Assistance with utility bills available

Citrus County Housing Services continues to assist low-income residents with their utility bill payments.

The Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) helps low-income families with home heating and cooling costs. LIHEAP is funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services through the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity, and has been established to help qualifying low-income homeowners and renters pay for a portion of their primary heating costs.

LIHEAP is not designed to pay a household's total energy costs, but to provide supplemental assistance. Ordinarily, applications for LIHEAP are accepted by appointment only due to the demand for assistance.

For more information, please call 352-527-7520 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Arts feel pandemic pinch

COVID-19 worries force many festivals to cancel

With the art festival season on the horizon, local art group organizers have been facing tough decisions about their events.

Bridget Hanley, president of Rainbow Springs Art in Dunnellon, said her artists' gallery had been planning for months for the annual November Rainbow Springs Art Festival.

But then, the Micanopy Fall Festival, south of Gainesville, was canceled because of COVID-19. The McIntosh 1890s Festival, north of Ocala, followed suit. The fall Ocala Arts Festival was the next to be mothballed.

The Rainbow Springs gallery was monitoring these and other festivals. But what pushed Hanley at Rainbow Springs personally over the edge was when her neighbor died from the virus on July 29, 2020. By Aug. 5, Hanley, her gallery's board, and its members had voted to cancel the fall Rainbow Springs Art Festival. The group's board recently voted to hold a one-day festival on March 20, 2021.

The Rainbow Springs gallery, like many area artists, galleries, festivals, and arts organizations, has had to shut down, readjust, and reconfigure itself because of the virus.

Scaled-back Inverness festival set for Nov. 7-8

Unlike other area arts festivals that have been canceled this fall, the Inverness Festival of the Arts will carry on its annual tradition of selling decorative items to the public.

This year, the festival is from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 7-8, at The Depot, 300 N. Apopka Ave. in Inverness.

Inverness City Manager Eric Williams said the city decided to go ahead with the event because "people are desirous to go to things in an appropriate setting. We have (people) who have volunteered for these events. We think the infrastructure is already there."

The show has moved to The Depot from Courthouse Square, Williams said, because restaurants and bars have expanded service outside and "we felt there would be too many people in a small area."

Leo and Lea Bedinotti are two people who are bullish on The Depot as a festival site. They are president and vice president, respectively, of the Citrus County Craft Council.

The Bedinottis helped arrange the council's Harvest Moon Craft Show at The Depot on Sept. 12. Lea Bedinotti said the vendors wore masks, the artists were socially distanced from each other at tables, and many of the visitors wore masks. The artists had hand sanitizer at their tables.

Lea Bedinotti estimated maybe 400-500 visitors attended, but said she's no expert at estimating crowd size.

All the artists made a profit, she said, and the Crafts Council earned enough money to be able to turn more than $300 over to its charity for the festival, Nature Coast Ministries of Crystal River.

CR Council Seat 1 candidates address political forum

 Staff writer

Ken Brown Scott Davis

Crystal River Council Seat 1 incumbent Ken Brown and challenger Scott Davis introduced themselves to city voters and answered questions on issues during the Chronicle's political forum.

Here are some highlights from the forum, held Wednesday, Sept. 30, 2020, at the George Washington Carver Community Center:

Brown led off his opening statement talking about his personal and political history with the city, adding he's "always represented the best interests" of his constituents.

"All of us on council have worked on what's best for the citizens of Crystal River," the two-term councilman said.

Brown said he'll continue to advocate for "smart growth" if re-elected to council, protecting the city's natural resources while strengthening its revenue sources and securing safe development opportunities.

In Davis' opening statement, the longtime city resident said he is seeking join council now that his personal life gives him the time to participate.

He said the city isn't "in a doom-and-gloom situation" but "old issues" keep coming up, like boat mooring in King's Bay, derelict buildings, water-bottling, tourism and congestion on water and roadways.

Davis said he has no problem with city officials pursuing more funding to complete the long-awaited Riverwalk along the northern shores of King's Bay.

Robert Holmes Terry Thompson

Crystal River Council Seat 5 incumbent Robert Holmes and challenger Terry Thompson showcased their campaign platforms and policies during the Chronicle's political forum.

Here are some highlights from the event, held Wednesday, Sept. 30, 2020, at the George Washington Carver Community Center:

Leading off the forum with opening statements was Holmes, who introduced voters to his family history with Crystal River, where a young Holmes and his relatives moved from Ocala in 1968.

Of his 18 years total years on council — served in split terms — Holmes said he's most amazed by the city's people and how they unite to improve their city, like building the community center.

"I and some good friends spent approximately two years of weekends cutting concrete, plumbing, erecting hot, red steel, building walls — the list goes on," he said. "A community either worked on, or contributed to this beautiful building."

Thompson, in his opening statement, said he and his wife moved to the city five years ago from Ocala.

"We spent so many years and summers over here," he said, "but that's not why I'm running for office."

Thompson said he spent the last 30 years being involved in realty planning, zoning and

BOCC, City of Inverness honor Rainer Jakob

Special to the Chronicle

Inverness Sertoman Rainer Jakob was recently recognized for four decades of outstanding and dedicated service by both the Inverness City Council on Sept. 15, 2020, and the Citrus County Board of Commissioners (BOCC) on Sept. 22, for his work as a driving force behind the successes of Sertoma National, the Southeast Region, the Heart of Florida District and the Inverness and Citrus Sertoma clubs.

Since joining Sertoma in 1979, Jakob has served on every committee and in every office, often more than once, including president and chairman of the board of his local clubs and continues as the go to Sertoman in Citrus County when needed for fund raisers and work projects. He has served Sertoma as a Distinguished District Governor, Regional Director, member of the National Board of Directors, Sertoma Foundation District and National Representative and continues to advise Sertoma Governors, Directors and National Officers when asked.

Jakob, was not only instrumental in forming of the Inverness Sertoma Club on Sept. 26, 1980, he also was the person behind building Citrus County's first and only speech and hearing clinic in Lecanto.

During the time the clinic was in operation, it served as many as 400 child and infant client appointments.

Today, testing is accomplished with a fully equipped mobile unit. The mobile unit travels to preschools and day care centers throughout the Tampa Region, including Citrus County.

He was also the founder of the Oktoberfest held for over 35 years in Crystal River and the annual Golf for Kids golf tournament which has raised over $200,000 for speech and hearing programs in Citrus County.

Along with his wife, Sandy, he has dedicated untold hours to the betterment of area residents through his myriad church, scouts, and community service-based charitable works.

For information on how to become a member of Inverness Sertoma Club, contact Cynthia Oswald at Invernesssertoma@gmail.com.

Inaugural Scallop Treasure Hunt ends

Todd Crandall, a We Care truck driver, and Ashley Byrne draw the winning ticket belonging to Ruth Powers for the $2,500 We Care Great Scallop Hunt grand prize to benefit We Care.

NANCY KENNEDY
Staff writer

Although no one found either of the two "We Care scallops" that were placed in the Gulf for people who paid to join the inaugural We Care Great Scallop Hunt to find, a local supporter of We Care in Homosassa was awarded the $2,500 grand prize Wednesday, Sept. 30, 2020, during a Facebook Live drawing.

About 57 people joined the hunt, either purchasing a $50 season ticket or a $25 one-day ticket.

"With COVID and this being our first year, we raised only $2,400," said Ashley Byrne, We Care development manager. "Even though it wasn't as much as our grand prize, we're still really excited and look forward to putting this on again in the coming scallop seasons and keep growing and growing, and maybe next year somebody will find it."

Florida Artists Gallery closes doors amid pandemic

Floral City couple plans to return overseas

MARGO WILSON
For the Chronicle

Ann and Bill Covington once had an art gallery in Floral City. And it was good for the Covingtons and for their artists and customers.

But that was then, and this is now, the time of a pandemic. So, it's time for the Covingtons to move on.

The couple closed their Florida Artists Gallery on Orange Avenue during the COVID-19 lockdown and they have not reopened it.

The gallery has been a Floral City fixture since the Covingtons purchased the historic Jont Knight house in 2011. Ann, a native of South Africa, wants to return to live near her daughter and brother. But an extra incentive, she said, is that the United States' response to the coronavirus "has really shown the frailties of this country."

She and Bill plan to spend six months of their year in South Africa, at a condo they purchased on a beach about an hour from Cape Town and near mountains and wineries.

They plan to return to the U.S. for six months and travel to see friends in such places as the Blue Ridge Mountains and California.

Yet, closing the door on her gallery has not been emotionally easy, she said. "In this area, there are a lot of nice people. I got to meet them by having an art gallery," she said.

Ann Covington stands outside the historic 1905 Jont Knight House on Orange Avenue in this December 2011 file photo. Covington and her husband, Bill, eventually turned the house into the Florida Artists Gallery, showcasing the works of local artists.

Last solo recording of Dave Brubeck to be released

RIO RANCHO, N.M. — Nearly eight years after his death, the final solo recording of late American jazz pianist legend Dave Brubeck is set for release next month.

Verve Records announced last week that "Lullabies" — a collection of intimate standards often played for children — will be available Nov. 6 in the latest effort by a label to preserve unreleased jazz recordings.

"Dave was mainly thinking of it as a sort of documentation and gift for immediate family and some close family friends," said Chris Brubeck, his son, who is also a jazz musician and plays multiple instruments but mainly electric bass and trombone.

And there the recordings would have stayed until someone at Verve Records heard a song for the collection and thought it would be great to make it available to the public, the younger Brubeck said.

