A single-vehicle crash Wednesday night in southern Citrus County killed a young man, a teenager and severely injured two other youths.

Franklin Delano Cooper, an Inverness 18-year-old, was pronounced dead at the scene on East Stage Coach Trail, west of the intersection with Brittle Road, according to a Florida Highway Patrol report.

Leilani Ho'oponoaikaine Anderson, a 17-year-old from Hudson, died at Ocala Regional Medical Center, FHP's report shows.

According to a family member, Anderson moved to and lived in Homosassa, and did not have an opportunity to update the address change on her ID card, which FHP spokesman Sgt. Steve Gaskins said troopers collected from Anderson.

Dylan Skyther Pringle, 17, and 14-year-old Kerrign Savage, both of Inverness, were hospitalized at UF Health Shands Hospital with critical and serious injuries, respectively.

Cooper, Anderson, Pringle and Savage are students of the Citrus County School District, district spokeswoman Lindsay Blair said.

Deputy finds missing woman

A week-and-half of exhaustive searches, including the use of K9s, air support and volunteer search parties, Diane Mcinnis was found alive in the early morning hours of April 16, according to a sheriff's office news release.

Diane Mcinnis

While performing a routine traffic stop in front of the Homosassa Walmart, Sgt. Craig Callahan was approached by two Walmart employees who described hearing strange noises coming from the wooded area behind the store.

After clearing his stop, Sgt. Callahan began inspecting the area when he heard the faint sounds of a woman's voice. Callahan found Mcinnis in a 5-foot ravine, and immediately came to her aid while calling for emergency medical services. EMS evaluated Mcinnis on scene, and she was later transported to a local medical facility.

Mcinnis was reported missing to the Citrus County Sheriff's Office on April 7, after last being seen at approximately 10 p.m. April 6 at her residence.

Thousands show up for free food

MATTHEW BECK/Chronicle

Volunteers with The New Church Without Walls, The United Way of Citrus County and other organizations showed up in force Thursday morning at the Citrus County Fairgrounds to aid in facilitating a food giveaway to those needing the assistance. While the food-assistance program began handing out food around 11 a.m. some started to show up at the Fairgrounds by 7 a.m., according to Pastor Doug Alexander.

Many of those receiving items at the food giveaway paused to personally thank Pastor Doug Alexander and others Thursday morning in Inverness.

Some of the hundreds of motorists wait in line Thursday morning along South Airport Road in Inverness as they wait for food to be loaded into their vehicles. A line of cars and trucks made its way from U.S. 41 south on Airport Road parallel to the Inverness Airport and into the back entrance of the Citrus County Speedway. From there it looped around in a field by the Livestock Complex at the Fairgrounds and back onto Airport Road into the line pictured above.

The Rev. Doug Alexander is used to feeding big crowds of people, but even he was amazed at the numbers who showed up at the county fairgrounds Thursday for a drive-thru food giveaway.

"This is the biggest one we've ever had," he said.

The food giveaway was a combined effort between the New Church Without Walls, the Citrus County Community Food Bank, We Care, FarmShare, M&B Dairy, Citrus United Way, Dixie Hollins, who provided transportation, and Rep. Ralph Massullo, who donated two months of his legislative salary to help feed Citrus County people in need.

Even though the event was scheduled for 11:30 a.m., Alexander said cars started lining up before 7 a.m.

By 11 a.m., the line of cars on South Airport Road snaked around to the back entrance to the speedway, turned into a field near the livestock pavilion and then back onto South Airport Road and finally into more snaking queues in the fairgrounds parking lot where teams of volunteers loaded

Citrus County's high schools shined bright Thursday night to recognize their graduating classes of 2020 and those fighting on the front lines against COVID-19.

Starting at 8:20 p.m. — or 20:20 in military time — Citrus, Lecanto and Crystal River high schools lit each of their outdoor sports fields for 20 minutes, in tribute of school and community sacrifices made amid the pandemic.

Citrus County School District spokeswoman Lindsay Blair said the schools' athletic directors learned of the idea through the "Be the Light" campaign movement schools are participating in nationwide.

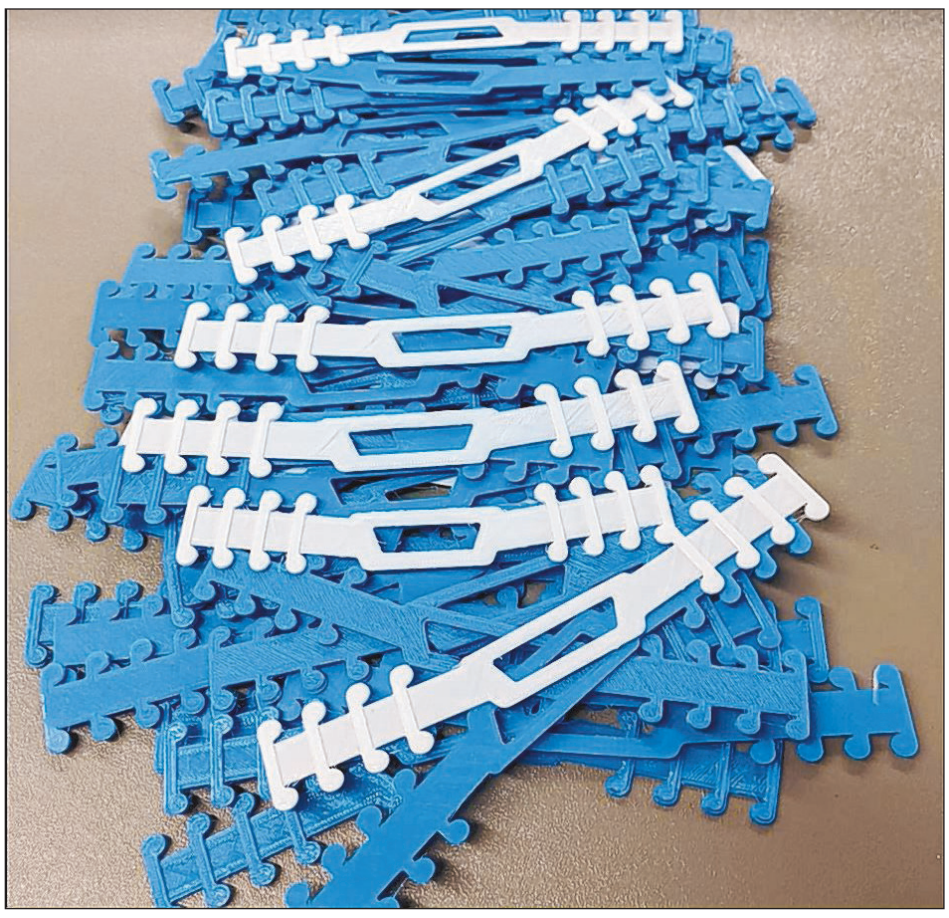

"To honor our seniors, whose senior year has been interrupted," Blair said. "We're thinking of them; they're a strong group and that we'll get through this together."

In addition to the field at the football stadium, the schools also illuminated the baseball and softball fields along with the tennis courts.

Seven Rivers Christian School, in partnership with Seven Rivers Presbyterian Church, has used its 3D printers to create mask straps — in its school colors — for medical workers at area hospitals.

Seven Rivers revs up 3D printers

Jeff Bryan
News editor

Early last week, Blair Commons was scouring Facebook to pass the time when he stumbled upon a post about a Boy Scout in Canada who had printed a number of 3D ear-saver mask straps for health workers in his home country.

Those items were well received, Commons said. The links for the designs, or blueprints, he added, were shared tens of thousands of times.

"I started reading about it," said Commons, the director of business operations for Seven Rivers Presbyterian Church in Lecanto, noting he "forwarded the link" to a friend in church who is on the Robotics Team at Seven Rivers Christian School.

That friend just happened to be Mike Poloske, whose son was on the Robotics Team at Seven Rivers Christian School before going to UF. Soon, Commons received an email, asking, "What do you want me to do with these straps I started printing?"

So Commons reached out to the CEOs of both Bayfront Seven Rivers and Citrus Memorial Hospitals, Linda Stockton and Ginger Carrol, respectively. Both agreed the items could be useful for staff. One staff member at Bayfront told Commons that a lot of the straps on homemade masks aren't long enough, because there is a shortage of elastic.

"It makes it pull even harder on the ear, because they don't have enough elastic to make all these masks," Commons explained.

By Tuesday afternoon, Commons made a second delivery of 100 straps to Citrus Memorial with a third bundle of the items set to go to Oak Hill Hospital in nearby Hernando County. Commons gave the credit for the straps to those with the knowledge of how 3D printers work, such as Poloske and Georgia Jekabsons, the school's robotics instructor.

"We have multiple 3D printers going by people involved with robotics program here at Seven Rivers," Commons said.

Jekabsons explained both printers are using 12-inch-by-12-inch plates, which allows her and Poloske to print up to eight straps at a time. Jekabsons uses a Creality CR10 printer while Poloske has a Prusa I3 MK3S printer.

"The speed of each machine is a little different," she said, noting the print time ranges from 2 1/2 to 4 hours. "We both had our printers running around the clock over four to five days."

Now that the batch of straps has been produced, the focus has shifted to face shields, which the first batch was delivered to Stockton at Bayfront Seven Rivers, Commons said.

Man accused of setting person ablaze arrested

HASTINGS — A man accused of setting a person on fire during a dispute over money has been arrested, sheriff's officials in Florida said.

Brian Terrance Connor, 35, was arrested Wednesday and charged with attempted first-degree murder, arson and burglary for the incident that happened on Saturday, according to the St. Johns County Sheriff's Office. Bond was set at $250,000.

The victim was taken to a hospital burn unit in Gainesville, and remains in critical condition, The Florida Times-Union reported. Sheriff's officials have not released the person's name, age or gender.

The incident happened at an apartment complex, where Connor is accused of entering a residence and starting an argument, investigators said.

Investigators said Connor doused the victim with a flammable liquid, which he then set on fire before fleeing in a vehicle. The victim went to another apartment, still on fire, and someone there helped extinguish the flames.

The report didn't say what led investigators to Connor.

A lawyer for Conner was not listed on jail records.

Coast Guard rescues man in incident off Florida coast

TAMPA — The U.S. Coast Guard rescued a crew member who had fallen Wednesday and was in need of medical care off of Florida's west coast.

Coast Guard officials said in an email that a helicopter crew responded to the site some 13 miles (21 kilometers) from Fort de Soto.

The helicopter crew transported the man back to shore, where he was taken to Tampa General Hospital.

"In these unprecedented and uncertain times the Coast Guard is still ready to respond to those in need," said Lt. Bradley Davis, who assisted in the rescue.

Solar plant moves closer to reality

BUSTER THOMPSON
Staff writer

A roughly 550-acre solar farm is one step closer to getting constructed amongst the limestone mines north of Crystal River.

Members of the Citrus County Planning and Development Commission (PDC) Thursday voted 5-0 to recommend county commissioners approve Pattern Development's conditional-use request for its Crystal River Solar 2 plant.

This is one of two $150-million solar-panel fields the San Fransisco-based company is trying to build on leased land that makes up the LafargeHolcim Crystal River Quarry, which neighbors Duke Energy's Crystal River Energy Complex.

Once Pattern's 35-year lease ends with the quarry, it will decommission its solar complex.

Pattern proposed an original design of Crystal River Solar 2 to the PDC in August, but made changes to its plans since then for approval.

Jenn Ritchey, Pattern's senior manager of business development, told PDC members changes include: an additional 30 acres of solar panels; a shorter and more direct access road from U.S. 19; and a electric transmission line that runs south to a nearby substation and the grid.

Ritchey said construction will start near the end of 2020 on the 74.9-megawat plant, which can generate power for 15,000 area homes.

