First birthday for baby ‘Bear’

By Nancy Kennedy

It’s a big day for a big boy — Bronsell Emerson Sean Duncan, born with a rare genetic disease, turned 1 on Sept. 1, 2020 — a major milestone for a child who was normal in every way — weighing 7 pounds, 13 ounces and being 20 inches long on the day he arrived at Winnie Palmer Hospital for Women & Babies.

Like any 1-year-old, he has a big family — parents of Bronsell, who is a big boy with a big name, love him big time — they honestly can’t think of a way to celebrate just one birthday,” Nikki said.

“Absolutely,” agreed that the hospital had been deftly handling the hospital’s role in handling the baby from the day she arrived at Winnie Palmer Hospital for Women & Babies.

“Bronsell is a big boy with the big name also,” said Nikki Duncan, Bronsell’s mother. “One of only about 50 cases in the world, Bronsell was born with EBCL, a rare congenital malformation disease that has kept him in the hospital since the day he was born, Sept. 1, 2018. However, this big boy with the big name also has a big family — two brothers and sisters — who love him big time and gave their baby brother a big birthday day celebration at Orlando Health Winnie Palmer Hospital for Women & Babies.

“Why was he born with this condition? Massullo’s campaign team said he was born as a result of one of the seven new cases of COVID-19 reported in Citrus County on Aug. 30. Since Aug. 30, recorded hospital admissions increased 19 to 229.

Since Aug. 30, 229 people have tested positive (including seven non-residents), 229 have been hospitalized and 64 have died.

Miami reaches the East finals with 4-1 series triumph

The Reynolds AP basketball writer

The Miami Heat are headed to the Eastern Conference finals.

Giannis Antetokounmpo could only watch.

The fifth-seeded Heat finished off an upset of the NBA's best regular season team Tuesday night, topping the Milwaukee Bucks 104/4 in Game 5 of the NBA's Southeastern series — while Antetokounmpo, the league's reigning MVP, couldn't play because of a sprained right ankle.

Butler and Goran Dragic each scored 31 points for the Heat, who won the series 4-1 and will either Boston or Toronto when the NBA's final four gets underway next week. It's Miami's first time in the East finals since 2014, the first time Butler has gotten to the NBA's semifinals.

The Heat improved to 4-1 in road games against the NBA's top teams this season.

The Heat outscored the Bucks 29-11 in the second half.

The Bucks, who entered the series as the NBA's top seed, were without the All-Star forward Antetokounmpo, who was ruled out before the game because of an ankle injury suffered in Game 4.

Antetokounmpo had 21 points, 11 rebounds, five assists and four steals in 37 minutes of Game 4.

The Heat, who are now favored to win the NBA title, beat Antetokounmpo and the Bucks 125-113 in Game 4.

Antetokounmpo has played only 39 games this season because of injuries, and the Bucks are 6-9 without him.

Antetokounmpo is averaging 28.7 points and 11.1 rebounds a game in the NBA this season.

His debut came in 2010 as a 37th-round pick from Greece.

The Heat, the fifth seed in the NBA's Southeast Division, are back in the East finals for the first time since 2014.

President Biden is pressing Congress to add more money to its next stimulus bill, warning that a spending gap could widen in a fast-moving pandemic.

The White House said Thursday that Mr. Biden is presenting a case to Congress that the spending gap could be $2 trillion, a figure that includes his $1.9 trillion coronavirus relief proposal.

Mr. Biden has repeatedly made the case that Congress needs to provide more spending than it has already authorized to deal with the pandemic and economic disruption.

The White House said its figures are based on evidence that the economy continues to be weak, with the most recent employment data showing that the unemployment rate remains high and the number of jobs lost is still high.

The White House said the figures are based on a variety of economic indicators, including the most recent employment data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The White House said Mr. Biden has been clear about his goals for the stimulus bill, which include providing more aid to states and local governments, extending unemployment benefits and providing additional aid to small businesses.

The White House said Mr. Biden would be happy to work with Congress to find other ways to provide the necessary aid, but that he could not support bills that do not include his proposals.