"He knew thousands of songs from playing in nightclubs and the cowboy jazz bands he joined as a kid," Brubeck said. "Even though this may seem like a stretch when I hear this particular performance, it just slays me because there's just so much unbelievable wisdom in each of his fingers, how he approaches the notes and the touch."

The latest release includes an interpretation of George Gershwin's "Summertime" from the 1935 opera Porgy and Bess, the 1913 "Danny Boy," and "Over the Rainbow" from the 1939 film "The Wizard of Oz."

It also contains original pieces he wrote for his longtime wife, Iola, and an interpretation of

Chrissy Teigen and John Legend grieve their miscarriage

LOS ANGELES — Chrissy Teigen said she and John Legend are in "deep pain" following her miscarriage, which she announced in a heart-wrenching social media post.

Teigen wrote that they were "driving home from the hospital with no baby. This is unreal."

"We are shocked and in the kind of deep pain you only hear about, the kind of pain we've never felt before. We were never able to stop the bleeding and give our baby the fluids he needed, despite bags and bags of blood transfusions. It just wasn't enough," she wrote in a post late Wednesday, alongside a picture of herself in tears on a hospital bed.

Another image showed her and Legend grieving together over a bundle cradled in her arms.

Revealing they had chosen the name Jack, the model and the musician wrote of their love for their lost son, who would have been their third child.

"To our Jack — I'm so sorry that the first few moments of your life were met with so many complications, that we couldn't give you the home you needed to survive. We will always love you," she wrote.

Teigen announced she was pregnant with her third child in August. She had been hospitalized with excessive bleeding earlier in the week.

Thanking those who have been sending "positive energy, thoughts and prayers," Teigen concluded, "We are so grateful for the life we have, for our wonderful babies Luna and Miles, for all the amazing things we've been able to experience. But everyday can't be full of sunshine. In this darkest of days, we will grieve, we will cry our eyes out. But we will hug and love each other harder and get through it."

In this area, the Inverness Festival of the Arts, planned for Nov. 7-8, is one of the only major art festivals that's still planned. And Inverness is scaling back its event.

Hanley said her neighbor's death brought home the tragedy and the realness of the coronavirus.

Her neighbor had been "one of the first people to welcome us to the area," Hanley said about when she and her husband moved from Pennsylvania to their home on Lake Rousseau in 2017.

"She invited us over for Christmas dinner. She had presents for us, too," Hanley said.

Hanley said many of the artists who normally would have participated in the Rainbow Springs festival "were too scared to set up their booths. ... Also, it was too hard to get volunteers when we couldn't guarantee their safety."

The gallery members also would have had to worry about "what if a bunch of people got sick? What if one of us got sick? There were so many variables," Hanley said.

The Rainbow Springs gallery's experience is hardly unique.

Terry Green, president of the Homosassa Civic Club, said canceling the annual November Homosassa Arts, Crafts and Seafood Festival has been "very emotional for us. We wrestled with it and wrestled with it."

The festival is the club's major fundraiser each year and helps support such things as scholarships, programs for adults and children, tutoring and a Girl Scout troop.

In the end, Homosassa Civic Club members decided "there was no way for us to put in the safeguards," Green said.

The festival relies on volunteers, Green said, and one of the first issues club members raised during festival discussions was that there are a lot of cash sales during the festival.

"People were fearful of not knowing where that money came from," Green said.

"We have about 150 members and the majority are over 50 and some are over 60 and some are over 70, like me," Green said. "We don't want to take the risk. It's not worth it."

Over at the Yankeetown Art, Crafts and Seafood Festival, the concerns were similar, according to Seafood Festival Chairman Steve Norton, who's also first vice president of the Inglis Yankeetown Lions Club, the group that was to host the canceled November event.

"Service clubs, as a general rule, are aging," Norton said. "Lions Clubs are aging. A lot of our members are aging. They don't want to be out in the public."

The Art, Crafts and Seafood Festival is the Lions Club's major annual fundraiser, he said. Although the group was able to hold its annual pancake breakfast during Super Bowl weekend in early February, the virus also forced the club to cancel its annual fishing tournament in April, according to Norton.

"We're as disappointed as everyone else," Norton said about the demise of the Seafood Festival this year.

Disappointment is the name of the game, as well, at the Ocala Arts Festival, which also is canceled.

Maggie Wheatley, administrative coordinator of Fine Arts for Ocala (FAFO), which oversees the Ocala Arts Festival, said her group spent months trying to decide if they were going to cancel the October event.

MARGO WILSON/For the Chronicle

Board members considered requiring artists to set up their tents in every other space, limiting the public's points of entry and exit, and asking volunteers to patrol the portapotties and to sanitize each one after each use.

Wheatley said as the group looked at the matter, board members realized, "we will be bringing in people from around the country to our downtown area. We have artists who come from California, Maine, New York," Wheatley said.

"It was too much for us. We would put our people in danger. We would still not be able to control everyone about wearing masks," she said.

She added, "How would we limit how many people went into the tents? What about the bathroom situation? Most of our volunteers are elderly. They are in the demographic for the virus. There was too much at risk here."

The Fine Arts for Ocala board voted to cancel the festival, its major annual fundraiser.

Meanwhile, the City of Inverness is one of the sole area groups that has decided to proceed with its fall Festival of the Arts from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 7-8. The city council has chosen to "proceed on a smaller scale," said Liz Fernley, the city's director of events and marketing.

"The city feels we have these great venues," she said.

The Festival of the Arts will be held at The Depot, with artists setting up at least six feet apart at the outdoor site, she said. The artists will have six-foot-long tables and no tents. There will be about 20 to 30 artists, rather than the usual 80 or more. The show will not be juried, as in the past, because the logistics of judging the art during a pandemic proved too complicated, according to Fernley.

The exhibitors and vendors will wear masks. A DJ will spin jazz or easy-listening tunes, but there will be no live music.

"We are hoping to support a safe environment and to support local artists," Fernley said.

The groups that have canceled their fall arts festivals are contemplating how to recover some of their lost revenue, continue their charity work and keep people interested in their events and organizations.

Green of the Homosassa Civic Club said his group is considering sponsoring an event in the spring, including possibly reviving the Homosassa Mullet Toss, a local tradition that ended a few years ago. He said he doesn't know yet if a spring event would involve artists.

Green said because the club has been frugal in managing its money, its charitable contributions this year shouldn't be affected.

In Yankeetown, the Lions Club, which sponsors the Arts, Crafts, and Seafood Festival, spends at least 60% of its charitable funds on local programs that support eye health, said the festival's 2020 chair Norton. And the festival is the club's major fundraising event.

"We're trying to figure out some fundraising methods," he said.

"We'd like to thank everyone for their support over the years and hopefully, we'll have a better time next year," Norton added.

The Rainbow Springs gallery not only is planning a spring festival, but also has realized "We have to make a dedicated commitment to being online," the gallery's President Hanley said.

The gallery subsequently has tuned up its website and added an online store at www.rainbow-springsart.com, where the public not only can purchase art but can sign up for art classes. Hanley said the gallery also has held two Art Mart Gallery auctions on Facebook.

"Our artists are shipping to Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. ... We can now focus on smaller, more impactful things," Hanley said.

In Ocala, to compensate for the canceled Ocala Arts Festival, which had been planned for Oct. 24-25, Fine Arts for Ocala (FAFO) is planning "mini events" during October, said Wheatley. FAFO and the Marion Cultural Alliance are teaming up on "Community," a juried show just for Marion County artists, from Oct. 2-31 at the Alliance's Brick City Gallery in downtown Ocala. There are no entry fees for the show, Wheatley said.

Meanwhile, in August, Ocala arts patrons Lisa and David opened the Art-Castle "pop-up" art project in a refurbished former Coca-Cola bottling plant at 939 N. Magnolia Ave. The gallery, which more formally will be known as NoMa (for North Magnolia), is not charging fees to the 15 Marion County artists invited to display their works in the show that closed Sept. 26. FAFO is renting the NoMa space for an October show, "Alone Together," featuring the "Best of Show" winners of the past five Ocala Art Festivals. Other exhibitors are involved in a FAFO emerging artists' program, according to Wheatley.

During October, FAFO is sponsoring a workshop for emerging artists to teach them such things as how to apply for art shows, set up booths at festivals and market themselves. FAFO also is planning a talk and walking tour, "Celebration of Horticulture" on Oct. 29 from 5-7 p.m. at the Brick City Center for the Arts, according to Wheatley.

FAFO is working with the City of Ocala to develop some public art projects. And FAFO is continuing to promote art education and may have a modified spring event for student artists, Wheatley said. At the same time, FAFO is planning for its Mother's Day 2021 Symphony Under the Stars concert, which it had to cancel in 2020, and it's planning for the 2021 fall arts festival, Wheatley said.

"We're going to keep moving forward," she said.

Nevertheless, it's been tough rolling along with the coronavirus punches. As Terry Green at the Homosassa Art and Seafood Festival said, "In the past, I've been concerned that we'd be involved in a hurricane or rain. We don't get rained out. We will hold our event anyway."

In 2019, "We had a huge rain on Friday night, and it washed out several of the vendors' booths. They had to relocate," Green said. "But the weather was good for the rest of the weekend, and we had a record weekend."

Then 2020 came along.

As Rainbow Springs gallery's Hanley said, "Originally, I thought I'd be more devastated about not having the festival, but I'm relieved.

"After my neighbor died, I felt, 'I'm done,'" she said.

