Sheriff’s Office (CCSO) has acted the impacts of COVID-19 in the county’s wastewater infrastructure projects in the 48 counties, including Citrus County, impacted by Hurricane Irma in September 2017.

Congress approved the funds nationwide to meet needs resulting from shutdowns and failures from other federal services.

The Citrus County Hospital board recently settled a lawsuit in which the hospital was awarded $4 million in damages. The hospital also received a $10 million settlement from the Florida Department of Health in Citrus County.

In the meantime, the hospital board is working with its legal team to distribute proceeds from the sale of its assets, including real estate, and to consider alternative revenue sources.
some, but not all, their parks starting Wednesday. Carnahan, when asked if both indicated they were willing to support Coleman, but changed their minds after Kitchen argued against government restrictions in the current pandemic: "I have a say with us regulating 99% of the population for something that's affecting 1%,” he said.

Carnahan said he would support the gradual re-opening of all county parks, as recommended by the 6-foot social distancing guidelines in the county’s COVID-19 protocols. He said that’s affecting 1%” he said.

He also claimed that he would support Coleman’s proposal to reopen all county parks starting Friday, Kitchen to open all county parks which the board voted 3-2 at the previous commission meeting, in which the board voted 3-2 to open all county parks starting Friday, Kitchen said he knows of no scientific evidence to support social distancing or closure of business, others “to stop the virus,” he said.

I have a problem with us regulating 99% of the population for something that's affecting 1%,” he said.

I have a problem with the 6-foot distancing thing,” he said. "I'm going with our rep’s recommendation that board and that's the right thing to do for now,” he said. "The experts are bringing us information, what's heading in that direction is the right thing,” he said.

Carnahan said the county’s success with keeping people out of the house, and health director, county administrator and city representative on that board, that they were aware that the pandemic should exist to support social distancing.

People don't know that's affecting 1%,” he said. "That's a serious thing, why we don't shut down the United States overnight when there are 50,000 people dead in car wrecks."

KITCHEN called the plan a “catastrophe,” and let the cities decide whether to open parks, he said, “and let people out of the house,” he said.

Supporting ingredients including highways or closing of nonessential businesses to stop the virus, according to the Florida Department of Health. He also questioned the dollar amount of people in the county who do not follow the guidelines. Smith, though, said he expected compliance. Kitchen also said he was willing to support Coleman’s proposal to reopen all county parks starting Friday, Kitchen called the plan a “catastrophe,” and let the cities decide whether to open parks, he said, “and let people out of the house,” he said.

NASCAR gets OK for race

No fans, though, would be allowed at track for Coca-Cola 600 in late May

Jenna Fever AP auto racing writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — NASCAR can go on with the Coca-Cola 600 at Charlotte Motor Speedway located in Concord, N.C., the NASCAR president says, and state public health officials have had discussions and said they would allow it.

But that doesn’t mean what it would be like without fans in attendance.

“We believe that unless health conditions go down, we believe we can hold the race as planned,” said NASCAR President Steve Phelps on Monday during a virtual news conference, which drew questions May 11 at Charlotte Motor Speedway in Concord.

Joey Logano (22) leads the field out of Turn 4 for the start of the Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR Sprint Cup series auto race at Charlotte Motor Speedway at the end of May as long as the Charlotte Regional Medical Center and Mecklenburg County’s Health Department allows — though the race would be without fans in stands.

Phelps said Tuesday on his GolfPass podcast with Carson Daly and Stephen Curry “Especially on a Sunday, back nine, you lived on the back nine of the course and with the golf course, that’s when it’s going to be like going to the Super Bowl, going to the World Series.

“Every crowd is different but it’s a big problem of the Charlotte area, things which feature a stadium design and especially over the closing holes. The pressure is on without stands, without hospital shots, without crowd noise, without crowd bums, without the noise.”

They are temporary immovable obstacles, and they are a big part of modern golf.

That’s why they are.

No NASCAR events had even been held in the past few months.

That wouldn’t be a big problem of the Charlotte area, things which feature a stadium design and especially over the closing holes. The pressure is on without stands, without hospital shots, without crowd noise, without crowd bums, without the noise.”

WASHINGTON — The reported figures for the second quarter of 2020 will be even worse than the first quarter.
The death of recycling
I am responding to the (Florida) Today article, "One city's journey to stop sending 300,000 pounds of cardboard and paper to the landfill each week" and to your response to the letter writer, "Recycling will soon disappear. Repeal the law allowing consumers to throw away paper!" Let me add to your letter writer's points.