PDC Second Vice Chair David Bramblett, echoed by his colleagues on the dais, told Ritchey he was happy Pattern decided not to build its cable lines north and across the Withlacoochee River.

"I agree," PDC Chair Joel Brender said, "there's some real positive changes."

Joanna Coutu, director of the county's land development division, said staff is OK moving Pattern's solar project forward on conditions it meets stormwater requirements and that panel installations don't impact animal habitats.

Coutu said conditional use would also become void if county commissioners turn down a related land-use-change request.

Ritchey said Pattern is already obtaining the other necessary permits from state and federal engineering, wildlife and transportation agencies.

Bramblett asked Ritchey if Pattern came to a solution with the neighboring Crystal River Quarries, Inc., which shared concerns about active mining and explosions affecting solar panels.

Ritchey said those concerns are tied to Pattern's second solar plant to the south of Crystal River Solar 2, and a settlement has been reached with Crystal River Quarries to address those worries.

Also on the PDC's agenda Thursday:

Citrus County Commissioner Jeff Kinnard and his wife's hearing Thursday for a variance was moved to May 21, PDC members approved.

In their application, the Kinnards are seeking the PDC to allow them to build their home in Dixie Shores near Crystal River 22 feet away from Dixie Bay, and not the 50 feet required by the county.

Rob Batsel Jr., an attorney for the Kinnards, told the PDC Thursday he and his staff are preparing a revised application to address staff's issues.

County staff opposes the variance because it doesn't comply with the comprehensive growth-management plan.

Kinnard could also avoid a variance request altogether by redesigning his house and pool, county staff stated in its report.

Deputies charge Inverness woman with child abuse

JEFF BRYAN
Staff writer

A weeklong investigation into a complaint a woman battered a minor came to a conclusion Tuesday with the arrest of a 34-year-old Inverness woman, according to a Citrus County Sheriff's Office arrest affidavit.

Michelle Jenkins

Michelle Janet Jenkins was charged with one count of child abuse without causing great bodily harm. Her bond was set at none. The investigation conducted by both the sheriff's office and the Department of Children & Families began April 5, stemming from an incident involving the woman and an unknown child. She was also charged with violation of probation; her bond for that charge was also set at none.

According to the report, deputies were called to a residence in Inverness regarding a domestic disturbance involved Jenkins and the minor child. During the investigation, the child had noticeable redness to their throat and a swollen lip.

The child told investigators that during the incident they were in their room when they saw the woman and a witness fighting. Jenkins was pulling the witness' hair when the child attempted to help, which resulted in Jenkins intentionally choking the child with her hands. The child told investigators they had difficulty breathing while being choked, leading to discomfort and redness to their throat.

Jenkins maintained a hold on the child's throat, the report stated, then punched them in the face multiple times, resulting in a swollen lip. Jenkins then charged at the child and punched them again in the face. According to the report, the abuse was stopped when neighbors and the complainant intervened.

DCF, along with the Child Protection Team, saw the child April 6, the report stated, where they were given a forensic interview and medical exam. The child had considerable bruises to both sides of their throat. The injuries took the appearance of lateral bruises, which resembled fingers and had the appearance of being choked by someone's hands. The victim still had a swollen lip.

Deputies made contact with Jenkins on Tuesday, April 14, at her home, and she was arrested and transported to the Citrus County Detention Facility.

Report: Beverly Hills man flees from deputy, charged with child neglect

JEFF BRYAN
Staff writer

A 23-year-old Beverly Hills man who fled from a deputy along Fort Island Trail into a residential neighborhood now faces charges of fleeing and eluding law enforcement and child neglect, according to a Citrus County Sheriff's Office arrest affidavit.

Aaron Taylor

Aaron Joseph Taylor was arrested Sunday evening. His bond was set at $7,000.

According to the report, deputies were dispatched to Fort Island Beach in reference to a trespassing call. While en route, Deputy Michael Kelly observed a red, four-door Jeep traveling east on Fort Island Trail pass two vehicles in a no passing zone with a solid yellow line. While passing the vehicles, Kelly clocked the Jeep traveling 60 mph in a 45 mph zone.

Deputy Kelly then attempted to turn around, activating his emergency equipment to conduct a traffic stop. While traveling east bound on Fort Island Trail, two vehicles behind the red Jeep hindered him from conducting the traffic stop, the report stated. Once he activated his emergency sirens, the two vehicles pulled over.

However, once behind the Jeep, it took off at a high rate of speed and made a left onto West Woodward Street and immediately made a right on to North Bent Oak Terrace, the deputy noted in his report. During this time, the Jeep had created significant space between the deputy's cruiser and the suspect vehicle.

Deputy Kelly had lost sight of the red Jeep on North Oak Terrace. According to the report, several witnesses informed him that the red Jeep had passed them at a high rate of speed including one witness who said they were nearly struck by the vehicle. While on scene, a number of other witnesses told the deputy they had observed a white male wearing a red shirt and blue jeans exit the driver's side of the vehicle and the driver had "yanked" a minor child from the Jeep by her hands and hair. The witnesses also said the driver, later identified as Taylor, began carrying the minor child away with haste, running easterly toward the wood lines near the Plantation Inn screaming, "No ... no."

Deputy Kelly began running in the direction provided by the witnesses. The deputy noticed a white male with a red shirt approximately 30 feet in the woods with the minor child, the report stated. Deputy Kelly un-holstered his firearm, ordering the male out of the woods, to which he complied and exited the woods with his hands up.

Post Miranda, Taylor admitted to seeing the deputy activate his emergency lights, but denied attempting to run from him, the report stated. Taylor said, "he was just scared." The defendant admitted to traveling at a high rate of speed, but he did attempt to pull over for Deputy Kelly. However, due to his acceleration of speed and evasive maneuvers, he was not attempting to pull over the deputy wrote in his report.

Taylor did admit to removing the minor child from the vehicle, but not by their hair, and carrying her away from the vehicle toward the woods, the report stated. Taylor said the minor was in the back seat of the vehicle, seat-belted into a car seat.

The minor child's mother arrived on scene, at which time deputies conducted an audio recording with the child, according to the report. The child told authorities Taylor had consumed one "Big Boy Drink" while at the beach. The child clarified they refer to a "Big Boy Drink" as an alcohol-related beverage. The child was shaken during the course of the pursuit in which they admitted Taylor was driving really fast, pulled her out of the vehicle by her hands and began carrying her away from the Jeep.

Once Taylor and the minor were in the woods, the child was crying. The report stated Taylor told the child to stop crying or else "the cops will find them."

Taylor was then arrested, where he was transported to the Citrus County Detention Facility.

Independent musicians turn to social media

For Doug and Telisha Williams, becoming homeowners was a special challenge.

The couple, married musicians who perform together as the Wild Ponies, had difficulty securing a loan because their income is based off their ability to tour, and can fluctuate. Still, in March, they were able to get a co-signer and became proud homeowners of a fixer upper in Nashville, Tenn.

But in a matter of days, up to 85% of their income was wiped out due to the coronavirus pandemic.

"We immediately had to cancel 38 U.S. dates. ... And we've lost an entire U.K. and European tour. For us, that's pretty much all of our income," Doug Williams said.

So now, like many other independent musicians, they've turned to social media and the Internet to make up their lost wages. A Facebook live concert from the Williams' new home drew about 300 people and $800 in donations, or about what they'd take in on a night on tour. Since then, it's received another 4,000 views.

While plenty of A-list musicians have responded to the pandemic with virtual performances to entertain their fans, for entertainers with less name recognition, reaching out via social media or the web is a matter of survival. And it's not just the concerts. They sell merchandise, music and anything else to pay the bills.

Changes in the music industry have made it harder for artists to survive, said Rob Miller, owner of Chicago-based independent label Bloodshot Records.

Associated Press

Doug and Telisha Williams, married musicians who perform together as the Wild Ponies, perform at Dee's Country Cocktail Lounge last September in Nashville, Tenn.

"Sales do not drive a career the way they used to, so it's more imperative than ever for artists to stay out on the road. And right now we're not talking about a diminishment of income, we're talking about a cessation of it. It's done. And no one can tell us for how long," Miller said.

'E.T.,' 'Bugsy' cinematographer Daviau dies at 77

LOS ANGELES — Cinematographer Allen Daviau, who shot three of Steven Spielberg's films including "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial," has died. A representative from the American Society of Cinematographers said Wednesday that Daviau died Tuesday of complications from COVID-19. He was 77.

A five-time Oscar nominee, Daviau was also behind the camera on "Empire of the Sun," "Bugsy," "The Color Purple," "Avalon" and "Defending Your Life."

"He will be remembered fondly for his sense of humor, his taste for the best of foods and his laugh that unmistakably marked his presence from far away," ASC president Kees van Oostrum wrote in an email to members Wednesday.

Born in New Orleans and raised in the Los Angeles area, Daviau said seeing color television at the age of 12 began his fascination with the technology of light and photography, working at camera stores and film labs to hone his skills. He "gate-crashed" the set of Marlon Brando's "One-Eyed Jacks," shot early music videos for The Who and Jimi Hendrix and also shot still photography for The Monkees.

He met Spielberg in 1967 and discovered a shared love of movies. Spielberg later said that his 8mm and 16mm films "weren't doing the trick" to help him break into the business and he started collaborating with Daviau. Together they shot "Amblin" in 1968.

Florida unemployment jumps 180k

System still overwhelmed

Associated Press

ORLANDO — More than 180,000 workers in Florida filed claims with the state's overwhelmed and struggling unemployment system last week, raising the state's total seeking jobless benefits to over a half million people since many parts of the Sunshine State went under lockdown last month.

The U.S. Department of Labor said Thursday almost 181,300 Floridians filed for jobless claims, raising the total number of Floridians seeking unemployment benefits over the past three weeks to more than 520,000 workers. The state later said the number of claims has reached 800,000.

And that only counts the out-of-work employees who were able to file for claims with Florida's beleaguered unemployment system. Many of the state's hundreds of thousands of newly jobless have reported problems with filing applications or getting help from hotlines. They've had their online applications disappear in front of their eyes when the computer refreshes or they've gotten bumped out of the system while filling out the forms, forcing them to start over.

Gov. Ron DeSantis on Thursday issued an executive order waiving a requirement that unemployment recipients must certify every two weeks they remain out of work, saying those reapplications were helping to clog the overworked computer system.

DeSantis said 121,000 unemployment payments have been issued, but that is less than one payment for every seven applicants. He said the state has also issued the first 23,000 weekly federal unemployment supplement checks of $600. Florida's maximum state payment is $275 a week.

The governor has been saying for weeks the system was turning the corner only to find most progress to be a mirage.

"We need to get people paid," DeSantis said Thursday.

Management Services Secretary Jonathan Satter, who was named Wednesday to oversee the unemployment payment system, said Thursday the computer system is being upgraded and thousands of state employees borrowed from other departments are helping process applications in hopes of decreasing the backlog. He said the banking system is also being upgraded, so it can issue 100,000 checks per day instead of 25,000.

He compared the system to a 7-year-old car that never got used much but now is being used by 10 people — it can't cope without repairs.

Colleen Corbert, a 30-year-old Tampa bartender who applied shortly after she lost two jobs in mid-March, hasn't received a check. She doesn't understand how so few claims have been processed.

"I can't believe DeSantis expects Floridians to live for over a month with zero income and still pay their rent and feed their families," said Corbett, who is trying to supplement her income making T-shirts that she sells on Etsy. "Every day I see DeSantis on the news bragging about how much better the website is running and it's an absolute lie."

Associated Press

Gov. Ron DeSantis speaks to reporters Saturday, March 14, at the state emergency operations center in Tallahassee.