State BRIEF

Lottery winner out of luck when ticket gets lost in mail

RIDGE MANOR — A woman who won $1,000 in a second chance drawing on July 29 isn't getting her prize because the certified letter she sent to the Florida Lottery's headquarters never arrived.

Sue Burgess told WFLA that officials in Tallahassee told her "no ticket, no prize."

The second chance lottery prize gives winners limited time to turn in a ticket to claim the prize. Their options are to either put the ticket in a drop box at a local lottery office, which were not then open to the public due to the coronavirus pandemic, or mail them to the headquarters.

Burgess told the television station she felt it would be safer to send the ticket via certified mail with the U.S. Postal Service.

The tracking information shows the ticket arrived at Tallahassee post office at 7:12 a.m. on Aug. 12. But the online tracking shows the ticket was never delivered to the lottery office.

When Burgess called, lottery officials told her that without a ticket, the prize would go to an alternate winner.

In a second chance game, the lottery has a record of winners because players register their names and contact information. Burgess told the station she was notified she won by a lottery official who called to give her the good news.

Typically, lottery winners of more than $600 can submit winning tickets in person at their local lottery office. But because of COVID-19, offices were closed to the public. Burgess says she was told she could send the ticket via certified mail or leave the ticket in a drop box at a local lottery office.

In a statement to the station, the postal service offered an apology to Burgess for any "inconvenience."

Marion authorities arrest suspect in Citrus shooting

JEFF BRYAN
News editor

A kidnapping and a shooting that spanned two counties Monday, Sept. 28, 2020, ended with the arrest of a 33-year-old Ocala man Tuesday, Sept. 29, according to the Marion and Citrus County sheriff's offices.

Sidney Benton

Following the series of events, Marion detectives arrested and charged Sidney Rechee Benton with one count each of possession of a weapon or ammo by a convicted felon; aggravated battery using a deadly weapon; and aggravated assault with a deadly weapon without intent to kill.

In addition, Marion authorities served three warrants issued by the Citrus County Sheriff's Office: one count of possession of a weapon or ammo by a convicted felon; preventing communication with a law enforcement officer; and kidnapping/false imprisonment. Citrus County authorities also plan to charge Benton with attempted murder and shooting into an occupied dwelling.

Benton remains in custody at the Marion County Detention Facility with no bond.

According to victim reports taken by Marion and Citrus County detectives, Benton had been on a "dope binge" and at some point lost track of his drugs and began threatening the two victims. Those threats included pointing a pistol and an AR-15 rifle at the victims while threatening to shoot them. At one point, he handcuffed the two victims together and poured lighter fluid over one of them and said he was going to set the victim on fire.

Eventually Benton released the two victims to help him search for his drugs. At that point, one victim was able to escape and headed to a residence in Inverness where Benton showed up and fired several shots into the home, according to records. The casings found were consistent with an AR-15 style rifle.

During a search of Benton's home, authorities found two sets of handcuffs, lighter fluid, a .22 caliber pistol and a partially burned white T-Shirt.

Benton, during a post-Miranda interview, declined to speak with authorities.

According to Citrus County court records, Benton awaits a conference hearing Oct. 22, 2020, with Judge Richard "Ric" Howard on charges of trafficking methamphetamine and resisting an officer without violence from a December 2019 arrest by the CCSO.

Sheriff drug raid finds meth trafficking; yields two arrests

BUSTER THOMPSON
Staff writer

Citrus County Sheriff's Office narcotics detectives raided a Floral City home, seizing almost a quarter pound of methamphetamine and arresting a pair of residents.

Tommie Durell Neal Jr., 35, and 26-year-old Rebecca Ann Carter were jailed after members of the sheriff's Tactical Impact Unit executed a warrant the morning of Thursday, Oct. 1, 2020, to search the property in the 10900 block of East Trails End Road.

According to a sheriff's office news release, the warrant came as a result of a monthslong investigation into the couple and their alleged dealing in meth, heroin and fentanyl. During their search of the home, authorities found 108.5 grams — 3.82 ounces — of meth, 0.98 grams of fentanyl, marijuana, drug-manufacturing equipment and ammo, according to the sheriff's office.

Neal and Carter were charged with trafficking in meth, possessing fentanyl with intent to sell, possessing ammunition as a convicted felon, operating a drug dwelling, possessing less than 20 grams of marijuana and possessing drug paraphernalia.

Their bonds were each set at $47,000. According to the sheriff's office, Neal has 10 prior felony convictions; Carter has seven felony charges — their offenses relating to the sale of narcotics.

Stocks gain as market eyes gov't aid talks

Associated Press

NEW YORK — U.S. stocks climbed on Thursday, but only after pinballing through another shaky day of trading, as Wall Street waits to see if Washington can get past its partisanship to deliver another economic rescue package.

The S&P 500 ended the day 17.80 points higher, or 0.5%, at 3,380.80, but it came from an early 1% gain to a slight loss before arriving there.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 35.20 points, or 0.1%, to 27,816.90 after earlier bouncing between a gain of 259 points and a loss of 112. The Nasdaq composite rose a healthier 159.00 points or 1.4%, to 11,326.51 as big tech-oriented stocks propped up the market, much as they have through the pandemic.

Such big swings have become typical recently, as investors handicap the chances of a deal on Capitol Hill to send more cash to Americans, restore jobless benefits for laid-off workers and deliver assistance to airlines and other industries hit particularly hard by the pandemic.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin continued their talks on Thursday, but no breakthrough arrived before stock trading ended on Wall Street. Instead, there were only hopes that were periodically raised and dashed as government officials took turns criticizing each other.

"The market, for lack of really anything else to trade off of, has responded to these headlines on the potential for stimulus," said Scott Wren, senior global market strategist at Wells Fargo Investment Institute.

Data reports released in the morning also painted a mixed picture on the economy, which added to the market's sloshing around.

One indicated the pace of layoffs across the country may have slowed last week, with the number of workers filing for unemployment benefits falling to 837,000 from 873,000. It's a larger decline than economists expected, though the number remains incredibly high compared with before the pandemic.

"We're certainly expecting the employment situation to slowly improve," Wren said. "Things seem to be moving in the right direction."

Consumer spending also strengthened by more than expected in August, which is key because it's the main driver of the U.S. economy. But other reports were more discouraging. Personal incomes weakened by more than expected last month, and growth in the country's manufacturing sector also fell short of forecasts.

Other warning signs are looming for the economy, which has seen some slowdowns recently after the last round of stimulus approved by Congress expired. The Walt Disney Co. and other major companies have announced even more layoffs this week, and the clock is ticking on Washington to offer more support.

The CEO of American Airlines said that it would reverse the furloughs of 19,000 workers if Washington can reach a deal with $25 billion for airlines "over the next few days." United Airlines told government leaders that it could also undo the furloughs of 13,000 workers.

United Airline's stock gained 1.2%, and American Airlines shares rose 2.4%, but only after a turbulent day of ups and downs.

Continued strength for Big Tech stocks helped to lift the market. Amazon, Microsoft, Apple, Netflix, Facebook and Google's parent company alone accounted for the bulk of the S&P 500's gain.

The market's turbulent moves were reminiscent of Wednesday's, as well as of the last several weeks, as rising and falling hopes for a deal on Capitol Hill have kept markets shaky.

Investors say another round of economic aid from Congress is crucial given the slowdowns already seen. Mnuchin and Pelosi have worked effectively together in the past, and they helped drive through the previous economic rescue approved by Congress in March.

PLANNING AHEAD

CR knows what it wants the community to look like

Some locations have a greater sense of “place” than others. It’s an “I know what I like and I’ll recognize it when I get there” sort of thing. Those places are welcoming and engaging, regardless of whether one arrives on foot or a bike, in a car or public transit. Downtown Winter Garden, to our east, is often cited as a city that transformed its downtown into “the commercial and cultural capital of west Orange County.” Grand words, but it still has that small-town feel.

Crystal River is on the same journey. Within the last few years it has updated its Comprehensive Plan and adopted a Redevelopment Plan. Now it has approved an overlay to the land development code for the downtown area, known as the Community Redevelopment Area (CRA). The CRA development rules — now available in a compact, illustrated, 40-page document — seek to ensure that growth is guided to protect waterways and natural resources, provide predictability to property owners about what may be built, promote new investment, enhance walkability and interconnectivity, and create meaningful places.

Tangentially, Crystal River is also working on a plan to present to FDOT regarding how it wants the S.R. 44 entrance to the city to look and function. Planning consultants conducted a virtual multi-day charrette earlier this year to garner public input for it. The 44 Study Area abuts the CRA at U.S. 19, so it’s clear that the city is looking at the big picture.

One of the most interesting things about the new CRA district rules is their focus on form-based codes. In this way of thinking, development is regulated by the physical form of building types rather than separation of uses. For example, the CRA allows mixed-use development — buildings that fit well in their surrounding neighborhood, and may encompass residential along with commercial or office or dining.

Form-based codes address building placement, size, look, form and character. It’s about neighborhood context rather than one-size-fits-all. Form-based codes are tools to implement a community’s plan — a way to ensure that future development meets citizen vision and standards.

Another plus — form-based codes help add value. Developers interested in the CRA area can study the new, well-illustrated document to understand what’s expected and how they can execute while fitting into the neighborhood.

Crystal River also has committed to the Complete Streets concept of designing multi-modal thoroughfares that incorporate parking, sidewalks, lighting, plantings, streetscape elements such as wayfinding signage and street furniture, and bicycle lanes where practical.

As the Form-Based Code Institute says, buildings should welcome people, not repel them, and great streets happen when road and building designs are matched.

