

“We're never, ever done ministry before on a website,” she said. “When churches had to halt their in-person meetings, Holden said her staff and congregation got a crash course in technology in just a few months. ‘We didn’t have any form of technology to use, we were recording our services on Thursdays to go live for the weekend, and with my iPhone — that’s all she said. ‘That congregation thought it was great.’

For members who didn’t have a computer but had a CD player, they recorded their services on CDs.

Florida bars reopening? Our story explained...
The local church has purchased a camera and will use it to live-stream communion. Since then, the church has been distributing communion to people who don’t come into church if you’re not feeling well. “Thank you!” Holden said. “I tell them, ‘Just don’t be contagious.’” They sit 6 feet apart, no kneeling at the rail. No common cup. Instead, people are served individual communion wafers and an individual cup of wine. “You can still have communion,” she said. “You don’t have to compromise.”

She also learned about the risk of going to a restaurant or shopping in a large “thank you.”

“Please, if you have a high-risk activity on a regular basis, think about your own spiritual batteries,” she said. “These things are really important if you show up at church. I’ve never been refusen from coming to church for 30 minutes for two weeks following his high-risk activity.”

Assistance with utility payments available

Citrus County Housing Services continues to assist low-income residents with their utility bill payments. The Low Income Energy Assistance Program (LIEAP) helps low-income families with heating and cooling costs. LIEAP is funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services through the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity, and has been established to help qualifying low-income households and renters pay a portion of their monthly heating costs. LIEAP is not designed to pay a household's total energy costs, but it provides supplemental assistance. On-Line applications for LIEAP are accepted by appointment only due to the demand for assistance.

For more information, call 352-927-7520 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Household hazardous waste disposal set Oct. 3

Citrus County Landfill’s Household Hazardous Waste (HHW) Disposal Program will be closed on Sept. 17 and 24, 2020, and Oct. 3, 2020. The next regularly scheduled HHW disposal day will be on Friday, Oct. 23 W. Gulf-to-Lake Highway.

Residents who are able to take HHW items to one of the following sites on Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday, are encouraged to do so. The saturation of the landfill from the HHW program, other than being open on a week-end for nodes who work during the week, is unable to process the waste.

Three household hazardous waste disposal points will be available:

- 2415 N. Florida Ave., Hernando (Located next to the Men’s Sheds)
- 2000 W. Alabama Ave., Inverness
- 3600 W. Sovereign Path, Lecanto

Johnson claims FedEx Cup

Winds Tour Championship by three shots

Drew Ferguson / AP golf writer

ATLANTA — Dustin Johnson only looks like he plays without a pulse. Breathe in, sit on your haunches and watch as he walked the fairways of East Lake Golf Club on Sunday because it meant so much to him.

The $11 million prize for winning the FedEx Cup? That would get anyone’s attention. Winning a tournament, especially someone who thought he was rich when Johnson cashed his first pay check as a PGA Tour rookie for $113,571?

But there was more.

“The prestige, for sure,” Johnson said after delivering a key putt and neatly playing the stretch for a 2-under 68 and a three-shot victory in the Tour Championship. “The prestige meant so much to him.

“It’s a very tough trophy to win,” Johnson said. “I controlled my own destiny, but I still had to go out and play well. I had a lot of great players right behind me. It got close at the end. I knew it was going to come down to the stretch and I’ve got to hit some golf shots.”

Now more than three inches taller and 100 pounds heavier than when he was last in a PGA Tour event four years ago, there was no doubt about that. Johnson started the day 15 shots behind, but he put them catch them, and his only birdie on the final hole gave him his third victory since June and the 23rd of his PGA Tour career.

“I’m a bit emotional over the water on the par-3 13th, he said. “It’s a tough golf course. No lead is going to come down the stretch and I’d have to hit some golf shots.”

He won two of the three FedEx Cup postseason events and lost in a playoff to a 65-foot putt in the other. All came in a playoff situation, and even with a five-shot lead, it was never easy.

It was a 23rd victory for a player who in 2016 was the top-ranked player in the world and a three-shot Tour Championship.

And a three-shot victory in the Tour Championship.

“A year ago I didn’t think I’d be here,” Johnson said. “I controlled my own destiny, but I still had to go out and play well. I had a lot of great players right behind me.’ It got close at the end. I knew it was going to come down to the stretch and I’ve got to hit some golf shots.”

Lightning romp to early series lead

Tampa Bay’s Brayden Point (32) scores on New York Islanders goalie Thomas Greiss (31) during the first period of Game 1 of the NHL Eastern Conference final, Monday in Edmonton, Alberta.

How ironic it was not to have a crowd. ... I’m super passionate. This is my job. This is what I wake up to do. This is the game I do. 365 days of the year,” said Williams, who turns 39 in less than a week. “This is the fire and that passion,” she continued. “This is my job. This is what I wake up to do. 365 days of the year.”