Danielle Priebe's husband was laid off from his job as a restaurant manager after eight years on March 15 and her hours managing a beauty supply store were cut from 40 a week to 16. The Priebes applied for unemployment right away, but their applications still haven't been approved.

They've called more than 100 times, but can't get anyone on the phone and despite lengthy waits are eventually disconnected.

"The governor keeps saying that, 'We're doing this, we're doing that,' but we're not seeing it on our end. We're getting nowhere. It's like we're spinning in circles," said the 50-year-old Melbourne mother of three.

The state has had more than 23,300 confirmed coronavirus cases, at least 668 deaths and 3,400 are hospitalized.

Among the sick are 30 patients and staff members at a Tampa Bay area nursing home — some of the patients have been hospitalized.

Other residents at the Freedom Square Seminole Nursing Pavilion will be tested and the facility is being cleaned, Pinellas County Assistant Administrator Lourdes Benedict told the Tampa Bay Times on Wednesday.

Statewide, there are 1,332 cases in Florida long-term care facilities, according to the latest state data released Wednesday. Earlier this week, DeSantis said nearly 100 of the state's 4,000 nursing homes have had coronavirus cases — but his administration has refused media requests for a complete list of the homes.

The state's nursing home associations have asked DeSantis to give the industry a waiver from lawsuits stemming from the coronavirus outbreak.

According to the Miami Herald, J. Emmett Reed, executive director of the Florida Health Care Association, would allow the nursing home industry to provide care "without fear of reprisal ... during this difficult time."

DeSantis said this week he is considering it, but hasn't made any decisions.

FSU plans virtual commencement ceremony

The News Service of Florida

The ceremony will include official conferring of degrees.

Unable to hold traditional graduation festivities because of the coronavirus pandemic, Florida State University will host a virtual commencement ceremony May 2, the university announced Thursday. President John Thrasher will lead the ceremony, which will be streamed on the university's website, Facebook and YouTube.

The ceremony will come after FSU and other schools across the state and country have shifted to online classes this spring to try to limit the spread of the virus.

"We were all heartbroken when the coronavirus pandemic forced us to cancel spring commencement at the Tucker Center," Thrasher said in a prepared statement, referring to the university's Donald L. Tucker Civic Center. "We still want to recognize our students on graduation day and award the academic degrees that they earned through years of study and hard work. Hopefully, this virtual ceremony will give our graduates and their loved ones an opportunity to participate in a meaningful shared experience."

The ceremony will include such traditional flourishes as an opening processional to the song "Pomp and Circumstance" and the official conferring of degrees. Thrasher and several other university leaders will take part in the ceremony "while observing social distancing guidelines," an FSU news release said. Graduates and their guests will not be present. The university plans to hold a future campus gathering for the graduates. "When it's safe to do so, we hope our spring graduates will come back to campus so we can celebrate together," Thrasher said. "In the meantime, we hope they will participate in this virtual ceremony and share their commencement photos and videos with the university community via social media."

Actor Brian Dennehy dies at 81

Tony-winning stage, screen actor

Actor Brian Dennehy accepts the Tony award for best actor in a play for "Long Day's Journey into Night" during the 57th annual Tony Awards June 8, 2003, in New York. Dennehy, the burly actor who started in films and later in his career won plaudits for his stage work in plays, died of natural causes on Wednesday in New Haven, Conn. He was 81.

NEW YORK — Brian Dennehy, the burly actor who started in films as a macho heavy and later in his career won plaudits for his stage work in plays by William Shakespeare, Anton Chekhov, Eugene O'Neill and Arthur Miller, has died. He was 81.

Dennehy died Wednesday night of natural causes in New Haven, Connecticut, according to Kate Cafaro of ICM Partners, the actor's representatives.

Known for his broad frame, booming voice and ability to play good guys and bad guys with equal aplomb, Dennehy won two Tony Awards, a Golden Globe and was nominated for six Emmys. He was inducted into the American Theater Hall of Fame in 2010.

Tributes came from Hollywood and Broadway, including from Lin-Manuel Miranda, who said he saw Dennehy twice onstage and called the actor "a colossus." Actor Michael McKean said Dennehy was "brilliant and versatile, a powerhouse actor and a very nice man as well." Dana Delany, who appeared in a movie with Dennehy, said: "They don't make his kind anymore."

Among his 40-odd films, he played a sheriff who jailed Rambo in "First Blood," a serial killer in "To Catch a Killer," and a corrupt sheriff gunned down by Kevin Kline in "Silverado." He also had some benign roles: the bartender who consoles Dudley Moore in "10" and the level-headed leader of aliens in "Cocoon" and its sequel.

Eventually Dennehy wearied of the studio life. "Movies used to be fun," he observed in an interview. "They took care of you, first-class. Those days are gone."

Dennehy had a long connection with Chicago's Goodman Theater, which had a reputation for heavy drama. He appeared in Bertolt Brecht's "Galileo" in 1986 and later Chekhov's "Cherry Orchard" at far lower salaries than he earned in Hollywood. In 1990 he played the role of Hickey in Eugene O'Neill's "The Iceman Cometh," a play he reprised at the Goodman with Nathan Lane in 2012 and in Brooklyn in 2013.

In 1998, Dennehy appeared on Broadway in the classic role of Willy Loman, the worn-out hustler in Miller's "Death of a Salesman" and won the Tony for his performance.

"What this actor goes for is close to an everyman quality, with a grand emotional expansiveness that matches his monumental physique," wrote Ben Brantley in his review of the play for The New York Times. "Yet these emotions ring so unerringly true that Mr. Dennehy seems to kidnap you by force, trapping you inside Willy's psyche."

He was awarded another Tony in 2003 for his role in O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey into Night." At the podium, after thanking his family, co-stars and producers and complementing his competitors, he said: "The words of Eugene O'Neill — they've got to be heard. They've got to be heard, and heard and heard. And thank you so much for giving us the chance to enunciate them."

Dennehy was born July 9, 1938, in Bridgeport, Connecticut, the first of three sons. His venture into acting began when he was 14 in New York City and a student at a Brooklyn high school. He acted the title role in "Macbeth." He played football on a scholarship at Columbia University, and he served five years in the U.S. Marines.

Back in New York City in 1965, he pursued acting while working at side jobs. "I learned first-hand how a truck driver lives, what a bartender does, how a salesman thinks," he told The New York Times in 1989. "I had to make a life inside those jobs, not just pretend."

His parents — Ed Dennehy, an editor for The Associated Press in New York, and Hannah Dennehy, a nurse — could never understand why his son chose to act. "Anyone raised in a first- or second-generation immigrant family knows that you are expected to advance the ball down the field," Dennehy told Columbia College Today in 1999. "Acting didn't qualify in any way."

The 6-foot-3-inch Dennehy went to Hollywood for his first movie, "Semi-Tough" starring Burt Reynolds and Kris Kristofferson. Dennehy was paid $10,000 a week for 10 weeks' work, which he thought "looked like it was all the money in the world."

Among his films: "Looking for Mr. Goodbar," "Foul Play," "Little Miss Marker," "Split Image," "Gorky Park," "Legal Eagles," "Miles from Home," "Return to Snowy River," "Presumed Innocent," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Assault on Precinct 13." He played the father of Chris Farley's titular character in the 1995 comedy "Tommy Boy."

He played serial murderer John Wayne Gacy in the 1991 TV movie "To Catch a Killer" and union leader Jackie Presser in the HBO special "Teamster Boss" a year later. "I try to play villains as if they're good guys and good guys as if they're villains," he said in 1992

He worked deep into his 70s, in such projects as SundanceTV's "Hap and Leonard," the film "The Seagull" with Elisabeth Moss and Annette Bening and the play "Endgame" by Samuel Beckett at the Long Wharf Theatre. His last foray on Broadway was in "Love Letters" opposite Mia Farrow in 2014.

He is survived by his second wife, costume designer Jennifer Arnott, and their two children, Cormac and Sarah. He also is survived by three daughters — Elizabeth, Kathleen and Deirdre — from a previous marriage to Judith Scheff.

Music industry mainstay Knox Phillips dies

Adrian Sainz
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Knox Phillips, the son of renowned music producer Sam Phillips and an enthusiastic ambassador of Memphis music who worked on records by Jerry Lee Lewis, Willie Nelson and John Prine during more than 50 years in the industry, has died. He was 74.

Phillips' brother, Jerry Phillips, told The Associated Press that his older sibling died Monday at home, with his wife. Knox Phillips previously suffered from cancer and battled serious illnesses in recent years, his brother said in a phone interview.

Knox Phillips had a friendly personality and a welcoming demeanor, backed by his trademark, bushy mane of hair. He seemed to take joy in shaking hands, and chatting with friends and strangers alike, during music events.

"He was the ultimate Memphis music ambassador, a politician for Memphis music," Jerry Phillips said.

Phillips was instrumental in bringing a chapter of a National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences to Memphis in the early 1970s. He's also in the Memphis Music Hall of Fame.

His love of Memphis music began when he was a child.

Knox Phillips grew up at Sun Studio, the recording capital founded by his father, Sam Phillips. Some of American music's most popular artists — Elvis Presley, Carl Perkins, Johnny Cash, Roy Orbison and Lewis — recorded at the Memphis studio.

As a boy, Knox Phillips hung out at Presley's house. Later in life, he became a producer, engineer, studio owner and unabashed promoter of his father's legacy.

"Sometimes, being in the shadow of somebody like Sam Phillips, it's a little hard to get your own footing, you know?" Jerry Phillips said. "But he was able to do that."

Phillips co-produced Prine's 1979 album "Pink Cadillac" with his brother Jerry, according to a biography on the Memphis Music Hall of Fame's website. Prine died on April 7 from complications from the coronavirus.

"Knox coaxed father Sam to the studio telling him that this guy's voice was so bad, he'd love him," said the Hall of Fame's biography by author Robert Gordon.

He worked on the Amazing Rhythm Aces' "Third Rate Romance," a Grammy winner. Phillips also engineered parts of Willie Nelson's "Shotgun Willie" and Jerry Jeff Walker's "Mr. Bojangles."

He also worked on several albums by Lewis and, at Sam Phillips Recording Studio in Memphis, Phillips brought in producers and musicians like Jim Dickinson and Big Star's Alex Chilton.

Knox Phillips gave musicians free studio time and financial help if they needed it, his brother told the AP.

"He never met a stranger," Jerry Phillips said. "He always was more concerned with you than him."

food into passing cars.

As long as supplies lasted, each car received a 5-pound bag of chicken, fresh corn, boxes of cereal, milk from M&B Dairy in Lecanto, water and assorted other produce and food items.

One of the teams of volunteers putting food in cars was from Citrus United Way.

"We're here supporting (New) Church Without Walls — we're going to be volunteering with them every week," said Meghan Pitzer, Citrus United Way chief executive officer. "We're going to be boxing up food prior to the distribution as well as at their warehouse, helping them there and then our whole team will be out here helping to serve at the drive-thrus."

Alexander said they will be doing a food giveaway at the fairgrounds every week for the foreseeable future.

"We gotta feed people — that's what we do," he said.

"They do great stuff and they need our help," Pitzer said. "I told Pastor Doug that we're here for whatever he needs for as long as he needs us."

By 1:30 p.m., with cars still backed up, all that was left were water and MREs.

A separate drive-thru food giveaway for active first responders and health care workers is set from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, April 18, at the New Church Without Walls, 300 S. Kensington Ave., Lecanto. For this, recipients need to show their work ID badge or card.

PGA Tour hopes to resume in June at Colonial

There would be no fans allowed

Doug Ferguson
AP golf writer

The PGA Tour laid out an ambitious plan Thursday to resume its season the second week of June and keep fans away for at least a month, conceding that any return to golf depends on whether it can be played safely amid the coronavirus outbreak.