The life of our community is shaped by the built environment, and the built environment is shaped by us. We applaud Crystal River for taking firm steps to create the city that everyone will be able to enjoy.

THE ISSUE:

Crystal River adopts new, modern development code for the CRA district.

OUR OPINION:

Good move to create simplified process and more-welcoming spaces.

Undermining election confidence

Free and fair elections are essential to American democracy. Election officials take pride in the professionalism and efficiency with which they operate. But our president repeatedly spews lies and misinformation that cast doubt about election integrity. Here are his own words:

March 30, regarding a proposed coronavirus relief bill that would have broadened access to absentee voting: “They had things — levels of voting that, if you ever agreed to it, you’d never have a Republican elected in this country again.”

Via Twitter:
 May 28: “MAIL-IN VOTING WILL LEAD TO MASSIVE FRAUD AND ABUSE. IT WILL ALSO LEAD TO THE END OF OUR GREAT REPUBLICAN PARTY ...”

July 21: “Mail-In Voting, unless changed by the courts, will lead to the most CORRUPT ELECTION in our Nation’s History!”

Aug. 20, concerning polling sites: “We’re going to have sheriffs, and we’re going to have law enforcement, and we’re going to have, hopefully, US attorneys, and we’re going to have everybody...” <https://tinyurl.com/y5otz7ys>

Sept. 2, encouraging North Carolinians to send in an absentee ballot and then go vote in person on Election Day: “Let them send it in and let them go vote, and if their system’s as good as they say it is, then obviously they won’t be able to vote.”

Sept. 8, to a crowd in North Carolina: “Watch those ballots. ... You know, you have a Democrat governor, you have all these Democrats watching that stuff. ... Be poll watchers when you go there. Watch all the thieving and stealing and robbing they do ...”

State and local elections officials across the country dispute claims like these and do their utmost to ensure secure voting. The Brookings Institute cites multiple studies, including the Heritage Foundation, showing no evidence that either party benefits more from mail-in ballots. And there is no evidence of widespread mail-in fraud.

Meanwhile, intelligence officials continue to warn that foreign governments, including Russia, China and Iran, are engaging in overt and covert operations to influence our election. These governments are attempting to sow chaos among American voters by misinformation and cyberattacks. Yet the White House ignores or downplays this interference.

The president’s words speak for themselves. He continues his incendiary rhetoric, undermining confidence in our elections, and intimidating voters, while silent about true threats. Something is deeply wrong.

Trump refuses to fund post office

There been this back and forth about Trump’s position on the post office, and I’m frankly sick and tired of the lies that he has nothing to do with it.

President Donald Trump said recently he opposes much-needed funding for the United States Postal Service because he doesn’t want to see it used for mail-in voting this November.

By directly linking USPS funding to mail-in voting, Trump is fueling allegations that he is trying to manipulate the postal system for political gain. The pandemic has led to record-shattering levels of voting-by-mail, but Trump has tried to restrict the voting method because he says it will hurt his re-election and Republicans across the board.

They want $25 billion, billion, for the post office. Now they need that money in order to make the Post Office work so it can take all of these millions and millions of ballots,” Trump said, repeating his false claims that mail-in voting would be “fraudulent.”

“But if they don’t get those two items that means you can’t have universal mail-in voting because you they’re not equipped to have it,” Trump added. Now these are Trump’s own words, OK? They’re on record. Removing mailboxes and sorting machines just before an election is not happenstance! The hand-picked donor postmaster general still hasn’t supplied Congress as to why now? Why deconstruct the post offices before the election and the holidays? This nonsense about Obama did it, gets old after awhile. This was done on Trumps watch, with his postmaster general, not Obama’s.

David Becker, executive director of the nonpartisan Center for Election Innovation and Research, said Trump’s attacks on the USPS hurt voters, including many of his own supporters who vote by mail.

During an interview on Fox News, Trump said that if the USPS does not receive the additional $25 billion funding request that Democrats included in the ongoing stimulus negotiations, then he believes the post office won’t be able to handle the influx of mail-in ballots in the upcoming election.

Hate and lies toward the president

In response to why I support Trump, the reasons are many, but the most glaring is I make sure that when the propaganda wheels grind, such as the outright lie that Trump disparaged out troops, I ignore them, as I ignore most of what the mainstream media regurgitates on a daily basis. Anyone with ears will listen to military people who were with him say he never said that. If anyone thinks a general in our armed services would stand there and allow that to be said — well the hate and lies have already done their intended damage!

Don’t tolerate food insecurity

Food insecurity has existed in the United States as long as I can remember; though with this pandemic, so many people out of work and our Congress at a stalemate on the issuance of additional aid, it seems to be a problem exacerbated. How can we consider ourselves the richest country when so many, especially children, exist in a state of perpetual hunger. Starving children in the critical years of their body and brain growth creates huge learning issues for these children, and for us. How long can we tolerate this? We send surplus food to other countries, yet allow so many of our own citizens go hungry? If we continue to claim we are a Christian nation, maybe it is time to begin living by the Christian principles we espouse!

Allow American greatness to return

As we all are acutely aware, these are unprecedented times. Not simply because of the pandemic, racial injustice, unprecedented wildfires and other climate change impacts, but also because of the complex interconnections among the pandemic, climate change, racial injustice, economic decline and unemployment and presidential negligence.

The sidelining of science and denial of factual information by our president has been a major contributor to the current situations. The fact that the U.S. has 4% of the world’s population but 21% of the world’s coronavirus deaths is evidence that Trump’s ignorance and denial has already been lethal. In the years ahead, projections indicate that denial of climate change and refusal to either reduce carbon emissions or plan for adaptation is likely to be even more lethal for future generations. Racial unrest is destined to continue so long as the president and the general public continue to deny and fail to address the existence of systemic racism. And, tragically, it is people of color and the poor who are most vulnerable to COVID-19 and the impacts of global warming.

By Trump’s own recorded admission to author Bob Woodward, he is guilty of negligence. The GOP continues to enable Trump’s frightening and outrageous behavior. In the upcoming general election, all who seriously care about the future of democracy and humanity at large should vote for Joe Biden and informed Democrats at all levels of local, state and national government. American greatness must be allowed to return.

Get an ozone machine for mold problem

(Re the Wednesday, Sept. 30, 2020, Sound Off, “There’s mold at my work”): For the person that called about mold issues, there are machines out there called ozone machines and they do work. They kill the mold. Unfortunately, the area has to be evacuated by plants and animals and people while they ozone it for an hour or so and then they have to fling open the windows, air it out and the mold is dead.

Where’s the debate coverage?

I got a big laugh this morning when I opened my morning Chronicle (Wednesday, Sept. 30, 2020). Someone forgot to tell Gerry and his staff that there was a presidential debate last night. Oh, we might report on that next week, possibly.

Too many kids on the pier

I went to see Wallace Brooks and Liberty Park and they are beautiful. I am walking in the evening with my sister. When I got to Liberty Park, I went to the pier and I could not get on the pier. There were eight, nine, 10 kids in their bathing suits jumping into the water. There was a sign as you enter the pier that says, “No swimming,” and there are alligators in there. At the building before the pier, there was total chaos with the backpacks, bikes, shoes, socks — everything you could think of — all over the place. It was very disgusting and discouraging. I did not get a chance to walk on the pier, with all those children (there). I know it’s not that far from the police station. Maybe somebody on a bicycle can make periodic runs through that Wallace Brooks and Liberty Park. I’m going to try it again and I’ll see what happens. I was not really impressed with the swimmers.

"It has taken a long time, much too long," he said. "It's at a time the Riverwalk needs to be completed."

Instead of using its own coffers, Davis said, the city should hunt down grants and other outside funding opportunities.

Brown said he is 100% in support of finishing the Riverwalk, especially now with affected property owners approving of it.

However, the self-described fiscal conservative said he won't "put the city in the red" to wrap up construction, saying city staff will continue to apply for grants.

When it comes to Crystal River's spending priorities, Brown said he's proud the city's tax or millage rate on its properties went up less than a point since his first term on council in 2012.

"We protect the taxpayer's money and we do not go to our reserves," Brown said, clarifying the city did use reserves to recover after Hurricane Hermine in September 2016. "We spend money where money needs to be spent."

Davis said he'd like the city to invest beyond its downtown, like in communities east of U.S. 19 and around Copeland Park, to help combat against blight.

"We need to all work together to get our whole town looking as good as we have there," he said, "so when everybody comes to town, they can think about moving here ... and just making a better situation for everyone around."

Asked what his top accomplishment was while in office, Brown said his role on council is part of a larger partnership.

"When you're a council member, it's not a singular job," he said. "You always want to vote not for what you think is best, but you want to vote for what's best for the city, and I've always done that."

If elected, Davis said he'd be different from prior city officials because he'll get a handle on recurring problems, and, in closing, Davis implored city voters to research Brown's record.

"I hope you ask him after eight years in office why he's not addressed any of these major problems I've mentioned, he said, "and these problems have existed for years."

As a response, Brown encouraged the public to question him about his tenure on council.

"Everything that Mr. Davis addressed this evening ... we have accomplished," he said. "We've accomplished things that small, little cities like ours have never even dreamed of accomplishing."

ordinances — experiences he'll use to get Crystal River prepped for the encroaching Suncoast Parkway.

"Everybody that's gonna come up that road is going to turn left and come into this town," he said. "We need to think of the future, we need to take this city to the point that we can provide good jobs out of what happens to us because we will see growth."