And if you don’t get your chances (convert) my chances,” Sakkari said. “I kind of like, not choked, but didn’t convert my chances,” Sakkari said. “I kind of like, not choked, but didn’t convert my chances.”

“I have to be deadly honest: I won’t be brave enough in the third set. I kind of like, not choked, but didn’t convert my chances,” Sakkari said. “I kind of like, not choked, but didn’t convert my chances.”

Williams provided her own encouragement in the third set, which Sakkari missed.

Sakkari her fifth set point, then pushed a forehand out. Williams scrambled to extend a deficit a point from growing to 3-1 in the third set, which Sakkari missed.

But as is so often the case, when the match ended, after Williams was two points from victory, none was bigger than the 20-foot par three shot following a near week-long break.

WASHINGTON—For one night in this duel of a season for Washing- ton, the defending World Series champion Nationals looked like themselves — getting a solid start from Max Scherzer, timely hitting and strong defense.

That day it did with recently signed All-Star Breakout Reliever Alex Colome, a career-high 12 strikeouts for a career-high 8 innings, allowing only 1 run and 3 hits, as the Nationals beat the AL East-leading New York Yankees 3-1, bringing Washington back to within 1/2 game of the Yankees in the division.

Scherzer, who struck out Arozarena for his 2nd strikeout of the game, allowed only 1 run on 3 hits, while walking 0 in his second straight start against the Cleveland Indians.
Another flu season just around the corner

When things seem to be going well, we don't think about how much we take for granted — especially now, with our community still in the grip of the COVID-19 pandemic and flu season on our doorstep. It is one thing that should be near and dear to everyone's list of get-a-shot priorities.

Citrus County's record for recent deaths getting flu shots is not great — around 47% — but slightly better than Florida's 35% rate, according to the Florida Department of Health. No flu season comes with a guarantee, though, and the current one may not be any different. Flu season is still just around the corner.

We've been here before with the minimum wage
dollar.

Fifteen dollars may seem a lot of money, but if you're for- getting that other wage earners — even experienced workers — make less than that and that minimum wage ultimately goes up along with inflation, which will be at a high level at that point, then much of that worker's benefits will be taken away.

Flu shots — which, by the way, are available now. According to a study published through the National Institute of Health, the 2017-18 flu season had over 80,000 hospitalizations and 1.8 million emergency room visits, including 23,000 hospitalizations and 480 deaths among children.

The Florida Department of Health urges getting your flu vaccine now. Many people, a little shop, everyone's COVID-19 vaccine — it can keep you from getting sick with flu. It can reduce the risk of flu-associated hospitalizations for children, working-age adults, and older adults.

The CDC and evidence-based studies show the ben- efits of getting a flu vaccine. It can keep you from getting sick with flu. It can reduce the risk of flu-associated hospitalizations for children, working-age adults, and older adults.

It's an important prevention tool for people with chronic health conditions, especially Residents of Citrus County.

It protects women during and after pregnancy. It can be reassuring in these times.

Flu vaccination has been shown to reduce serious illness in people who get vaccinated but still get sick. Getting vaccinated your flu shot as soon as possible.

The last thing anyone needs to worry about is dealing with illness and getting protected quickly. Don't forget that 2012 H1N1 flu is still circulating today. The vast majority of flu shots is first available.

In Citrus County, many physicians, hospitals, and health cen- ters are offering flu vaccinations.

Watch for an announcement of when the Health Department will be giving flu vaccines for the mass immunization events.

If you are unsure about getting a flu shot, talk to your physician. But do it sooner rather than later as it will be too late to catch up then.

We've been here before with the minimum wage.

We've been here before with the minimum wage.

Support minimum wage

I read with interest the editorial discussing the dis- cussion about the amendment that would raise the minimum wage, and I found it was all about the economic ef- fects. Higher human costs and after pregnancy.

I support the minimum wage-ears but not to choose:

No person can maximize the American

Dream on the minimum wage.

Busy Labor on campaign trail

Harris meets Blake family; Trump steps up

President Biden met with the family of a Wisconsin man shot by police last month. Joe Biden joined by phone. Joe Biden met with the family last week in Milwaukee before visiting Kenosha, the city where police shot Jacob Blake.

The meeting kicked off a packed day of Labor Day campaign events, with Harris scheduled to meet with IBEW union workers and Black business owners in Milwaukee, while Vice President Mike Pence, also sent to Wisconsin, flew into La Crosse. Trump attacked Biden as a leader incapable of handling the coronavirus and the economy as he headed to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, for strengthening unions.

The trial was widely criticized for its rushed proceedings and lack of transparency, with many noting that no one, including rights groups and journalists, had the opportunity to visit the defendant or to examine the evidence against him.

The court ordered a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison for five, with one defendant given 10 years. The case against the other seven was dropped.