The White House said Mr. Biden is calling on Congress to act quickly to provide the necessary aid, and that he will continue to work with Congress to find the best way to provide the necessary aid.

The White House said Mr. Biden is committed to working with Congress to find the best way to provide the necessary aid, and that he will continue to work with Congress to find the best way to provide the necessary aid.

Stop blaming messenger and deal with the facts

The report was "inadvertently" released to the public, the document says taken down, but not before the organizations saw it and reported on it.

DeSantis quibbled with both the facts in the report and the way the news media had reported on it.

Unfortunately, this is not the first time the governor has lashed out at news media for reporting on virus cases. In late May, following a meeting at the White House, the governor lectured reporters about how they were 'exaggerating his finger at them and claiming to have overlooked wild conspiracy theories about the outbreak.'

This came at a time when New York cases were still at the high, but declining, and Florida cases were low, but increasing at the time. DeSantis was quoted as criticizing the media by saying "so we have succeeded, and I think that people just don't want to recognize it because it challenges their narrative. It challenges their assumptions.

At this time, the state was reporting about 720 new cases a day, but within a month the state was reporting almost 3,000 cases a day. In the first two months Florida was one of the states with the most new infections, reporting almost 100,000. The state number has declined to about 3,000 new cases a day.

This episode underscores the fact that policies inform data and that media is an interpretive chess game. If we cannot change the facts, then we can change the interpretation. And when politicians are reporting on public health decisions, those politicians often lead from a position of ideology and power. The governor was reported almost daily by news media in May, and we have seen the results. The schools have opened, then closed, started with in-person instruction then closed, and some schools have not been significantly infected. Districts that have schools faces challenges open and closed public comment. The challenges they face reporting open and closed, and the number of cases being the biggest. Is the news accurate? Are the facts? The number of virus cases is a fact, just like the score of a baseball game is a fact. How one wants to interpret the facts is an individual choice, but all too often, when political leaders do not like the facts they turn to criticizing the messenger.

But blaming the media for their part in providing perspective, offering an alternative reality to feedback, part of that group, always supportive of a new head board of directors in the state of Florida. We have followed Mr. Bryant's contributions to the Citrus County Chronicle over the past 18 years. I find him to be an abreast of key facts and willing to accept other ideas and advice when needed to help our young children in Citrus County. The County is a part of the public school system. In today's environment, Ms. Bryant was quoted as criticizing the media by saying the county advised their are no regulations or rules on these homes and their occupants. AstraZeneca pauses COVID-19 vaccine work after possible side effect

Late-stage studies of AstraZeneca’s COVID-19 vaccine candidate are on hold while the company investigates whether a patient suffered a serious side effect, said the company.

In a statement issued Thursday evening, the company said its “standard review process paused vaccine to allow review of safety data.”

AstraZeneca didn’t reveal any information about the possible side effect except to call it “a potentially unexplained illness.” The health news site STAT first reported the pause in testing, saying the possible side effect occurred in the United Kingdom.

An AstraZeneca spokesperson confirmed the patient was in vaccine trials of Oxford University and Imperial College in Britain, and the company statement did not go into detail about what is happening to the patient. The trials also assess effectiveness by tracking who gets sick and who doesn’t between people getting the vaccine and those receiving a dummy shot.

The development came the same day that AstraZeneca and eight other companies issued an unprecedented pledge to develop only vaccines that are safe and effective before any get授权 for widespread use.

The U.S. has invested billions of dollars in efforts to quickly develop multiple vaccines. Because of their large size, the studies are considered the most important phase of study for picking less common side effects and establishing safety.

The announcement follows criticism that President Donald Trump pressured the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to approve a vaccine before it’s proven to be safe and effective.

The trials also assess effectiveness by tracking who gets sick and who doesn’t between people getting the vaccine and those receiving a dummy shot.

The development came the same day that AstraZeneca and eight other companies issued an unprecedented pledge to develop only vaccines that are safe and effective before any get authorization for widespread use.

The U.S. has invested billions of dollars in efforts to quickly develop multiple vaccines. Because of their large size, the studies are considered the most important phase of study for picking less common side effects and establishing safety.