Along with tying the city's Crosstown Trail to county trails, Thompson said he's for the Riverwalk and city officials' continued search to fund its final stretch of construction along King's Bay's northern shores.

Thompson said Crystal River can take advantage of its state senator, Wilton Simpson, becoming the senate president over the next two years by lobbying him for funding.

"If there's ever going to be an opportunity to get money and bring it into the city to get projects done that we want, now is the time," he said.

Holmes said he was on council when the city installed the first section of the Riverwalk by the Crystal Lodge, and he's in support of seeking monies from the state.

"I do not want the city in a financial bind for it," he said. "We have addressed our lobbyist in Tallahassee."

On the subject of city spending priorities, Holmes said council members dissect the budget to make wise investment decisions.

"I don't believe we're spending too much out of pocket," he said, "and I don't want to spend too much out of pocket for things that do not benefit the citizens of Crystal River."

Thompson said he's been hearing concerns from taxpayers questioning if the city's money "is being allocated in the right place."

"There are probably areas that money can be moved around; I'm not in favor of raising taxes at all," he said. "We can provide more services for the same money."

Holmes said his biggest accomplishments on council was helping create the Turkey Oak Drive bypass to U.S. 19, and improving utilities in that area for residents of Woodland Estates.

Asked what he'll do different if elected to council, Thompson said he won't shut out outside visitors and investors in the city, but, instead, take advantage of the opportunities they bring.

In closing, Thompson emphasized readiness for anticipated growth, and said he will be available to any of his constituents.

"I will listen, I will give you an answer," he said. "If I don't know what the answers is, believe me, I'll find a way to find out, and that's what I've been doing my whole life and I'll continue to do that."

Holmes thanked city staff in his closing, and said he's the only council member living east of U.S. 19, providing balanced representation.

"I'm the ear for people who live in the city," he said, adding the city is preparing for the eventual growth. "I just want to let the citizens of Crystal River know I'm here for them. ... We will grow, we just have to grow smart and the city council has been doing that for many, many years."

Honduran migrants set out for US

SONIA PÉREZ D. AND CLAUDIO ESCALON
Associated Press

GUALÁN, Guatemala — About 2,000 Honduran migrants hoping to reach the United States entered Guatemala on foot Thursday morning, testing the newly reopened frontier that had been shut by the coronavirus pandemic.

Authorities had planned to register the migrants as they crossed and offer assistance to those willing to turn back, but the group crossed the official border at Corinto without registering, pushing past outnumbered Guatemalan police and soldiers who made little attempt to stop them.

In one group were four teenagers, all friends and neighbors from San Pedro Sula, from which hundreds of migrants had set out the previous night. The teens decided to leave after seeing others organize on Facebook.

The youngest, 15-year-old Josty Morales, said he wanted to live the “American dream” and was looking for a way to support his 6-month-old son at home. “There’s no work. The necessity strangles you,” he said.

Within hours of the border crossing, Guatemalan authorities reported the first migrant death. A person tried to climb aboard a moving flatbed trailer, but fell under its wheels. Authorities did not immediately provide any additional details.

Central American migrants began traveling in large groups in recent years, seeking safety in numbers and in some cases avoiding the cost of smugglers. Calls for a new migrant caravan to leave Oct. 1 had circulated for weeks on social media.

At the border, Guatemalan officials were asking the migrants to provide documents showing a negative COVID-19 test — even though last week they said they wouldn’t require a test for those spending less than 72 hours in the country.

But about 2,000 migrants hustled through without registering. In addition, AP journalists saw others crossing the border illegally near the formal crossing. There were no reports of violence.

Migrants attempt to cross the border from Corinto, Honduras, into Corinto, Guatemala, Thursday, Oct. 1, 2020. Hundreds of migrants walked from San Pedro Sula, Honduras to the Guatemala border, testing a well-trod migration route now in times of the new coronavirus.

Guatemala presidential spokeswoman Francis Masek said in a statement that authorities would enforce the law.

“We understand that the economic situation of the Northern Triangle countries has become more critical with the effects of the pandemic, but this does not justify taking the risk for adults, much less children, of starting the trip toward the United States, which is so dangerous and includes many situations that can put lives at risk,” the statement said.

Subway bread isn't bread, Irish court says

LONDON — Ireland’s Supreme Court has ruled that bread sold by the fast food chain Subway contains so much sugar that it cannot be legally defined as bread.

The ruling came in a tax dispute brought by Bookfinders Ltd., an Irish Subway franchisee, which argued that some of its takeaway products — including teas, coffees and heated sandwiches — were not liable for value-added tax.

A panel of judges rejected the appeal Tuesday, ruling that the bread sold by Subway contains too much sugar to be categorized as a “staple food,” which is not taxed.

“There is no dispute that the bread supplied by Subway in its heated sandwiches has a sugar content of 10% of the weight of the flour included in the dough, and thus exceeds the 2% specified,” the judgement read.

The law makes a distinction between “bread as a staple food” and other baked goods “which are, or approach, confectionery or fancy baked goods,” the judgement said.

Subway disagreed with the characterization in a statement.

“Subway’s bread is, of course, bread,” the company said in an email. “We have been baking fresh bread in our restaurants for more than three decades and our guests return each day for sandwiches made on bread that smells as good as it tastes.”

Trump opposes new debate rules but will still attend

MORRISTOWN, N.J. — President Donald Trump opposes changing the rules for the remaining two presidential debates against Democrat Joe Biden, but his campaign says he will attend regardless.

Tuesday’s opening debate in Cleveland quickly turned chaotic, with frequent interruptions by the candidates — particularly Trump. The Commission on Presidential Debates said Wednesday that it “intends to ensure that additional tools to maintain order are in place for the remaining debates.”

Trump, a Republican, tweeted Thursday that he opposed any changes. “Why would I allow the Debate Commission to change the rules for the second and third Debates when I easily won last time,” he tweeted shortly after landing in New Jersey, where he was to hold a campaign fundraiser at his private golf club.

On a conference call with reporters, Trump’s reelection campaign indicated that Trump would attend the remaining debates regardless of whether the rules are changed.

Dems press ahead on COVID bill

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi of Calif., speaks during a weekly news conference, Thursday, Oct. 1, 2020, on Capitol Hill in Washington.

Partisan talks drag on

ANDREW TAYLOR
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With top Washington negotiators significantly apart on a huge COVID-19 relief bill, Democrats controlling the House are plunging ahead with a partisan debate on their next option — a $2.2 trillion measure that’s anathema to the White House and Capitol Hill Republicans.

Thursday’s vote was chiefly sought by moderate Democrats who say the party needs to display greater flexibility. But the end result was a partisan debate around the legislation that was expected to end with a mostly party-line vote, leaving lawmakers no closer to an outcome.

Voting on the $2.2 trillion plan came after a burst of negotiations this week between Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif. The Trump administration delivered concessions Wednesday, including a $400 per week pandemic jobless benefit and a markedly higher overall price tag of $1.6 trillion, but that failed to win over Pelosi.

“This isn’t half a loaf, this is the heel of the loaf,” Pelosi said in a televised interview Thursday. Pelosi spoke after the White House attacked her as “not being serious.”

The ramped-up negotiations come as challenging economic news continues to confront policymakers. The airlines are furloughing about 30,000 workers with the expiration of aid passed earlier this year, and a report Thursday showed 837,000 people claiming jobless benefits for the first time last week.

Most of the economic benefits of an immediate round of COVID relief could accrue under the next administration, and failure now could mean no significant help for struggling families and businesses until February.

While the offer from Mnuchin on unemployment is higher than the $300 per week benefit backed by conservative Republicans, his price tag of $1.6 trillion or more could drive many Republicans away, even as it fails to satisfy Pelosi.

“We raised our offer to $1.6 trillion,” White House Press Secretary Kayleigh McEnany told reporters Thursday. “It’s one that she is not interested in.”

Mnuchin and Pelosi spoke by phone early Thursday afternoon, but the speaker was publicly dismissive of the latest White House plan. Further conversations are likely, Pelosi spokesman Drew Hammill said.

Pelosi said Thursday that the administration is still far short on aid to state and local governments and in other areas.

“Some of you have asked, ‘Isn’t something better than nothing?’ No,” Pelosi told reporters, citing the “opportunity cost” for provisions sought by Democrats but potentially lost in any rush to agreement.

Potty training: NASA tests new $23M space toilet

MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL — NASA’s first new space potty in decades — a $23 million titanium toilet better suited for women — is getting a not-so-dry run at the International Space Station before eventually flying to the moon.

It’s packed inside a cargo ship set to blast off late Thursday from Wallops Island, Virginia.

Barely 100 pounds and just 28 inches tall, it’s roughly half as big as the two Russian-built toilets at the space station. It’s more camper-size to fit into the NASA Orion capsules that will carry astronauts to the moon in a few years.

Station residents will test it out for a few months. If the shakedown goes well, the toilet will be open for regular business.

With SpaceX now launching astronauts to the space station and Boeing less than a year from sending up its first crew, more toilets are needed. The new one will be in its own stall alongside the old one on the U.S. side of the outpost.

The old toilets cater more toward men. To better accommodate women, NASA tilted the seat on the new toilet and made it taller. The new shape should help astronauts position themselves better for No. 2, said Johnson Space Center’s Melissa McKinley, the project manager.

“Cleaning up a mess is a big deal. We don’t want any misses or escapes,” she said.

Let’s just say everything floats in weightlessness.