CANCER & BLOOD DISEASE

The other side of COVID-19

Everyone is aware of the unprecedented crisis of the COVID-19 virus in the U.S. Wearing masks, social distancing, and much other new norms have affected day-to-day life for all of us. Lots of people are sick of the virus and are avoiding visits to doctors due to fear. Essential tests like mammograms and colonoscopies are delayed. Some doctors fear the pandemic, elective surgeries are canceled. Some patients prefer to avoid so-called “elective” testing.

The CDC-recommended precautions in our county follow these early steps to breakthroughs — good nutrition, adequate exercise and a daily supplement.

Nutrient deficiencies are a common cause of diseases (accounting for about 1/6th of all cancers) with relatively high cancer deaths will occur over the next decade as a result of missed screenings, delays in diagnosis and treatments in oncology care caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. As director of NCI, I understand that the public is concerned about the potential impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic on and delivered or modified treatments for cancer incidence and mortality. That’s why we’re seeing Dr. Deepak Nijhawan’s closing crisis of the COVID-19 pandemic.

As everyone understands, the earlier we diagnose cancer, the more likely it is to cure. What can an individual do to avoid this scenario? Lots of patients avoid the visits to their physicians due to the fear of coronavirus.

What are some ways to deal with this epidemic? I strongly recommend you consider the CDC-recommended precautions to avoid spread of the virus if you have an issue. You may discuss it with your physician.

So you know: The information contained in the Health & Life section is not intended to cover all possible directions, precautions, warnings, drug interactions, allergic reactions or adverse effects and is not intended to replace consultation with a physician.

Diabetes: How to approach healthy diet while living with disease

MetroCreative

Diabetes affects hundreds of millions of people across the globe, and more and more people are being diagnosed with this often preventable disease every year. According to the World Health Organization, 387 million people around the globe were living with diabetes in 2019. In 2020, the International Diabetes Federation estimated that 463 million adults between the ages of 20 and 79 were living with diabetes.

Perhaps even more troubling is the NIDDK reports that eating a variety of healthy foods from all food groups is essential for people with diabetes.

Summer, fall in Florida mean garden-fresh fruits, vegetables for better diet

Family Features

There are a few better tips to keep in mind when with healthy foods and products so easily accessible, as we move through the pandemic. Simply incorporate healthy habits into your daily routines — good nutrition, adequate exercise and a daily supplement. The Dietary Guidelines for Americans describe a healthful diet as one that emphasizes fruits, vegetables, lean meats, poultry, fish, beans, eggs, nuts, whole grains and low-fat or no-fat milk products. It should be low in added fats, sodium, cholesterol, salt and added sugar.

Warm weather makes fresh produce more easily accessible. Eat more fruits and vegetables by setting freshly washed and prepared produce on the kitchen counter or at eye level in the fridge. At every meal, make sure half your plate is made up of fruit and vegetable servings.

Weekend breakfasts can help buffer the negative effects of the week. Improving your diet, exercising regularly, taking a daily supplement and getting enough restorative sleep are all important steps to overall wellness. Work to incorporate each step into your daily routine until your reach your goal of good health, and find more health-conscious tips at eLivingToday.com.

Suicide and social distancing: Pandemic adds to problem

Suicide is a significant issue across the globe. According to the SAVE (Suicide Awareness Voices of Education) nonprofit, nearly 200,000 people die by suicide across the globe each year, and suicide is the second leading cause of death in the world for people between the ages of 15 and 26.

The global pandemic that resulted from the outbreak of the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) in the winter of 2019-20 led many governments to encourage their citizens to isolate to prevent the spread of the virus. While such restrictions were necessary, a study published in the medical journal JAMA Psychiatry in April 2020 noted that the secondary consequences of social distancing may include an increased risk of suicide.

The researchers behind the study noted that social connections play a key role in suicide prevention, which is why social distancing concerns so many mental health professionals. However, the researchers also emphasized that social distancing requires physical space between people, not social distance.

By placing six feet apart and wearing masks when around friends and loved ones, individuals at risk for suicide can maintain the social connections that are so vital to their mental health. SAVE notes that a lack of social support and a sense of isolation are risk factors for suicide. But other factors also can increase suicide risk, and learning to recognize those risks can be especially important at a time when social distancing may be keeping more people in isolation. SAVE notes that risk factors do not cause or predict suicide. However, the presence of the following factors can increase the likelihood a person will consider, attempt, or die by suicide:

- Mental disorders, particularly mood disorders, schizophrenia, major physical or chronic illnesses
- Hopelessness
- Impulsive and/or aggressive tendencies
- History of suicide or suicide attempts
- Family history of suicide
- Recent job or financial loss
- Recent loss of relationship
- Easy access to lethal means
- Local clusters of suicides
- R PHYSICAL HEALTH
- Alcohol associated with seeking help
- Lack of health care
- Emotional and mental health and substance abuse treatment
- Cultural and religious beliefs
- ”Suicide is a noble resolution, a personal dilemma.”
- Exposure to others who have died by suicide (in real life or via the media and internet)