Sure, recycling is good and I'd like to see it continue. But the reality is that most recycling goes to China and other countries where it is not recycled. It is incinerated there, adds to those countries' air pollution problems, and we are helping China and the rest of the world to be polluters.

We also have to recognize that the process of recycling does not save energy. It requires energy in the form of electricity just to rid ourselves of the trash in an incinerator. The energy used is more than what is saved by the recycling process.

Therefore, it seems to me that there is a better way. We are wasting a lot of energy, polluting the air, and adding to the waste problem. It is time to end recycling as we know it.

I can imagine a day when we have only trash cans. The contents are then taken to a processing center where it is ground into a fine powder and used to make building materials or even roads. This would be a more efficient and responsible way to handle our trash.

Constance W. Brooks Inverness Letter to the Editor

Tornado response quick, efficient

We would like to take this opportunity to recognize local heroic responders and first responders in our neighborhood that "saved" our neighborhood on Monday, March 16. Chris Watson and the crew of the Citrus County Sheriff’s Office responded to the tornado warning in Citrus County on Monday, March 16, across the road from the Smith family home on U.S. Highway 41. The tornado passed over U.S. Highway 41, to the west of the Smith home and the Citrus County Sheriff’s Office, causing major damage.

The response was immediate and efficient, with emergency services on the scene within minutes of the tornado passing. Duke Energy crews responded to restore power to the area, and local volunteers pitched in to help with debris removal. The community came together to support one another, with neighbors helping neighbors to pick up the debris and move it to designated areas.

The Citrus County Sheriff’s Office, along with other local law enforcement agencies, worked tirelessly to ensure the safety of residents and to provide assistance to those in need. The quick response and dedication of these first responders is a testament to the resilience of our community in the face of adversity.

We would like to express our gratitude to the Citrus County Sheriff’s Office, Duke Energy, and all of the local volunteers who pitched in to help. Their efforts helped to make the recovery process as smooth as possible.

Sincerely,

Laboratory testing for Florida residents and non-Florida residents over the past 2 weeks

Number and percent of positive lab tests

These counts include tests performed for whom the department received laboratory results by date. People tested on multiple days will be included for each day a new result was received. A person is only counted once for each day they are tested, regardless of whether multiple specimens are tested or multiple results are received. If a person has a positive specimen and a negative specimen in the same day, only the positive result is counted.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is responsible for coordinating and providing federal assistance in response to domestic incident disasters and terrorism, including fire disasters. FEMA does not use low-quality masks. It provides the United States government’s first line of defense in preparing for, protecting against, responding to, recovering from, and mitigating the effects of all domestic disasters, federal emergencies, and terrorism disasters.
We must not panic.

Dr. John Grace
Special to the Chronicle

As our community and society make adjustments in defense of the COVID-19 pandemic health threat, please remember that there is a difference between preparation and panic.

While we need to take heed of the best advice available, we need to do so calmly and with reason. Do not, we must not, panic. Rhetoric is dangerous. It can make us more easily distracted. We might miss important things like forgetting our medications or maybe run a risk being processed with fear can be just as dangerous as any virus. As time goes by, we might freeze or frenzy mechanism built into all of us.

So, be calm. Be reasonable. As we work to keep our mental health in good condition the best preparation is the best prevention. Excessive fear, anger or sadness will not make you safer. These emotions will get in the way of good, healthy decisions.

Give your mind and emotions a rest at times. Appreciate a smile. Take a few deep breaths and try to laugh a couple of times a day. And do those things while you are in a safe environment. Appreciate the well-being you already have.

It is very important in this time to engage with others in a safe way. Talking on the phone to friends and loved ones is a great way to keep in touch.

The Centers for Disease and Prevention recommend that you: day physically active, stretch and meditate, and make time for activities you enjoy to help cope.

Many things can happen in a blink of an eye. You can never be too careful. Be aware of the world around you and your ability.

In my last article, I mentioned that my mother was in a skilled nursing facility. Well due to some remarkable doctors, she is doing well.

One thing that I have learned is that it is a good idea to deal with a medical complaint or illness as quickly as possible so that you can learn from others or possibly prevent others from becoming ill as they learn from your experiences.

Today, as we work through the pandemic, the spring quarter membership enrollment for Citrus County YMCA has been canceled. We hope to hold our usual quarter regularly scheduled meeting on July 8 at First Christian Church of Inverness. In the meantime, we are preparing for online group meetings. We are keeping in touch with our regular clientele for updates. If you are interested in participating please call our NAMI Citrus Line of 844-983-5555.