As for No. 1, the funnels also have been redesigned. Women can use the elongated and scooped-out funnels to urinate while sitting on the commode to poop at the same time, McKinley said. Until now, it’s been one or the other for female astronauts, she noted.

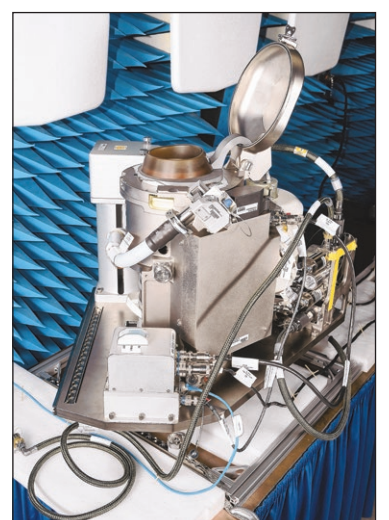

Like earlier space commodes, air suction, rather than water and gravity, removes the waste. Urine collected by the new toilet will be routed into NASA’s long-standing recycling system to produce water for drinking and cooking. Titanium and other tough alloys were chosen for the new toilet to withstand all the acid in the urine pretreatment.

Going to the bathroom in space may sound simple, but “sometimes the simple things become very difficult” without gravity, said NASA astronaut Mike Hopkins, commander of the second SpaceX crew, due to launch Oct. 31 from Kennedy Space Center.

While the old design isn’t that hard to use, subtle design changes can make all the difference for women, noted NASA astronaut Shannon Walker, a former space station resident who’s also on the next SpaceX crew.

“Trust me, I’ve got going to the bathroom in space down, because that is a vital, vital thing to know how to do,” she told The Associated Press earlier this week.

Braves shut out Reds again to sweep series

ATLANTA — It had been so long since the Atlanta Braves won a postseason series, Marcell Ozuna wanted to make sure he captured the moment.

Then Adam Duvall joined the selfie bandwagon.

Ian Anderson dazzled in another shutout performance for Atlanta, and the Braves won a playoff series for the first time in almost two decades by sweeping the light-hitting Cincinnati Reds with a 5-0 victory Thursday.

Ronald Acuña Jr. had three hits for the NL East champions, including a run-scoring double in the fifth. After winning Wednesday's series opener 1-0 in 13 innings, Atlanta broke open Game 2 on two-run homers by Ozuna and Duvall off Raisel Iglesias in the eighth.

Following his drive to left-center, Ozuna paused on his jog down the first base line to hold up his hand and pretend he was taking a selfie photo.

When Duvall added another shot, Ozuna called him to the end of the dugout for another selfie.

Duvall said Ozuna "kind of put me in the spotlight right there. I was having fun with it. That's not really my forte. I'm not, I guess, super flashy or anything but we were having fun with it."

It was definitely a fun day for Ozuna and Co. Not so much for Joey Votto and the Reds.

Anderson struck out nine in six innings as the Braves snapped their record-tying string of losses in 10 consecutive postseason rounds since their last playoff series win in 2001. Atlanta will face Miami or the Chicago Cubs in the NL Division Series in Houston.

Manager Brian Snitker described the postgame celebration, somewhat limited by the coronavirus pandemic, as "a controlled chaos."

"I told them we're just checking a box off in what we want to get done," Snitker said.

Just like in 2001, when Hall of Famers Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine and John Smoltz helped lead the way, Atlanta's pitching staff delivered.

Panthers prepped for delayed start to football season; Hurricanes, Warriors hope to rebound after losses last week

CHRIS BERNHARDT JR.

It was a rough opening week last Friday for Citrus County football, with three local teams in action combining to score seven total points.

With another trio of tilts on the slate tonight, Citrus and Seven Rivers Christian hope to right their ships while Lecanto finally gets its season going. Crystal River's game against Springstead has been postponed while the Eagles deal with a quarantine.

Central at Lecanto, 7 p.m.

While every team around the state had to wait an abnormally long time to get back on the football field, it's been that much longer for the Panthers. Springstead's COVID-19 outbreak caused Lecanto's first scheduled game to be postponed.

New head coach Chop Alexander has yet to make his debut on the Panthers' sideline, with no spring or pre-season contests.

"We're excited," Alexander said. "I know the kids were ready last week, but I think they're ready to hit a different colored jersey this week."

"We stepped up our conditioning. We did a couple things for team bonding. We worked on special teams and polished up the rough edges we had offensively and defensively. Hopefully we're able to put a good product on the field."

Alexander said he and his wife spent last Friday night attending Central's first game against Nature Coast. It didn't go well for the Bears, a 60-0 drubbing at the hands of the Hernando County-rival Sharks.

A year ago, Central carried a 3-0 record into a meeting with Lecanto and fell 34-24 to begin a seven-game skid to end the season. The Bears then lost running back Contae Cason, who rushed for 1,758 yards and 21 touchdowns, in the offseason when he transferred to Hernando.

"They've got a couple of physical offensive linemen. They come off the ball and will hit you," Alexander said. "We hope when we come out we play our best game. We'll make sure to let the kids know we need to play at our standard, not underestimate or overestimate anybody. Play Lecanto football, play physical and I think good things will happen."

With a new coach installing his own defensive scheme, along with a slew of transfers meshing with returnees, it'll be interesting to see how quickly the Panthers can pull together. For now, Alexander wants to limit penalties, block, tackle and take care of the ball.

Summers' return lifts Warriors

Senior takes on leadership role

CHRIS BERNHARDT JR.
Staff writer

A week into its season, Seven Rivers Christian had to shut down its football program while the school closed for two weeks due to a COVID-19 outbreak.

But the Warrior players weren't about to let themselves get stale over an unexpected lay-off. Two players in particular, Nehemiah Vann and Brock Summers, made sure of it.

"I love football, I love these guys and I have a passion to win," Summers said. "I don't think it's good for winning sitting around and doing nothing."

So Summers and Vann organized informal practices at a local park, something they had previously done when spring football was canceled by the pandemic.

Though only a sophomore, Vann taking on such a leadership role comes with the territory considering he's both the starting quarterback and the son of head coach Monty Vann.

Summers pushing to the forefront may seem a little more surprising because while he is a senior, he hasn't been with the Warriors the past two seasons.

"He's a great, quality kid with a great family," Coach Vann said. "It's been huge (having him back). To have a tight end in our system is big and he's also a really, really good defensive end."

His work along the defensive front was evident during his first go-round at Seven Rivers. He started seventh through ninth grade for the Warriors, earning an All-Chronicle selection his freshman year when in 10 games he recorded a team-high 8 1/2 sacks and 14 1/2 tackles for a loss.

It was that season under then head coach Rayburn Greene that Seven Rivers reached the Elite Eight, the culmination of building up what was still a relatively young program.

"It was a fun ride with Coach Greene," Summers said "Physically, it was an exhausting ride, but that was the funnest time I ever had. I'd do it all over again."

When Greene departed following that 2017 campaign, Summers, who is home schooled, was among several veteran players who transferred away from Seven Rivers. He ended up at Citrus High, but sat out as a junior with a dislocated shoulder that required surgery.

A pair of five-set thrillers

Jennah Kay Phillips of Seven Rivers Christian drops low for a dig during Thursday night's volleyball match at home against Countryside Christian. The Warriors won in five sets.

Warriors earn revenge at home

MATT PFIFFNER
Sports editor

LECANTO — The way this season has gone for the Seven Rivers Christian volleyball team, it will take a win any way it can get one.

Despite some sloppy play down the stretch Thursday night at home, the Warriors outlasted Gainesville's Countryside Christian in five sets, 21-25, 25-8, 25-20, 21-25, 18-16.

A year after finishing second in the state in Class 2A, the Warriors began this season 0-5 wrapped around a two-week break due to a COVID-19 quarantine in the entire school system. One of those losses was a five-setter at Countryside, so Thursday was a measure of revenge. They will meet again in a little over a week in the opening round of district tournament play.

"We've had a short season and haven't had a lot of time to get things set," coach Steve Stack said. "We get an opportunity to play them again when it matters."

In fact, this was just the eighth match of the season for the Warriors, who improved to 2-6 with the win. The Minutemen fell to 7-5.

The match couldn't have started much better for the Warriors, who raced out to a quick 7-0 lead. But a 6-0 run by the Minutemen tied the match 11-11, before another Warriors run made it 19-14. Kills by Leighton Stack and Olivia Everts helped Seven Rivers regain the lead. But a 4-0 run by Countryside forced coach Stack to use a timeout and the Minutemen finished the set on a 7-1 run for the 25-21 win.