The Charles Schwab Challenge at Colonial in Fort Worth, Texas, was pushed back to June 11-14. Assuming golf gets the green light from government and health officials, the tour then would have an official tournament every week through Dec. 6 except for a Thanksgiving break.

"Our hope is to play a role — responsibly — in the world's return to enjoying the things we love," PGA Tour Commissioner Jay Monahan said. "But as we've stressed on several occasions, we will resume competition only when ... it is considered safe to do so under the guidance of the leading public health authorities."

Golf is the first sport to announce plans for a restart, although its arenas are far different from other sports because it is played over some 400 acres. It was the second significant step to try to salvage the year, following last week's announcement of three majors — including the Masters in November — going later in the year.

Associated Press

Kevin Na, left, is congratulated May 26, 2019, by Charles Schwab after winning The Charles Schwab Challenge at Colonial in Fort Worth, Texas. The PGA Tour laid out an ambitious plan Thursday to resume its season with hopes of a restart at Colonial on June 11-14 and keeping fans away for at least the first month.

Even as it announced a truncated schedule, several key details were still being contemplated, such as testing for COVID-19 at tournaments.

"We have a level of confidence that is based upon ... changes and developments being made in the world of testing, available tests," said Andy Pazder, the tour's chief officer of tournaments and competition. "We're following very closely, through the assistance of our expert medical advisers, the development of more large-scale testing capabilities. ... It gives us confidence that we will be able to develop a strong testing protocol that will mitigate risk as much as we possibly can."

The RBC Heritage at Hilton Head, previously canceled this week, was brought back to be played after Colonial on June 18-21. Those dates previously belonged to the U.S. Open at Winged Foot, which plans to move to September.

That would be followed by the Travelers Championship in Connecticut and the Rocket Mortgage Classic in Detroit.

The tour said its invitation-based tournaments — Colonial, Hilton Head and the Memorial — would have their fields expanded to 144 players. Memorial, with Jack Nicklaus as the host, takes the July 16-19 week that had belonged to the British Open before it was canceled. The World Golf Championship in Memphis, Tennessee, now has the dates (July 30-Aug. 2) when the Olympics were to be played.

If all goes according to plan, the season would end on Sept. 7 at the Tour Championship with a FedEx Cup champion getting the $15 million bonus. That would be a 36-tournament schedule, down from 48 tournaments on the original schedule.

Three more tournaments were canceled, one permanently. The Canadian Open, the third-oldest on the PGA Tour schedule, said it would not be played this year. Also canceled was the Barbasol Championship in Kentucky, typically held the same week as the British Open. The Greenbrier tournament in West Virginia was canceled for good.

The tour had only 40 events in 2013, a short season to prepare for the start of its wraparound season that now begins in the fall.

Even so, it could lead to a peculiar two seasons. The current season could have only one major championship; the PGA Championship is scheduled for Aug. 6-9 at Harding Park in San Francisco. The following season could have two Masters, two U.S. Opens, the PGA Championship and the British Open.

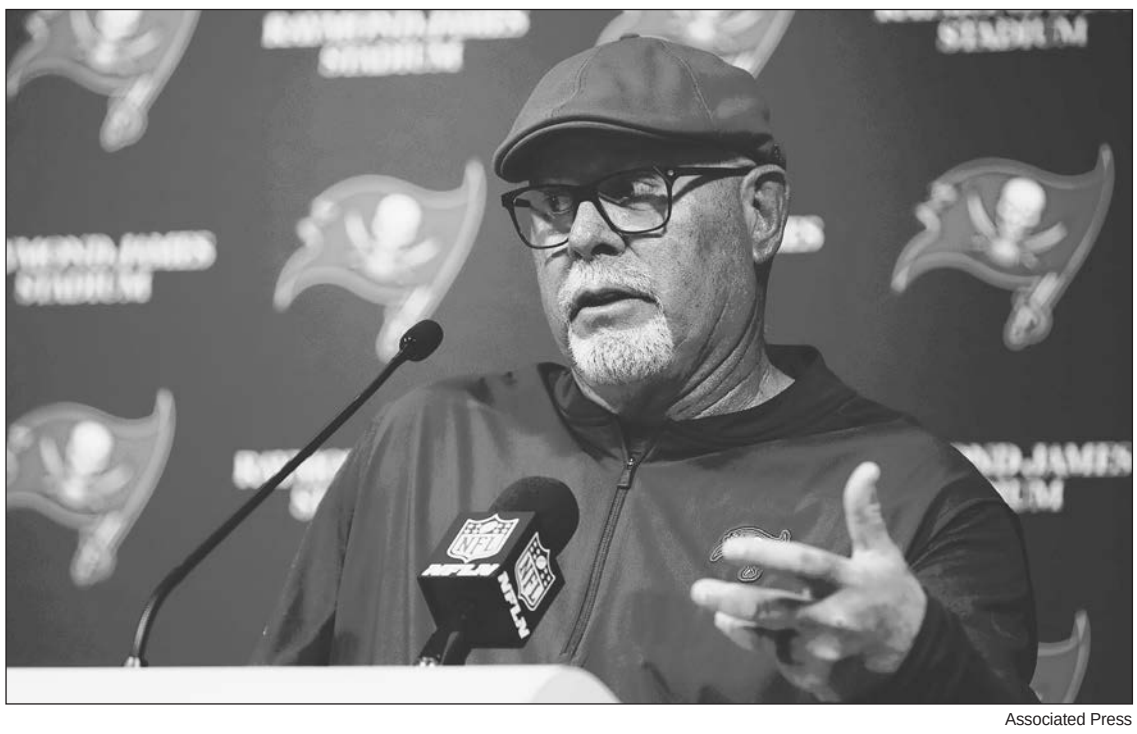

Other details the tour still has to sort out was who fell under the "essential" category that would be allowed at tournaments beyond players, caddies, scoring official, rules officials and support staff.

Pazder said at least 25 players are outside the U.S., along with at least 35 caddies, all subject to international travel restrictions.

"We are playing very close attention to if and when those restrictions are changed," he said.

Tyler Dennis, the tour's chief of operations, said officials also were considering the movement of everyone who would be at a golf tournament. Social distancing in golf is not difficult; some people continue to play golf in states where courses remain open. Still to be determined is how to keep other areas, even the flag stick, sanitized.

Bucs seek help

Associated Press

Tampa Bay head coach Bruce Arians speaks Dec. 8, 2019, at a news conference after an NFL game against the Indianapolis Colts in Tampa. The Buccaneers select 14th in the NFL Draft.

Tampa Bay needs to build around Brady in NFL draft

Fred Goodall
AP sports writer

TAMPA — Jason Licht spent the past six years assembling a roster talented enough to make the Tampa Bay Buccaneers an attractive destination for Tom Brady.

Now the general manager with a spotty draft resume faces the challenge of acquiring additional pieces to help the six-time Super Bowl champion transform the franchise with the NFL's worst all-time winning percentage into title contenders.

Bringing in Brady to lead an explosive young offense featuring receivers Mike Evans and Chris Godwin makes the Bucs relevant for the first time in more than a decade. A successful draft will be one of the keys to fixing shortcomings that weren't addressed in free agency.

Licht has made a number of highly regarded calls, including selecting linebacker Devin White fifth overall a year ago. He's had his share of draft-day blunders, too, although it hasn't stopped Tampa Bay from putting together the promising cast Brady is excited about leading into the future.

"I have taken my fair share of criticism — a lot of it deserved — and I'll never shy away from that. But we've also had a lot of hits and brought in a lot of good players that got us to this point," said Licht, entering his seventh draft with the Bucs.

"It feels damn good," the GM added, "to have a player of Tom's stature and the resume that he has, that he felt like this is a place where he could come and win."

The Bucs select 14th after finishing 7-9 and missing the playoffs for the 12th consecutive season.

PROTECTING BRADY

The biggest need is bolstering the offensive line charged with protecting Brady. Long-time starter Demar Dotson wasn't resigned in free agency, so finding a right tackle is a priority. The team signed former Colts lineman Joe Haeg last month, however, it won't be a surprise if Licht and coach Bruce Arians try to upgrade from a pool of prospects that includes Georgia's Andrew Thomas, Iowa's Tristan Wirfs and Louisville's Mekhi Becton.

YOUNG, IMPROVED DEFENSE

Landing Brady generated the biggest headline this offseason. But the Bucs also spent generously to keep the core of an improved defense together by placing the franchise tag on NFL sacks leader Shaquil Barrett and re-signing Jason Pierre-Paul and Ndamukong Suh.

A young secondary made strides over the last six weeks of 2019. The team would like bolster its overall depth on the second and third days of the draft.

ALWAYS ROOM FOR A PLAYMAKER

With the departure of Peyton Barber, the team's second-leading rusher last season, the Bucs figure to be in the market for a running back to share some of the workload with third-year pro Ronald Jones, who had a combined 1,033 yards rushing and receiving in 2019.

"We have a lot of faith in Ronald, and in fact, we have more faith in him now than we ever have," Licht said. "But that's another position, as you can tell across the league — some of the better teams, they have one, two or three guys, sometimes four — that they can rely on in different types of roles in their offense."

EYE ON FUTURE

Licht said acquiring Brady, who signed a two-year, $50 million contract that will allow the three-time NFL MVP to earn up to $9 million more in incentives, doesn't necessarily preclude the Bucs from drafting a young quarterback to groom.

Jameis Winston was the primary starter the past five seasons after being the No. 1 overall pick in the draft. He led the NFL in passing yards in 2019, but also fell out of favor by throwing a league-leading 30 interceptions.

"We can afford to do it, I think. It is definitely something we would look at, but it just depends on who that player is, where he is available, what other players are in front of him (and) if we're sold on that player," Licht said.

"If the guy is there and he fits what we want at the right price then I'd say yes," Arians said. "You're always looking for a guy that you think is the future. ... I don't think it's a dire need this year, no. But if the right guy is there, yes."

TAMPA BAY

7-9 last year, 14th overall selection

LAST SEASON: Missed playoffs for 12th consecutive season, extending second-longest drought in NFL. Jameis Winston led league in passing yardage, while also becoming its first-ever "30-30"" player with 33 TD passes and 30 interceptions, including seven that were returned for touchdowns. WRs Mike Evans and Chris Godwin each topped 1,100 yards receiving, LB Shaquil Barrett led league with 19 1/2 sacks, and young defense showed promise down stretch.

FREE AGENCY: Signed QB Tm Brady, T Joe Haeg. Placed franchise tag on LB Shaquil Barrett. Re-signed LB Jason Pierre-Paul, DL Ndamukong Suh, QB Blaine Gabbert, CB Ryan Smith, LB Kevin Minter, S Andrew Adams, DL Rakeem Nunez-Roches, TE Antony Auclair. Lost RB Peyton Barber, WR Breshad Perriman, DL Beau Allen, LB Carl Nassib. Didn't re-sign QB Jameis Winston, T Demar Dotson, S Darian Stewart, T Josh Wells, T Jerald Hawkins, LB Sam Acho, G Earl Watford.

THEY NEED: T, RB, CB, WR.

THEY DON'T NEED: QB, LB.

POSSIBLE FIRST PICK: Georgia OT Andrew Thomas, Louisville OT Mekhi Becton, Florida CB CJ Henderson, Iowa OT Tristan Wirfs.

OUTLOOK: With Brady replacing Winston, Bucs finally have franchise QB they've spent decades searching for. That breeds expectations of not only ending long playoff drought, but hopes of becoming first team to play Super Bowl in home stadium next February. Club's biggest need entering draft is bolstering offensive line that will protect Brady, who will be 43 in August. It would be nice to add some depth to improved defense that played well over final six weeks of 2019.