The announcement follows criticism that President Donald Trump pressured the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to approve a vaccine before it’s proven to be safe and effective.

Late-stage studies of AstraZeneca’s COVID-19 vaccine candidate are on hold while the company investigates whether a patient suffered a serious side effect, said the company.

In a statement issued Thursday evening, the company said its “standard review process paused vaccine to allow review of safety data.”

AstraZeneca didn’t reveal any information about the possible side effect except to call it “a potentially unexplained illness.” The health news site STAT first reported the pause in testing, saying the possible side effect occurred in the United Kingdom.

An AstraZeneca spokesperson confirmed the patient was in vaccine trials of Oxford University and Imperial College in Britain, and the company statement did not go into detail about what is happening to the patient. The trials also assess effectiveness by tracking who gets sick and who doesn’t between people getting the vaccine and those receiving a dummy shot.

38 migrants rescued in Sahara Desert

The Associated Press — More than 80 African migrants have been rescued after being found in a remote stretch of the Saharan Desert where hundreds of others have died after the perilous journey in recent years, the International Organization for Migrants said Tuesday.

The 41 migrants, including 17 women and 25 men, were rescued Monday, along with a twin 4-year-old girl, and 42 males from Nigeria, Togo, Mali and Ghana, were in distress, dehydration and in need of medical assistance when they were found in the Oued Jemal area late last week, the IOM said.

Migrants rescued after being found in a remote stretch of the Saharan Desert over the holiday weekend, triggering destructive surge of cold air from Canada.

Heat and strong winds also hit California and parts of the Pacific Southwest region, shutting campgrounds all across parts of the Pacific Northwest over the holiday weekend, burning hundreds of thousands of acres and mostly destroying the small town of Malden in eastern Washington.

“Existing fires are devastating, and high winds are more common. That’s the situation in Northern California, where high and dry winds are expected until Wednesday. Public fire officials said it’s “unnerving” to see how events are playing extreme fire behavior. New fire starts are the three largest blazes in state history, which swept through the community of Malden and killed two people. The U.S. Forest Service on Monday decided to close all eight national forests in the state. That 2018 blaze was started by power lines and strong winds and tinder-dry conditions. Li- ders kicked up wildfires in the Sierra National Forest, San Bernardino and Angeles National Forests, San Francisco Bay Area. The previous record-setting blaze in the San Francisco Bay Area was the Glass Fire in Napa and Sonoma counties, and the forecast called for the arrival of the region’s notorious Santa Ana winds.

California was not alone. Hurricane-force winds and high tempera- tures kicked up wildfires across parts of the Pacific Northwest over the holiday weekend, burning hundreds of thousands of acres and mostly destroying the small town of Malden in eastern Washington.

The U.S. Forest Service warned that a record for the number of wildfires in a year has been set just two yearsago. That record was set in 2010, when a record-breaking wildfire season is just beginning. The previous record was 2010, when more than 170,000 custom- ers were affected by PG&E power to seek bankruptcy protection. To guard against repeat fires, the Pacific Gas & Electric company last year began preparing for power shutoffs when fire conditions are exceptionally dangerous.

St. Scholastica Knights of Columbus Council #5449 recently conducted their 21st annual “Tools for Schools” drive. The council collected school supplies for students in need. During the drive, many donated school supplies to Danierce Language Center, Pregnancy and Family Planning Center of Citrus County, St. John Paul II Catholic School and the Faith Formation Ministry of St. Scholastica Church. This year, it was challenging to collect school supplies due to COVID-19. The council acquired a large amount of school supplies and $525, which was distributed to the recipients of the drive for specific supplies. Pictured among a portion of the collected school supplies is Ron Kornatowski, Knights of Columbus, and Jeannie Hicks, among a portion of the collected school supplies. This day of service is a way to honor those who were lost and to rekindle the spirit of unity and sacrifice. For more information, please contact Katie Lucas at katie.lucas@homeinstead.com. An amendment is a change or addition. The first 10 amendments to the Constitution are called the Bill of Rights. They were added to limit the power of the national government over the people. Many of the men who wrote the Constitution felt that a bill of rights was not needed because these rights were already protected by state constitutions. Others argued that the Constitution says that all powers not given to the government go to the people. They thought that making a list of people’s rights was a good idea because they might leave one out.