Dr. John Grace is a board-certified psychiatrist and NAMI-Citrus board member. Dr. Levens is president of NAMI-Citrus.

Physical health

As we back down and be safe, you can feel as though you are becoming stagnant. Without the gym and our typical social connections, it’s easy to lose motivation to exercise.

We are working to make this easier for all as creating 15-minute home-based workout videos showing both basic and advanced workouts.

These can be accessed by going to the Citrus County YMCA’s Facebook page. Keep in mind: you will help to keep blood pumping to the brain for a strong mind as well.

Mental health

In a time where many may be unable to leave their homes, social isolation, depression and anxiety become ever increasing.

It is very important in this time to engage with others in a safe way. Talking on the phone to friends and loved ones is a great way to keep in touch.

As we’re stuck at home, you may feel as though you’re treading water and not making any progress. This is a natural and healthy response.

Some harried parents forgo home school as weeks turn into months

We don’t have the luxury right now to not to be working. Some people aren’t working at all and they can make time to do all this stuff, but that for us is just not an option.

Meghan Perrone

American Press

Frustration is mounting as more families across the U.S. enter yet another week of total distance learning, and some say it will be their last.

Parents are forced to juggle work and family life as children are sent home to learn remotely due to the coronavirus pandemic.

Not only are parents struggling to keep up with the workload, but they’re also facing challenges with technology and fatigue.

Some parents are finding it difficult to keep track of their child’s progress, while others are overwhelmed by the amount of materials they need to manage.

For many, the transition to distance learning has been a difficult one, with parents feeling like they’re failing as educators.

Some parents have decided to forgo home school altogether, while others continue to work hard to make the best of the situation.

But for those who are still trying, there are resources available to help.

The Citrus County Chronicle has put together a schedule of upcoming sessions for potential parents and dual enrollment students.

Sessions last about an hour and provide detailed information about the application process, financial aid, placement testing and registration.

Session topics include:

- Dual Enrollment sessions
- Parent and dual enrollment sessions
- Financial aid, placement testing and registration

Sessions are free and available online.

Separation of powers
The men who wrote our Constitution knew they wanted a strong national government. The government under the Articles of Confederation just did not work. The delegates feared that giving too much power to any one person or group could be dangerous. The delegates decided that the powers of government should be divided. This idea is called separation of powers.

The Legislative Branch is Congress. The House of Representatives and Senate make laws, impose taxes and borrow money.

The Executive Branch is headed by the president. The president has many jobs. One is to see that the laws are carried out.

The Judicial Branch is headed by the Supreme Court, which decides whether laws passed by Congress are in line with the Constitution.

Compromise
How was the new Congress to be set up? How many members could each state send to Congress? There were big questions. It was a debate between big and small states.

Different ideas
Virginia was a big state. The Virginians suggested that the number of members be decided by the number of people who lived in the state. A smaller state, New Jersey, suggested that all states have the same number of members.

The Great Compromise
Connecticut came up with what is called “The Great Compromise.” This plan set up two lawmaking groups, or “houses,” as they are called. The House of Representatives was to be based on the number of people living in each state. The other house, the Senate, was to have the same number of members (two) from each state. Laws had to be passed by both houses.

Article I
The Constitution is divided into seven articles. Each article has different sections. Article I deals with the legislative branch.

Sara: Why did the teddy bear not want to go to dessert?
Sam: She was stuffed!

Cook’s Corner
You’ll need:
1. 1/3 cup light sour cream
2. 1 cup freshly grated parmesan cheese
3. 1/4 cup chopped parsley

What You’ll Do:
1. Boil cauliflower in chicken broth for 5 minutes.
2. Reduce heat, cover and simmer for 15 minutes.
3. Uncover and continue cooking until liquid is reduced and cauliflower is tender. Remove pan from heat.
4. Add butter, sour cream and cheese.Beat on low with a hand mixer until mixture is the consistency of mashed potatoes (it may be slightly chunky). Serve hot. Serves 4.

Eco Note
Farmers in parts of Pakistan are battling the worst locust plague in nearly 30 years after heavy rains from earlier tropical cyclones provided perfect conditions for unprecedented breeding and explosive population growth of the insects. Desert locust swarms have spread eastward from eastern Africa, from around the Red Sea to Iran, Pakistan and into parts of India.

For later:
Look through your newspaper for articles about both houses of Congress and what they are working on.