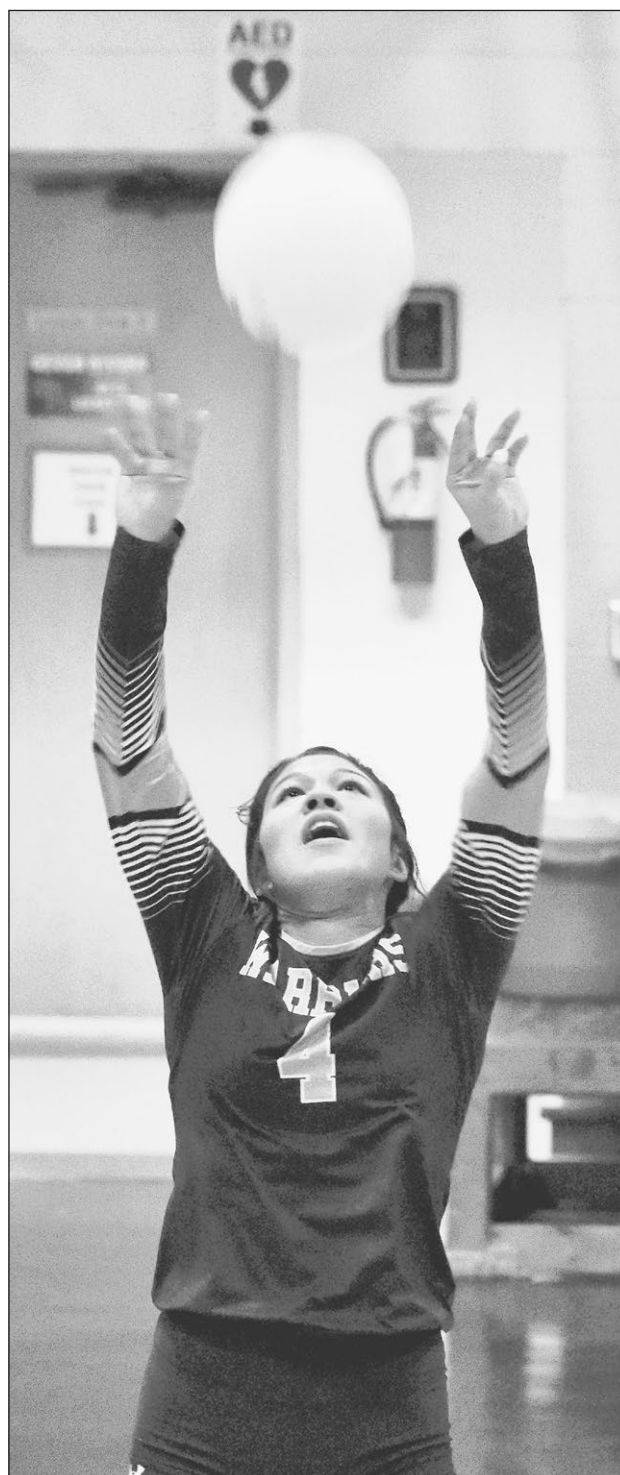

In the second set, the Warriors once again jumped out to a big early lead, this time 12-2 behind two kills from Julia Shipes and a pair of ace serves from Erika Villanueva. This time, the Warriors would not let the Minutemen back into the set and rolled to the 25-8 triumph.

"When they're playing well, they're playing really well, so that's very good to see," coach Stack said. "I told them when they're playing well, they are tough to beat."

It was a tight battle throughout the third set, until a pair of Shipes ace serves and three late kills from Leighton Stack allowed the Warriors to pull away for the 25-20 win.

The fourth set was all about Seven Rivers mistakes, as 17 of the 25 points scored by Countryside were either on service errors or other miscues by the Warriors. The set fittingly ended 25-21 for the Minutemen on a Warriors error.

The errors continued early in the fifth set, as Countryside jumped out to a 4-0 lead. A kill and ace serve from Leighton Stack gave the Warriors a 6-5 lead and two aces by Caroline Russ made it a 12-11 Warriors lead. Countryside rallied and had match point three times, before a pair of Minutemen errors gave the Warriors their first match point. Seven Rivers would not let that chance go to waste, as Leighton Stack hammered her 17th kill of the match to end the contest.

MATT PFIFFNER/Chronicle

Julia Shipes of Seven Rivers Christian sets to a teammate during Thursday night's five-set home win over Countryside Christian.

"I'm proud of them. They put it together at the end. I put it on them to do it themselves," coach Stack said.

Leighton Stack added 13 assists, 10 digs and 3 aces to go with the 17 kills. Shipes had 18 assists, 7 kills, 7 digs and 5 aces, Russ had a career-high 10 kills and Jennah Kay Phillips had 12 digs and 4 aces.

The Warriors play in the WCAC Tournament next week in the final tuneup before the district tournament.

Panthers stave off Pirates

CR pushes Lecanto to limit

CHRIS BERNHARDT JR.

CRYSTAL RIVER — Lecanto came into Thursday's match with just one loss on the season, but host Crystal River made the Panthers fight hard to stay that way.

In the end, Lecanto survived the stiff challenge from its county and Gulf Coast 8 conference rival, winning in five games, 16-25, 25-14, 25-22, 19-25, 15-13.

Having already defeated the Pirates (2-6) in four games on Sept. 18, the Panthers (7-1) seemed in control early, up 15-12 when Phoebe Shaw came to serve for Crystal River. The Pirates proceeded to score the next 12 points, taking a 24-15 edge. Jaelynn Richardson's kill finally forced a side-out, but Brooke Bargiel ended it with a kill of her own.

Lecanto responded in the second game by jumping out early and gaining significant separation when Joeimilie Rijos Lozada rattled off three straight aces to make it 20-11.

A tight third game went to the Panthers, as they scored the final six points to rally from a 22-19 deficit and closed it out on an ace by Lozada.

Crystal River busted open the fourth game with a 9-1 run, Bailee Einspahr and Shaw combining to serve seven points. The Panthers made it tight with a 10-1 surge of their own, six of those points while Grace Teitelman served, but Alexia Wilson's kill forced a decisive fifth game.

Jada Wernicke served two points — including an ace — to give Lecanto a 9-6 advantage. The Pirates pulled within 12-11 on two points served by Mackenzie Richardson, and were down 14-13 before hitting the final rally into the net.

"We just made some switches. We're trying to get ready for a playoff run," Crystal River head coach Greg Hamilton said. "It was two teams playing hard. It probably wasn't Lecanto's best night. I feel like we're getting better."

"We switched where kids were in the rotation. Putting Alexia (Wilson) in a different spot allowed her and Jordan (Williams) to play better offensively. ... Alexia got a lot more hit to her because her and Jordan were away from each other, and they played well tonight."

Teitelman and Grace Taylor each had eight kills for the Panthers, and Lozada added 23 assists. Williams posted 12 kills and Wilson had 11 for the Pirates.

"That's a 7-1 Lecanto team, they do a good job over there at volleyball," Hamilton said. "The girls played hard, they played clean. I felt it was a very competitive match; a lot of tipping, a lot of unpredictable balls. We did a better job of being in position. We had just a few lapses. We're getting better."

Lecanto head coach Wanda Grey could not be reached for postgame comments. Protocols for the GC8 conference prohibit in-person interviews with players and coaches.

Volleyball teams learn postseason opponents

The four county volleyball teams found out their district tournament draws this week, when the FHSAA made the announcements.

In Class 5A-District 7, Lecanto will face Clearwater in the opening round. In Class 4A-District 5 action, Citrus will play The Villages, while Crystal River meets South Sumter. And in Class 2A-District 4, returning state runner-up Seven Rivers Christian faces Countryside Christian in first round play.

Postseason play begins the week of Oct. 12.

Does No. 1 Djokovic's next foe have hope?

'I was wondering that,' Galan said

HOWARD FENDRICH AND
JEROME PUGMIRE
AP sports writers

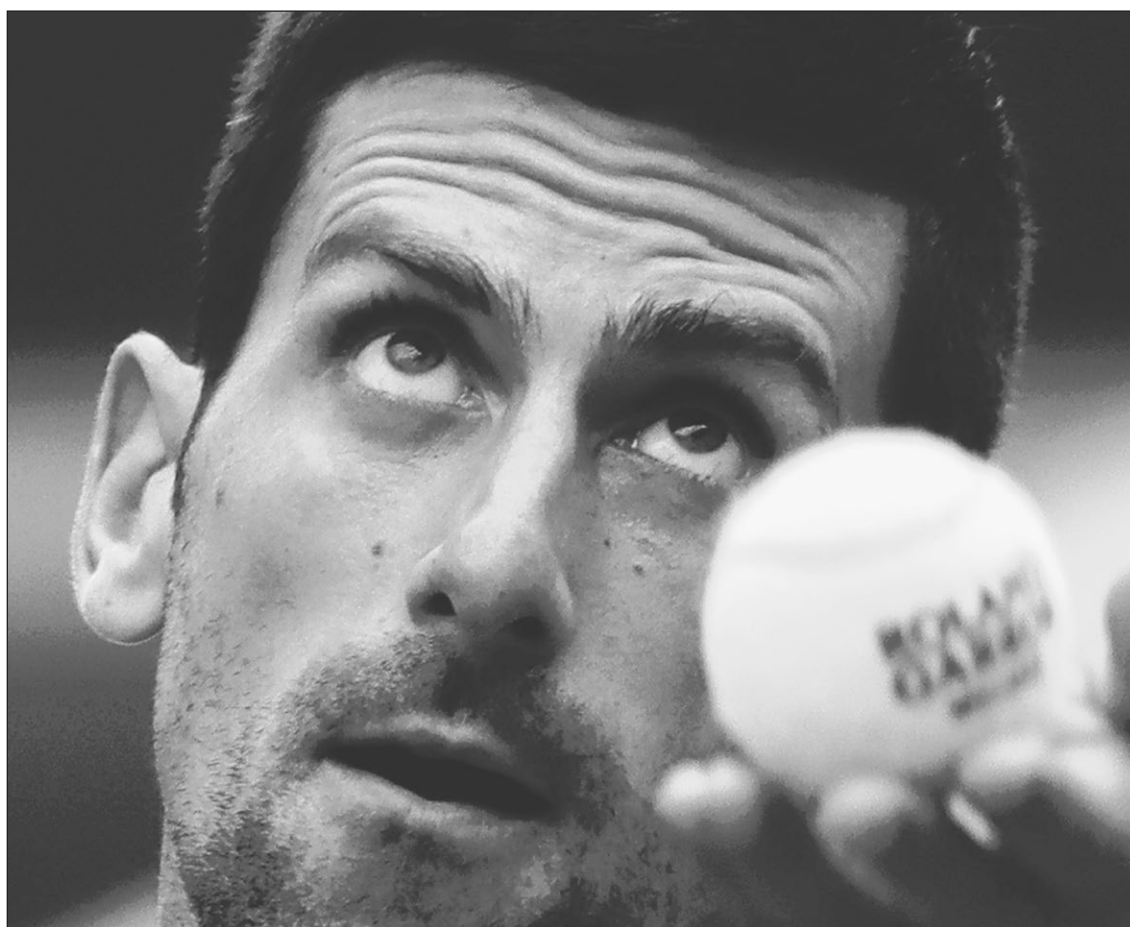

PARIS — At the mere mention of Novak Djokovic's name, at the mere thought of sharing a court with a 17-time Grand Slam champion and the French Open's No. 1-seeded man, Daniel Elahi Galan broke into a wide smile Thursday.