Two people walk past an area meant for hundreds to wait for screening at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport on Wednesday in SeaTac, Wash. Flights at the usually busy airport have dropped from up to 1,300 a day to about 400 each day.

Economic signals flash red

Associated Press

The outbreak of the coronavirus has dealt a shock to the global economy with unprecedented speed. Following are developments Thursday related to the global economy, the work place and the spread of the virus.

SEATBELTS FASTENED

The U.S. is offering airlines a $25 billion aid package, but damage to the sector will be extensive and long-lasting. Industry analysts say it could be five years before the industry fully recovers.

■ United Airlines' flight schedule will be cut to 10% in May and it expects more of the same in June. In a letter to employees, CEO Oscar Munoz wrote that travel demand is "essentially zero and shows no sign of improving in the near-term."

"We expect to fly fewer people during the entire month of May than we did on a single day in May 2019," Munoz wrote. Job cuts at the airline, though prohibited through September under strings tied to the aid package, are likely in the fall.

■ At American Airlines 32,000 workers have volunteered for early retirement or leave at reduced pay. American started the year with about 133,000 employees.

ECONOMIC PARALYSIS

Figures released by the U.S. Thursday revealed a collapse in housing construction, and millions of lost jobs.

■ A quarter of British businesses have closed their doors. The Office for National Statistics surveyed 5,316 companies to find out how many had shut down operations between March 23 and April 5. Those that have remained open have furloughed an average 21% of their staff. A national aid package pays 80% of the wages of for retained workers.

■ The International Monetary Fund warns Pakistan's budget deficit could hit a record 4 trillion Pakistani rupees (approximately $23.7 billion) this year because of the virus outbreak, accounting for nearly 9.2% of gross domestic product.

SERVICE POSTPONED

The service sector — gyms, hotels and retail stores — relies on human contact, and it may have been changed forever by the outbreak.

■ J.C. Penney is postponing $12 million in interest payment. The company has a 30-day grace period before it is considered in default on the 2036 senior notes.

■ Hilton has suspended operations at almost 1,000 hotels globally, or 16% of them. That includes 12% of hotels in the Americas, 60% in Europe, the Middle East and Africa and 15% in Asia. The company has seen some recovery in China, where all but 20 of the 150 hotels that closed there have reopened. Hilton expects revenue per available room to fall nearly 25% in the first quarter.

FIELDS AND FACTORIES

The pandemic has created a potential nightmare for farmers, ranchers, dairy farms, as well as manufacturers. The labor-intense sectors cannot function without workers who are often required to do their jobs in close quarters.

■ More than 30,000 people have registered for special flights that will bring them from Romania to Germany to help with the harvest season, budget airline Eurowings said. German farms rely heavily on Eastern European laborers for sowing, planting and harvesting crops.

■ Italy's severely ravaged region of Lombardy is pushing to relaunch manufacturing on May 4, the day that the national lockdown is set to lift. Lombardy's plan focuses on maintaining a one-meter distance between workers, mandating the use of masks, mobile working where possible and the use of antibody blood testing, which is set to launch in the region on April 21.

SALES SLIDE

Figures release by the U.S. this week revealed a retail sector staring down a crisis. See-and-be-seen is from another era, one without face masks and home confinement. Even if you can afford luxury goods, your not likely to be buying it now.

■ Sales fell 4.8% at the cosmetics giant L'Oreal in the first quarter, though online sales increased 52%. The company said Thursday there were sharp sales drops in luxury cosmetics and professional hair products as department stores, hair salons shuttered across continents.

■ Global sales tumbled 15% for luxury group LVMH in the first quarter. More people are drinking at home, but they're not opening bottles of LVMH Moet & Chandon Champagne, or its Vuitton handbags or Dior perfumes. It has begun to produce hand sanitizer and has financed millions of masks for French medical personnel.

■ The market for used cars, trucks and SUVs in the U.S. has evaporated. Cox Automotive estimates that retail used vehicle sales fell 59% last week compared with a year ago. Sales at Cox's Manheim used vehicle auction houses, where dealers get their supplies, tumbled 75%. New vehicle sales slumped 38% in March.

Stocks climb, winners pull away

NEW YORK — Even in this new stay-at-home, increasingly jobless economy, some businesses are making out as clear winners, and gains for Amazon, health care companies and stocks in other pockets of the market helped prop up Wall Street Thursday.

The S&P 500 rose 0.6% after flipping between small gains and losses following a government report that 5.2 million Americans filed for unemployment benefits last week. The report was universally regarded as awful, and it brought the total for the last month to roughly 22 million. But markets had braced for a number that was even more awful, which helped limit losses for stocks.

The day's move for the S&P 500 was one of its mildest since the coronavirus outbreak began knocking stocks lower two months ago. But it belied some churn underneath, as losers in the index outnumbered winners.

"We know the numbers are not going to be good, but companies can show they've taken steps to stop the cash drain or that they've positioned themselves well," said Sal Bruno, chief investment officer at IndexIQ.

Amazon, Dollar General and Walmart all closed at record highs as people stock up on staples. Netflix also reached an all-time high as people spend more time than ever at home, while health care stocks in the S&P 500 rose 2.2% for the biggest gain among the 11 sectors that make up the index.

The losers in the coronavirus pandemic, meanwhile, took yet more hits. United Airlines sank 11.5% for the one of the worst slides in the S&P 500 after its CEO told employees that demand for travel "is essentially zero and shows no sign of improving in the near term."

As a sector, financial stocks weighed heaviest on the market with banks continuing their weeklong slide. Worries are high that business-shutdown orders — and the punishing sweep of layoffs they're causing — will force households and businesses to default on billions of dollars of loans. JPMorgan Chase lost 3.8%, and Citigroup slid 5.5%.

Energy companies and owners of shopping malls were also hard hit as people stay at home amid efforts to slow the spread of the virus. Simon Property Group lost 13.3%, and Occidental Petroleum fell 10.4%.

Analysts see the separation of winners and losers as an encouraging sign for the market. Earlier in the sell-off, fears about the impending recession pulled the plug for stocks across sectors.

"We had a market that was dotted with indiscriminate selling," said Quincy Krosby, chief market strategist at Prudential Financial. "Now you have a differentiation within the market, which indicates a healthier backdrop."

The S&P 500 rose 16.19 points to 2,799.55. The Dow Jones Industrial Average added 33.33 points, or 0.1%, to 23,537.68, the Nasdaq jumped 139.19, or 1.7%, to 8,532.36 and the Russell 2000 index of smaller stocks slumped 5.89, or 0.5%, to 1,178.09.

FOOD INSECURITY

Local group that feeds families needs donations

A longtime food insecurity support organization is struggling and deserves the community's support.

For 15 years, SOS Citrus County Support Center has been a lifeline for county residents who do not have enough to eat. An average of 414 individuals from 138 families are fed twice monthly by SOS. The group spends about $10,000 per month on food to give away and is funded by donations from several churches and the Black Diamond Foundation.

Up until recently, John Bordeaux has filled the gap with his own money, usually between $40,000 and $45,000 a year. Bordeaux recently suffered a bout of health issues, and SOS is seeking regular financial donors so it can continue.

With unemployment numbers rising exponentially, we can only assume more people will be short on food or going without basic nutrition.

THE ISSUE:
SOS in need of "SOS."

OUR OPINION:
Small monthly commitments will make a big difference.

Food insecurity will become an even greater challenge during the post-COVID economic recovery.

Bordeaux deserves enormous credit for the work he has done, but now it is time for others to chip in.

Ideally, small monthly commitments would provide a steady revenue stream that would better sustain the delivery of food assistance by SOS.

To learn more about SOS Citrus County Support Center or give a tax deductible donation, call John Bordeaux at 352-422-2429.

Untrusting of older drivers

Today's Friday the 13th — lucky you! I'm calling about the article in the Sound Off about "Youths not the only bad drivers." Well, for the record, I am a man of 73 years old. I still hold a valid CDL license rated for passengers, school bus, hazmat, tanker, tractor-trailer or anything else with wheels on it. I have not had a ticket in well over five or six years, maybe more. I've never had an accident and I would like to consider myself one of the fortunate few that can say these things. The point of this, however, is you want to talk about drivers? Kids act stupid. They do crazy things and they drive fast. OK, so does everybody the heck else in this state. As far as driving abilities, I am more fearful and more untrusting of the elderly drivers with tunnel vision, cardiac problems, and cataract glasses wrapped around their whole head or hanging onto the steering wheel with oxygen tubes. I mean, I've seen pretty much everything you could imagine here ... and I have to say it's the middle-aged and the elderly that really do need to be observed more carefully. So don't lay it off on the kids. Us old farts need to accept the responsibility of our own actions, myself included.

Ridiculous to close bars at midnight

This is in response to closing the bars at midnight that Stat Cop thought would be a great idea (in the May 13 Sound Off, "Close bars at midnight to combat assaults"). Prior to him writing that information, I always gave him a lot of respect that he knew the law. Unfortunately, that is ridiculous to close the bars at midnight. In Key West, they're open 'til 5 in the morning. In Las Vegas, they're open 24 hours a day. I would suggest that the sheriff's department send double cars if there is a problem at night. They're not that busy at night. If they can't handle it, then they need better training. Don't let the dog wag your tail; you wag his tail. Stat Cop, get with it.

Doctor's office treated me well

My name is Paul and I'd like to put a piece in the paper in Sound Off about the Florida Cancer Specialists in Lecanto. I've had to go there for treatment and the people at the front desk have been very nice to me. And all of the girls in the chemotherapy room, the same thing — they've been very nice. I would just like to make sure that's acknowledged and people know what good care you can get there. Once again, I appreciate it. Thank you so much.

Keep kids out of the street

This is in regards to the signs I see on the streets saying, "Drive like your kids live here." Why don't you keep your basketball hoops off the streets instead of telling your kids it's OK to play out in the street? If you can't keep it on your lawn, don't buy one. How about telling your kids when they're waiting for the school bus not to sit in the travel lane? And how about just being outside and being a parent and doing your jobs instead of waiting for others to do it for you?

Taskforce appreciates grant

Childhood Development Services Inc./Healthy Families Citrus County would like to thank the Citrus County Community Charitable Foundation LLC for its grant award of $21,000 in support of the Substance Exposed Newborn Taskforce initiative.

Substance use and pregnant? No judgement, just help!

The purpose of this initiative is to give hope to the growing number of Citrus County mothers who have become pregnant and have used substances during their pregnancy and to increase positive outcomes for their newborns. The SEN (Substance Exposed Newborn) Taskforce is made up of representatives from several local agencies who work with pregnant mothers, newborns and their families. We have been developing resources and important information to address the unique needs of these families. The number of SEN babies has dramatically increased in our county in the last couple of years. The earlier that we can connect with these families and link them to the great services available to them, the better the potential outcome for the baby. We want Citrus County families to know that resources are available right here in our county and that we will work with them without judgement.

For more information on the Substance Exposed Newborn Taskforce, contact Dee Dixon at 352-302-5568 or ddixon@cdsi.org.

A virtual funeral service goodbye

My mother passed away on Holy Thursday in Chicago. Her heart was old. She had been on her last legs for months. I set aside money to take my Florida family to the big funeral we usually have. But travel is frowned upon these days. How could I not go to my mother's funeral? My own mother. I needed to touch her one more time and see her. Maybe I could drive myself. I hear state lines are closed. Could I get a motel for the two-day trip? Air fare would be too traumatic in my saddened condition. Chicago airports are big.