The Bill of Rights

James Madison, then a representative from Virginia, realized that a bill of rights had to be added if the Constitution was to be accepted by the states. Some had agreed to sign only if this was done. Madison presented 17 amendments to Congress. These were cut down to 12.

On Oct. 2, 1789, President George Washington sent the states a copy of these amendments for their approval. By Dec. 15, 1791, enough states had approved 10 of the amendments, and the Bill of Rights was adopted. This week, we’ll learn about the first five amendments in the Bill of Rights. We’ll finish the last five in an upcoming issue.

The First Amendment

“Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.”

• Freedom of religion means that Congress cannot pass a law setting up a religion that everyone must follow. You are free to worship as you please.

• Freedom of speech means that you are free to speak out and give your side of things. Others are free to listen. However, there are some limits. You can’t shout “fire” in a crowded room when there is no fire.

• Freedom of the press means that members of the press do not have to get what they are planning to print or say approved by the government beforehand. They are free to print what they wish as long as it is not a deliberate lie.

• Freedom of assembly means that you are free to meet peacefully.

• Freedom of petition means that you are free to ask the government to correct things that you think are wrong.

The Second Amendment

• Guarantees the right to bear (carry) arms (weapons). Congress cannot prevent people from owning guns for their own protection.

• However, states and local governments can make laws about who may own them and how they are carried.

The Third Amendment

• The government cannot force citizens to keep soldiers in their homes. In Colonial times, citizens were forced to allow British soldiers into their homes.

The Fourth Amendment

• Limits searches and seizures. This amendment says that before police officers can enter your home, they must have a warrant, or legal paper from a judge, giving permission for a search or arrest.

The Fifth Amendment

• Grants the following rights:
  • A person cannot be brought to trial for a serious crime until a grand jury has studied the charges.
  • If you have been tried for a crime, you cannot be tried again for the same crime.
  • A person accused of a crime cannot be forced to say anything against himself.
  • The government cannot take away your life or property, or put you in prison, without “due process of law.”
  • If the government cannot take away your property for public use, it must pay you a fair price for that property.

In 2005, Betty Debnam, creator of The Mini Page®, worked closely with the National Archives in Washington, D.C., to create a nine-part series of issues about our U.S. Constitution. This is the eighth issue in the series, which will continue once a month until Election Day 2020.

Mini Jokes

Cal: What’s it called when a group of criminals fall into the ocean?
Carrie: A crime wave!

Eco Note

Are you back in your classroom, or learning at home? The Centers for Disease Control wants to make sure you know how to use a mask properly to protect others and yourself. Wear a mask that covers your nose and mouth in case you’re infected with COVID-19 but don’t have symptoms. Wear a mask in public when around people who don’t live in your household, especially when it may be difficult for you to stay 6 feet apart.

CITRUS COUNTY (FL) CHRONICLE

Sahar has been a witness to the simultaneous high intensity of the research at the cancer center. As she would bring her boyfried to our home when she visits us at Christmas. I’ve never met this gentleman and do not know his personal or social habi-

And I’ve been quite possible in our physical distance. During the last three months, she made me ask my self a some ques-

When South didn’t do that, West should have unblocked the club up under South’s armc. East should have won a trick with the club jack.

The second diamond lead with his ace and three trumps ending in the dummy. Next, he led a club to the jack. Second trick, single- queen appeared. The best West could do was to play the ace and declarer claimed 10 tricks.

There were three mistakes. The first was that he couldn’t lead a heart from the dummy. Apparently because he had a suit headed by the ace, South should have chosen to lead the queen. The dummy made it. The second mistake was his choice of the ace over the king of clubs at trick seven. Third, declarer should have led the best card, the queen, instead of the jack of clubs. The best West could do was to play the ace.

South was bid 9 not 6. He had four clubs, for three tricks, and 13 diamond values, for six tricks. The total was 13. There was no partnership, and declarer claimed 10 tricks.