So I decided to stay put. Only 10 people are allowed in the funeral home anyway. My aunts, uncles and cousins had the viewing by drive-by. So on the day of the funeral, I had my grandchildren and son and daughter-in-law over in my dining room and set up the online streaming for the service and eulogy. Pizza would be delivered after. It was beautiful. Not what I wanted for the final goodbye, but I was able to connect online.

Ironically, I was prepared to set up the computer for the streaming because I had been watching Catholic Mass on live stream for over a week. The Lord works in mysterious ways.

Leadership lacking during pandemic

My sister's name is Mary, and after two nights in a New York hospital, she is slowly recovering from coronavirus. She is the most generous of my six siblings and wise beyond her years. She is a mother and grandmother and as brother Gerry pointed out, not a number.

Mary is a retired school psychologist, having served in one of New York's toughest high schools in Hell's Kitchen. She lives on the 27th floor on Manhattan's west side but fled her building a month ago as many of her neighbors became sick.

After paramedics declined to provide ambulance transport to an inundated Long Island hospital since she did not meet all the criteria, she took a taxi to seek treatment and was only admitted when a doctor friend intervened.

After two nights of hell, she was released and her daughter tends to her daily needs. She discovered that the controversial anti-malaria drug she was prescribed was not available because President Trump had suggested it might be a cure and supplies dried up.

We were not ready for this pandemic because our national preparation in early January was so slow. Instead of coordinating the national response, the president has been more concerned about his image and how the entire crisis is viewed by voters.

The experts close to Trump, even those who have the credentials to advise him, are afraid to speak the truth because they will be kicked out of the inner circle.

This should never have been about politics. It is about a global health pandemic that needed leadership from the most powerful nation on earth.

My sister almost died from COVID-19, and I take the lack of leadership personal.

CHANGES TO LETTERS SUBMISSIONS

The Chronicle will not accept handwritten letters to the editor during Gov. DeSantis "stay-at-home" order. Letters to the editor should be emailed to letters@chronicleonline.com.

Hot Corner: VIRUS

■ I went into the post office this morning. It's Monday morning and it's April 13. It was packed, so I had to find a place to park. I had to go around a couple times, but that's fine. Went in, there was a line and I thought we were waiting in line, but I just had a package to drop off and I noticed that everybody was bunched up. I had my mask on. I went in and everybody was bunched up in line in there, no more than a foot apart, if that much. No one — I mean, no one — had a mask on, not even the mail employees. They were still handing one package to another and being right up, front and center, with the people. I was shocked. Of all those people I saw — I counted like 50 going in and out, total — no one but me had a mask on. I'm just saying, people, you don't understand. You've got to protect each other. We have to protect each other and stay 6 feet away. Wear a mask until they tell us we're safe not to. Please, please do what the government tells us to do.

■ The public health department needs to increase the amount of information they are providing for the citizens of Citrus County. For example, are they doing contact follow-up? Is the large number of cases in Inverness the results of, say, visiting a beauty salon, a family get-together, visits of family from other states? We need to know how the virus is being contracted here and it is recommended that contact follow-up be done and the information shared with the residents so they can know if they were anywhere near, for example, that beauty shop.

■ Well, now I know that we are in a drastic state. I cannot go to my regular dentist or my regular doctor for routine schedules, but, according to CNN, Gov. DeSantis has just announced that pro wrestling is an essential business. Beats me.

■ Florida is home to many folks of the Greatest Generation — you know, the people who truly saved the world. Now their lives are being put in danger because we have a generation who ignore social distancing by boating, insisting on their God-given right to gather as groups in church or attending other group activities. What name should we give this generation — the selfish or self-righteous generation, the ignorant generation or maybe just the generation that doesn't give a damn about anyone but themselves? You decide.

■ I would like to know that when the Chronicle says the number of hospitalizations for the coronavirus, is that the total that has been in the hospital or is that the total that's in now? Can you tell us how many have been released? I'd just like to know.

■ We have two enemies: The first, of course, is the virus; and the second, which I'm sad to say, is our friends and neighbors who refuse to stay home and continue to spread this deadly virus to us. There's the golfer that only plays with a few close friends, the boater who only takes a few friends out, religious folks that can't stay home and have to pray with a group of close friends, and don't forget the bored people who need to just wander about the hardware and grocery stores. We don't want these folks to be our enemies, but what else would you call someone who puts your life in danger for no good reason?

■ I'm calling Sound Off in reference to the coronavirus. I guess it's affecting the automated machines because I can't even get through to (a bank). You call, you wait for a live person to come on and, "We're having trouble with our phone system, please try back in a couple of hours," and they hang up. Really? They couldn't answer me for what little information I wanted? The automated machines don't even work. I guess coronavirus is now affecting their phone lines, I guess.

THE CHRONICLE invites you to call "Sound Off" with your opinions about local or statewide subjects. You do not need to leave your name, and have less than a minute to record. Bodies found at New Jersey nursing home

ANDOVER, N.J. — Police responding to an anonymous tip found more than a dozen bodies at a nursing home in northwestern New Jersey, according to news reports.

Five bodies were found Sunday and 13 more were found on Monday at the Andover Subacute and Rehabilitation Center, Andover Township Police Chief Eric Danielson told The New Jersey Herald.

The remains found at the facility were among 68 deaths linked to the home, including both residents and two nurses, The New York Times reported, citing Danielson, other officials and county records shared with a federal official. At least 26 of those deaths were confirmed by laboratory tests to be related to COVID-19, the newspaper said.

More than 100 residents and staff members have tested positive for the coronavirus that causes COVID-19, the Times reported.

El Salvador president to defy court

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The president of El Salvador said Thursday he will not obey the country's Supreme Court, after it ruled authorities cannot detain people who disobey lockdown measures.

The police have been taking violators to mandatory quarantine centers at hotels or other improvised facilities for as long as 30 days, to ensure they are not spreading the new coronavirus.

The court ruled that people must obey orders to remain at home. But it also ruled that such forced transfers violate the Constitution and are not backed up by any law.

President Nayib Bukele said the court "does not have any powers to impose or revoke sanitary measures, nor to decide about epidemic containment."

"It is one thing is to interpret the Constitution, and another very different thing to order the murder of people," Bukele wrote in his Twitter account.

El Salvador has 164 confirmed cases of the coronavirus and 6 deaths.

New wildfires in area around Chernobyl plant

MINSK, Belarus — Three new wildfires have started in the radiation-contaminated evacuation zone around Ukraine's wrecked Chernobyl nuclear power plant, the site of the world's worst nuclear accident 34 years ago, emergency officials said Thursday.

A statement from the Emergencies Ministry said the fires were small and posed no threat to facilities holding radioactive waste.

Small business lending on hold

Program reaches $349B limit

JOYCE M. ROSENBERG AND ANDREW TAYLOR
AP business writer

NEW YORK — The government's lending program for small businesses is tapped out, and business owners who still need loans are waiting on Congress to approve more funding.

The Small Business Administration said Thursday that it reached the $349 billion lending limit for the program, after approving nearly 1.7 million loans.

Thousands of small business owners whose loans have not yet been processed must now look to Congress to approve a Trump administration request for another $250 billion for the program. Lawmakers have been haggling over whether to extend the program as it stands now, or add provisions that, among other things, would help minority businesses. It's unclear when they might reach an agreement that would allow loan approvals to continue.

Business owners left in limbo were getting more anxious after hearing the program was on hold.

"Ugh. I'm starting to stress a bit," said Greg Corey, who applied when the program launched April 3. He last heard from his bank on Saturday. Corey, owner of Porchlight, an Atlanta-based advertising and marketing firm, has been cutting expenses and work for freelancers so he can keep paying his staff of 10.

Meanwhile, thousands of other businesses are still applying, hoping to get loans when the program is extended.

While they wait, some banks continue to accept and process applications that will be forwarded to the SBA. Others were putting their application processes on hold.

The fight in Congress over the extension is along party lines. Republicans are amping up the political pressure in hopes of getting a relatively narrowly-drawn infusion of $250 billion in funding into the program, but top Democrats are seeking to add funding for hospitals and state and local governments.

US job losses mount

Trump presses plan to reopen business

CHRISTOPHER RUGABER AND LORI HINNANT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The ranks of America's unemployed swelled toward Great Depression-era levels Thursday, and President Donald Trump reacted to the pressure on the economy by outlining a phased approach to reopening parts of the country where the coronavirus is being brought under control.

Under the plan, presented by Trump in a call with the nation's governors, the president will ease his social-distancing guidelines to allow states to start getting back to business over the next several weeks in places that have strong testing and have seen a decrease in COVID-19 cases.

"You're going to call your own shots," Trump told the governors, according to an audio recording obtained by The Associated Press, after a week in which he clashed with them over his claim that he has "total" authority over how and when the country reopens.

The move came on the same day the government reported 5.2 million more Americans applied for unemployment benefits last week, bringing the four-week total to 22 million — easily the worst stretch of U.S. job losses on record. The losses translate to about 1 in 7 American workers.

The bleak picture intensified the debate over how and when to start lifting the lockdowns and other restrictions that have all but strangled the economy.

While many Americans have chafed at the damage to their livelihoods, business leaders and governors have warned that more testing and protective gear are needed first. And health experts have cautioned that easing the restrictions too soon could allow the virus to come storming back.

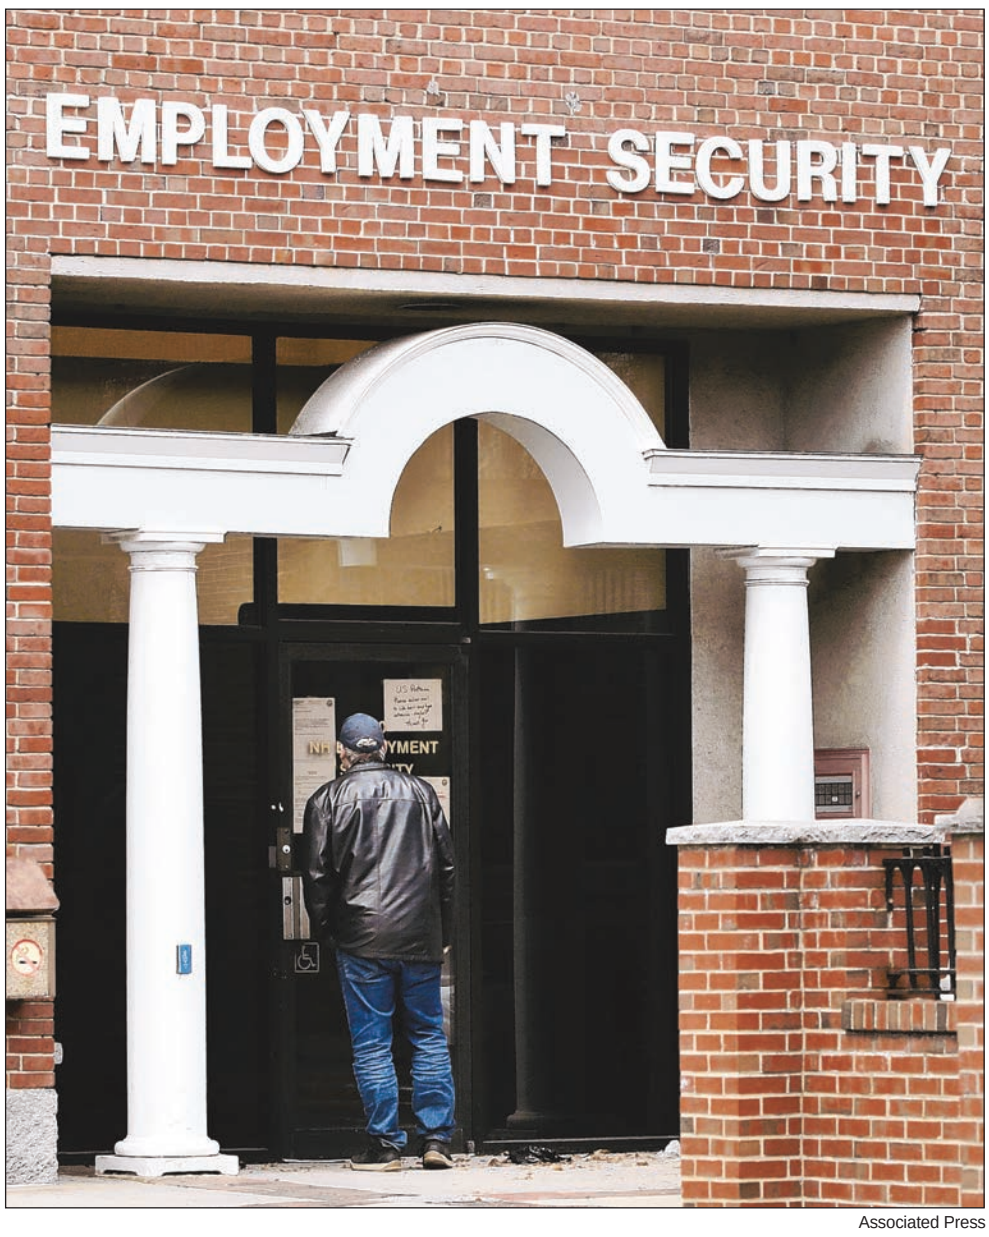

"My No. 1 focus is to keep my family safe, so I'm really not in a hurry to put an end to this," said Denise Stockwell, who is about to lose her job in marketing at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York.

But conservative economist Steven Moore, a Trump ally, said there will be 30 million people out of work in the country if the economy doesn't open back up soon. "And that is a catastrophic outcome for our country. Period," he said. "You're going to have social chaos."

Worldwide, the outbreak has infected more than 2.1 million people and killed more than 140,000, according to a tally by Johns Hopkins University, though the true numbers are believed to be much higher. The death toll in the U.S. reached about 31,000, with around 650,000 confirmed infections.

The spread of the virus is declining in such places as Italy, Spain and France, but is rising or continuing at a high level in Britain, Russia and Turkey, authorities said.

Under the new Trump administration roadmap, places that are turning the corner on the virus would begin a three-phase gradual reopening of businesses and schools, with each phase lasting at least 14 days, to ensure that the outbreak doesn't make a resurgence.

Associated Press

A man reads a note on a locked door Thursday at the New Hampshire Employee Security center, which handles unemployment claims, in Manchester, N.H. Due to the virus outbreak, a note on the office door requested that all claims be handled remotely either on the phone or online.

Many Americans, especially in rural areas and other parts of the country that have not seen major outbreaks, have called on governors to reopen their economies. More than 3,000 turned out this week to decry the Michigan governor's restrictions, police broke up a demonstration in North Carolina, and protests also took place in Oklahoma, Kentucky and Virginia.

"Those people that know they're vulnerable, self-quarantine. And everybody else, let them go back to work," Aaron Carver, a laid-off construction worker said at a protest in Richmond, Virginia.

The decision of whether to relax the restrictions rests not with the White House but with the state and local leaders who imposed them in the first place. Seven Midwestern governors announced Thursday that they will coordinate on reopening their economies, after similar pacts were reached among states in the Northeast and on the West Coast.

Mayor Bill de Blasio of New York City, with more than one-third of the nation's coronavirus deaths, was among those urging caution.

"Everyone wants our economy to restart," he said. But "if we can't provide the basics for our people, then you can kiss your recovery goodbye."

Many European countries, like the U.S., have seen heavy job losses, but the social safety nets there tend to be stronger. Places like Germany and France are using government subsidies to keep millions of people on payrolls instead of letting them go on unemployment.

In the U.S., economists said the unemployment rate could reach 20% in April, the highest since the Depression of the 1930s. Layoffs are spreading well beyond stores, restaurants and hotels to white-collar professionals such as software programmers and legal assistants.

"It's just shut down everything, turned off the whole city," said Jacques Primo, 40, who was laid off from his bartending job at a Savannah, Georgia, seafood restaurant and found himself in line at a food pantry. "Before, I've never been worried, because I'll go find another job. Now you can't. It's impossible."

By all accounts, the lifting of restrictions, when it happens, won't be like flipping a switch. Restaurants and other businesses may be reopened in phases, with perhaps a limited number of entrances or reduced seating areas, while grocery stores may stick with one-way aisles and protective shields at the cash registers, experts say.

Even then, it could take awhile before business comes back, if China and certain places in Europe are any indication.

Resistance to US plan to cut WHO funding

DARLENE SUPERVILLE

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump faced international resistance Thursday to his plan to cut U.S. payments to the World Health Organization over its handling of the coronavirus pandemic.

Trump has accused the organization of mishandling its response and showing too much deference to China, where the new coronavirus first emerged.

The White House said Trump's conversation with the leaders of Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy and Japan "centered on the lack of transparency and chronic mismanagement of the pandemic by the WHO" and said the Group of Seven leaders called for a "thorough review and reform process."

Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said everyone on the call recognized the importance of continuing to coordinate and collaborate on the science around the pandemic, to work on public health measures and to share information about vaccine development and possible treatments.

"There is a need for international coordination and the WHO is an important part of that collaboration and coordination," Trudeau said outside his residence in Ottawa. "We recognize that there have been questions asked but at the same time it is really important that we stay coordinated as we move through this. That's certainly what Canada is going to do."

German Chancellor Angela Merkel expressed her "full support" for the WHO and similar international groups, and stressed that it will take "a strong and coordinated international response" to defeat the pandemic, said her spokesman, Steffen Seibert.

British Foreign Secretary Dominic Raab, who is standing in for Prime Minister Boris Johnson as he recovers from the coronavirus, said the leaders agreed that rapid development and production of treatments and a vaccine are crucial, the British government said.

Raab also stressed the need for an "internationally coordinated" response.

The Italian foreign ministry said it was committed to consolidating a global governance of health care "in which the WHO plays a crucial leadership role."

Tired of 'Frozen?' Stream these

Watch some less obvious kids' movies

JAKE COYLE
AP film writer

NEW YORK — Weeks of quarantine with kids have a way of burning through a movie collection.

Even with the libraries of streaming services like Netflix, Amazon, Disney Plus and others, there are plenty of households that have already had their fill of "Frozen" and overdosed on "Onward." In the best of times, the canon for kids movies can feel limiting. Disney overwhelms.

But there's a wider world of movies out there for young ones. We'll assume they've already accrued a solid foundation of some of the essentials: "Fantastic Mr. Fox," "The Iron Giant," Pixar, the Muppets, et cetera. So here's a few slightly further afield options — all available to stream, rent or are free — that your kids might not have seen.

■ "Fly Away Home": The outlines of this 1996 film, with Anna Paquin and Jeff Daniels, suggest a familiar and schmaltzy kind of family movie, but it's handled with such grace that it rises above the ordinary. Also, the geese are really great. A 13-year-old (Paquin) moves in with her estranged father (Daniels) in rural Canada after the death of her mother. She adopts an abandoned nest of goose eggs, raises them and teaches them to fly South for the winter. Available to stream on the Criterion Channel.

■ "Lupin the Third: The Castle of Cagliostro": For streaming Studio Ghibli films, we'll have to wait until they collectively hit HBO Max when it launches in May. (They are available outside the U.S. on Netflix.) They are so good — among the most wondrous in cinema — you might just go ahead and buy copies of "My Neighbor Totoro," "Spirited Away" and "Princess Mononoke." "The Castle of Cagliostro," on Netflix, isn't as well-known as Miyazaki's best. But the director's verve and imagination is already on display in this, a caper that continues the exploits of the debonair thief Arsène Lupin.

■ Buster Keaton: No child raised on Buster Keaton can turn out bad. It's just a fact. Most even young children recognize, and laugh their heads off at, his genius. Keaton's features are widely available, but many of his equally brilliant shorts can be streamed for free. Among them, "One Week," in which he tries to assemble a house; "The Goat," wherein Keaton is mistaken for a murderer; and "Cops," in which he angers the entire Los Angeles police force.

■ "Stop Making Sense": Concert films are an underutilized source of entertainment for kids. Jonathan Demme's glorious Talking Heads documentary, available for digital rental and to stream for free via Vudu, is a good place to start.

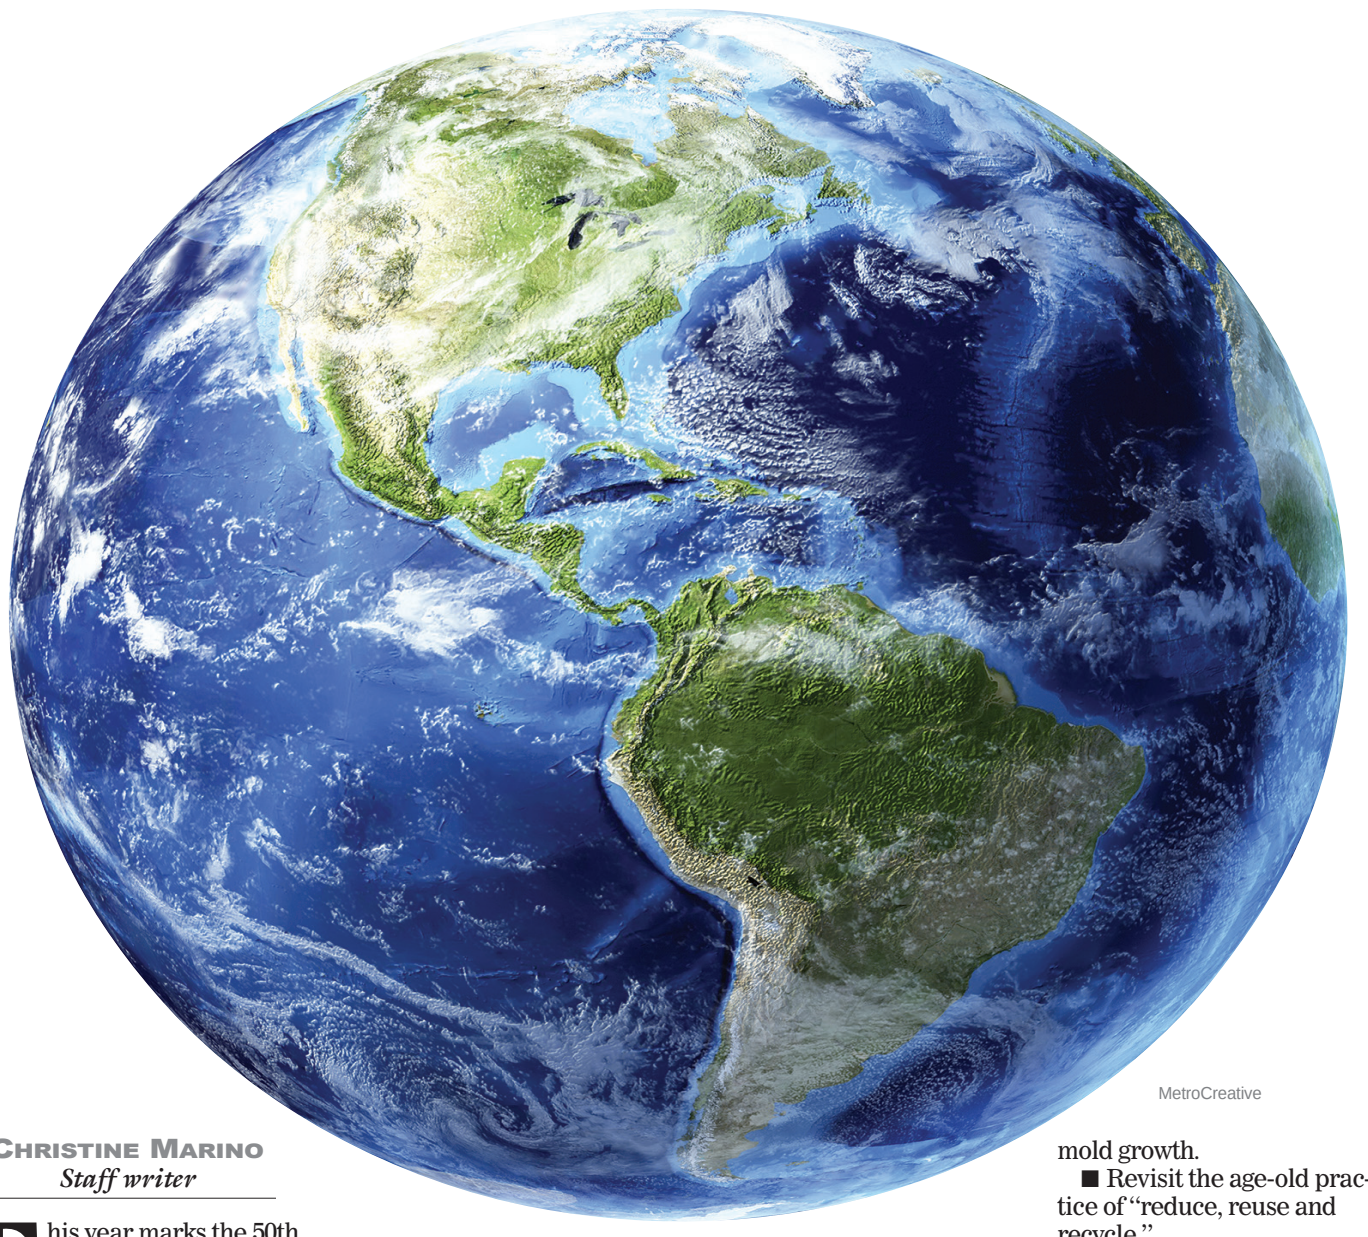

■ "The Three Caballeros": There are forgotten Disney treasures, too, including this trippy 1944 gem streaming on Disney Plus. On his birthday, Donald Duck receives package from his friends in Central and South America. Inside are film reels that bring a handful of individual tales and travelogues that Donald leaps into, too. It's a loving if overly exotic celebration of South America with some fabulous and surreal moments that blend animation and live action.

■ "Apollo 11": This hit 2019 documentary, on Hulu, simply follows the moon mission from launch to rescue, without talking heads and with large amounts of previously unseen IMAX footage.

■ "Pirates! Band of Misfits": Aardman Animations has been reliably churning out delights, from "Wallace and Gromit" to "Shaun the Sheep," for decades. "Streaming on Hulu.

Earth Day from home

Get creative to celebrate 50th anniversary of global environmental event

MetroCreative

CHRISTINE MARINO
Staff writer

This year marks the 50th anniversary of Earth Day. The world may be going through hardships right now, but there is still a way to honor all the good that the Earth has to offer on Wednesday, April 22.

Although it is not an option to celebrate Earth Day out in the community, there are still plenty of ways to show appreciation for the planet from home and educate children and ourselves about why it is important to take care of it.

Each year, the UF/IFAS Extension Center in Lecanto hosts an Earth Day celebration. This year, the celebration has been postponed until a later date. BJ Jarvis, director and horticulture agent for the extension center, shared some of the activities that are planned for the 50th anniversary Earth Day celebration.

"We have a fabulous event scheduled," Jarvis said. "We partner with the library system for this event to educate the community on environmental issues. We plan to have Gary Kuhl, local professional nature photographer, come and share his work while providing pointers on photography. We also will have museum-quality displays hosted by Water Ventures in Pasco County showing the water cycle as it starts in our homes and eventually leads out to the Gulf of Mexico. There will be all sorts of activities involving bird watching, composting and gardening that will make for a fantastic day for both kids and adults."

Although this event is postponed, the community can access updates on the event through the Citrus County Extension Center's Facebook page. This page not only offers updates on the event, but educational information for families as well.

"Our front office is closed right now, but we are still accepting soil samples and our back garden is open," Jarvis said. "People can drop off a soil sample on our front bench with their contact information and we will test it and get back with them on the results. Our garden is open 24/7 and allows for social distancing. There are water features as well as several low maintenance plants on display. People can come and see how truly easy gardening can be."

During this health pandemic, it has been difficult for some to appreciate the opportunities it has led to.

"The one thing that this terrible medical issue has positively done for us is that it has given us the ability to slow down and appreciate nature," said Jarvis. "Either by getting out and walking or riding our bikes, we can notice trees in bloom or even the tiniest weed we haven't seen before sprouting a flower. There are so many things we didn't appreciate until we were forced to slow down. Go outside, listen to the birds chirping or tend to the garden. Slow down and appreciate nature."

> "Even just planting one tree can make a positive impact on your landscape."

> UF/IFAS director and horticulture agent

Jarvis mentioned that there are things that people can do from home to connect with nature.

"Put out a bird feeder or a hummingbird feeder. Start a garden. Even those in an apartment can have a small herb garden," she said. "Even just planting one tree can make a positive impact on your landscape."

While waiting on a celebration update from the extension office, those at home can still do things to make a difference this Earth Day.

■■■

Here is a list of activities that can be done at home to celebrate this eco-centric holiday.

■ Learn about composting and integrate it into your daily lifestyle.

Composting is an easy way to improve the quality of an at-home garden while reducing waste. Most garden soils begin in a state where there is plenty of room for improvement. Whether it is compact, sandy, stony or heavy, adding compost will improve its texture, water-holding capability and fertility. It will also add nutrients to your garden that are often not found in store-bought fertilizers. These nutrients become available gradually, as plants need them. To learn more about composting and the many benefits that it offers, visit tinyurl.com/r7jsptn.

■ Explore ways to decrease air pollution within your home.

When most people think about air pollution, they may picture gas-burning cars or large clouds of smoke coming out of factories. However, pollution is closer to the average person than they may know. Air pollution can exist within the home in a number of ways. It is important to educate oneself on these and work to decrease them.

Pollution can come from household cleaners, gas stoves with poor ventilation, craft supplies, such as paints and glues, hairsprays and perfumes. Ways to decrease this pollution vary and can be quite simple. The first and most simple step in beginning to cut down air pollution is to minimize clutter within the home. Old and unused items can hold mold, dust and other debris that contribute to pollution. Next, use craft, cleaning, hair and beauty products in a well-ventilated area, whenever possible. Lastly, try to dust, vacuum and change bed sheets frequently, as these surfaces harness germs and other organisms that can incite mold growth.

■ Revisit the age-old practice of "reduce, reuse and recycle."

There are multiple ways to reduce, reuse and recycle waste within the home. These include buying recycled paper and printing on both sides, adding and using recycling bins, using rechargeable batteries and reusing old bottles for new purposes. For more ideas on how to easily reuse and recycle items at home, visit tinyurl.com/whqcu36.

■ Go outside.

Another way to show appreciation for the planet is simply to go outside. Smell the grass, listen to the birds sing and feel the warmth of the sun. Plan outdoor activities that you can do from your own yard that will allow you to enjoy the beauty of the planet this Earth day.

Contact the UF/IFAS Extension Center in Lecanto by calling 352-527-5700 or by emailing citrus@ifas.ufl.edu. Experts are readily available to answer questions regarding agriculture, horticulture, cooking, financial matters, nutrition and other topics involved in living well.

Activities included a scavenger hunt and things to touch and see including bees, butterflies, bird and other critters. This year's Earth Day event at the UF/IFAS Extension Center has been postponed and will occur at a later date.

Annie offers advice

Dear Annie: In a future column, please stress that when someone is cheating (or being cheated on), they should be tested, along with everyone else involved — and the sooner the better. — JP

Dear JP: Great advice. I hope this isn't a lesson that you had to learn the hard way. Being cheated on is bad enough.

DEAR ANNIE

Readers can visit gettested.cdc.gov to find nearby facilities that will conduct testing free of charge.

Dear Annie: Your referral of the International OCD Foundation to "Outside the Bubble" for treatment options regarding OCD that manifests itself as religious scrupulosity was well directed. I highly recommend them, as someone who has attended their annual conferences and whose family member has used their references, materials and member services. OCD manifests itself in many forms to prevent "normal living" activities. Religious scrupulosity as OCD goes further in preventing the victim from experiencing the truth, beauty and peace offered by their faith and can affect people of all faith traditions.

Your letter writer was Catholic, and therefore I would recommend further an organization called Scrupulous Anonymous. They are run by a Catholic priest, Father Thomas Santa, CSSR, and offer comforting and good advice through newsletters, retreats and workshops. He does not hesitate to advise victims to seek professional therapy when it is called for. They can be reached at Scrupulous Anonymous.org.

There is hope and healing available, and I encourage anyone serious about their Faith to seek it out. — Family of an OCD Survivor

Dear Family: Thanks for sharing your experience and these additional resources. I heard from others who thought I was too hasty to take on the letter writer's point of view, and I'd like to share some of that feedback in the interest of examining the whole picture.

Dear Annie: I was surprised and disappointed at your response to "Outside the Bubble." The writer of the question appears to me to be looking for reasons for excusing his/her attitude toward the Catholic Church, into which he/she was raised, by finding fault with siblings who take their faith seriously.

What is wrong with religion becoming an all-important part of one's daily life? I believe that is what our faith is supposed to be. Catholics have an obligation to attend Mass on Sunday and on certain Holy Days, among other obligations. This might make it necessary, if one is traveling, to find a nearby Catholic Church to attend. This may be inconvenient, but I do not see that as "compulsive behavior."

If these siblings are intolerant of people of other faiths, that is not an attitude consistent with Church teachings, as certainly our Pope Francis has made clear. But as for our Church a "filling a void" in our lives or giving us "a spiritual high," isn't that what our faith is supposed to do? Especially, in the times we currently live in, with all our health uncertainties, we need more than ever for our faith to fill those voids.

If the writer feels that relatives are intolerant of her attitudes, she could try to find it in her heart to realize that her siblings may be acting out of love and concern for her. Perhaps she should find it in her heart to be a more loving and tolerant person herself. — Person of Faith

Dear Person of Faith: There are two sides to every story, and yours sheds some light on the flip side of "Outside the Bubble's" situation. Faith is indeed an essential part of life for many of us, and I'd never intentionally discount that. I appreciate your writing.

PHILLIP ALDER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

When you have a trump suit, you enjoy control over the side suits. Even if you hold losers in a side suit, as long as the other hand is void in that suit, you can win a trick by ruffing.

However, if the hand with the void has no trumps left, you could be in trouble.

Given that introduction, how should South play in six spades on today's deal after West leads the heart king?

Over the weak two-spade opening, North used the almost-extinct Grand Slam Force.

This asked the opener to bid seven spades with two of the top three trump honors. Holding only one top honor, South signed off in six. (North could have used Roman Key Card Blackwood also.)

Declarer had three red-suit losers in his hand, but three discards were available on dummy's clubs once trumps were drawn. South just had to make sure that if he lost a trump trick, there would still be a trump on the board to ruff a heart.

Declarer led dummy's spade nine at trick two and let it ride.

If West had produced the queen, South could have ruffed a heart with the spade king, crossed to hand with a club to the 10, drawn trumps and claimed.

Here, though, the spade nine won. Now declarer cashed the spade king, getting the bad news, but he calmly played on clubs. When East ruffed the third round, South overruffed, cashed the spade ace to draw East's final trump, crossed to the diamond ace and finished the clubs. If East had never ruffed, declarer would have eventually lost only a trump trick.