He used these phrases: "really, really excited" and "really, really happy" and "really, really special."

Galan is, after all, ranked 153rd and never had won so much as one main-draw match at any major tournament until this week. Making this run to the third round even more improbable: The 24-year-old from Colombia lost in qualifying at Roland Garros and only got into the bracket when other men withdrew from the field.

So, sure, it was a big deal for Galan to beat Tennyson Sandgren 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 on Thursday. And, to be sure, a bigger deal to contemplate Saturday, when he will face Djokovic, who has dropped a total of 10 games through two matches so far after overwhelming Ricardas Berankis 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 — and is someone Galan has spotted in the locker room but never spoken to.

It's the sort of David vs. Goliath

Associated Press

Novak Djokovic serves against Ricardas Berankis in a second round match of the French Open at the Roland Garros stadium Thursday in Paris, France.

matchup that happens often in tennis but is in particular abundance this year in Paris.

Galan is one of nine men ranked outside the top 100 into the third round, equaling the most at any Grand Slam tournament in more than a quarter-century (Wimbledon in 1994); the last time there were as many as nine at Roland Garros was 1985.

There were some unfair-on-paper matchups established Thursday by the women, too.

Australian Open champion

Sofia Kenin, who is seeded fourth, will face 105th-ranked qualifier Irina Bara. Two-time Wimbledon winner Petra Kvitová next meets 100th-ranked Canadian teen Leylah Fernandez. Jelena Ostapenko, the 2017 French Open champ, plays 87th-ranked Paula Badosa, who arrived in Paris with a 1-5 Grand Slam record.

"I have a very complex game. I can do many things on court," said Bara, who is making her Grand Slam debut, "and I hope I will bother her with that."

Maybe all of the success for those who haven't done it before is due to this being as unusual a French Open as there's ever been: shifted from May-June to September-October because of the coronavirus pandemic; from its position deep in the European clay-court circuit to two weeks after the hard-court U.S. Open's conclusion; played amid autumn's cold temperatures and rain, although the sun and blue sky made appearances Thursday; just 1,000 spectators allowed on-site each day.

Whatever the case, it's instructive to remember that occasionally, of course, the stone finds its mark.

Which perhaps is why this was Galan's philosophy as he looked ahead: "Just try to win. Just give it all you have. And that's it. At the end of the day, it's just another match."

So the obvious question: How do you, as the owner of two career Grand Slam match victories, maintain sufficient self-belief and hope ahead of facing Djokovic, whose 292 wins at majors include 70 at the French Open alone?

"Well," came Galan's reply, "I was wondering that, to be honest."

NFL postpones Titans game vs. Steelers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Tennessee Titans find themselves back in a waiting mode, hoping the NFL allows them back inside their headquarters by Tuesday. Their game against the Pittsburgh Steelers is now postponed until later in the season because of the league's first COVID-19 outbreak. The NFL postponed Sunday's game in Nashville after one additional Titans player and one personnel member tested positive for COVID-19. The announcement Thursday morning came a day after the league said it hoped to play the game either Monday or Tuesday. The NFL said a new game date will be announced "shortly."

Munoz shares PGA Tour lead in Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss. — Defending champion Sebastian Munoz found happy memories Thursday at the Sanderson Farms Championship. Munoz nearly holed a wedge on his opening hole as part of his fast start, ran in four straight birdies on the back nine and wound up with an 8-under 64 to share of the lead with Jimmy Walker, Kevin Chappell and Charley Hoffman. Sixteen players were at 67 or better. The Colombian figured there were good scores to be had when he saw Walker and Hoffman at 64 before he teed off, with plenty of other low scores right behind them.

allowed two hits and walked two in his playoff debut after six regular-season starts. Will Smith, Chris Martin and Mark Melancon each threw one perfect inning. Anderson said it was special to be part of two consecutive shutouts in the series. Max Fried started in the Game 1 win. "All the credit to Max for going out there yesterday pitch for pitch with (Trevor) Bauer and setting the tone for us," Anderson said. Cincinnati wasted a solid performance by Luis Castillo, who struck out seven in 5 1/3 innings in his first post-season start. Bauer struck out 12 in 7 2/3 scoreless innings in Game 1. The Reds were shut out in consecutive postseason games for the first time. The 22 innings without a run is the longest postseason scoreless streak in franchise history.

Athletics 6, White Sox 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Oakland Athletics ended 14 years of postseason futility, riding Chad Pinder's go-ahead, two-run single in the fifth inning and repeated costly walks by Chicago's relievers to rally past the White Sox 6-4 and win the decisive third game of their AL wild-card round series. The AL West champions lost the opener, then won on consecutive days and advanced to a Division Series against the rival Houston Astros starting Monday in Los Angeles. Oakland stopped a nine-game losing streak in winner-take-all postseason games, a major league record that dated to the 1973 World Series. The A's had lost six straight playoff series since sweeping Minnesota in the 2006 Division Series only to get swept by Detroit in the Championship Series.

Heat are ailing, not giving up on title hopes

Insist Finals vs Lakers aren't over

TIM REYNOLDS
AP basketball writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Jimmy Butler had a bandage on his right knee and a wrap on his left ankle. His team's starting point guard and center are both doubtful to play in Game 2 of the NBA Finals. And his Miami Heat are coming off a one-sided loss to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Given all that, Butler believes a perception exists that this series is already over.

"I beg to differ," Butler said Thursday.

Say this for the Heat: They're down but refuse to believe they're anywhere near out. Game 2 of the finals is Friday night, with Miami bracing to be without point guard Goran Dragic because of a torn left plantar fascia and All-Star Bam Adebayo due to a newly diagnosed neck injury on top of his ongoing shoulder issues.

"When it rains, it pours," said Butler, who'll play through a sore ankle in Game 2. "All in all, though, we're still expected to win. We got here for a reason. We realize we belong. ... Obviously, we definitely need those two guys, don't get me wrong. But I've always said, next man up when a man goes down."

The Lakers won Game 1 116-98, a score that didn't exactly show how lopsided things were for much of the game. Miami started on a 25-12 run; the Lakers scored 75 of the game's next 105 points — a staggering burst. A 13-point deficit midway through the first quarter became a 32-point lead midway through the third for the Lakers.

That, combined with

Miami's injury problems, sure seems to indicate that the Lakers have full control of this matchup. Dragic had been Miami's leading scorer in the first three playoff rounds. Adebayo is the team's best rebounder and blossoming into a superstar.

Lakers coach Frank Vogel said he'll plan for Dragic and Adebayo to play. But even if they can't go, Vogel said Miami's fourth-quarter lineup from Game 1 — a group that included Kendrick Nunn and Kelly Olynyk, both of whom would see much bigger roles if Dragic and Adebayo are out — presented some challenges.

"They have an army of guys that play a great style of play, that's very, very difficult to guard," Vogel said. "They work extremely hard on the defensive end and we've got to prepare for whoever's in uniform."

The Lakers have a locked-in LeBron James — who was one assist shy of extending his record for finals triple-doubles — and Anthony Davis made his finals debut look easy with 34 points. But James is taking nothing for granted, revealing that he was up until 4:30 a.m. Thursday watching film from Game 1.

James said he saw plenty of ways the Lakers can be better.

"We are playing against an exceptional basketball team," James said. "Obviously, great-coached. We've have to continue to understand that coming into Game 2 ... they're going to make adjustments in Game 2 and we need to be ready for that."

Nunn had 18 points in Game 1. He was Miami's starter the entire regular season, finished second in the rookie of the year voting, but has been used sparingly in the playoffs — in part because Dragic has been so good, in part because Nunn missed

Miami's Jimmy Butler (22) pauses after an apparent injury during the first half of Game 1 of basketball's NBA Finals Wednesday in Lake Buena Vista. The Heat had several players banged up in the series-opening loss, but insist despite being down as many as 32 points in the opener, the series for the NBA championship is far from over. Game 2 is tonight at 9 p.m.

Miami's first 25 days in the bubble because of his recovery from the coronavirus.

"I'm ready to play," Nunn said. "I've been ready, been all season. I had to step up, and simple as that. I'll be ready to play and compete and go out there and try to get a win."

The numbers clearly show that Game 1 winners typically prevail in a series. The Heat know it's not an absolute rule. So does James. All three of Miami's NBA titles came after Game 1 losses in the finals. James was part of two of those comebacks, and his third championship in Cleveland was won in the same fashion.

This feels a bit different, of course, given the injury concerns.

"This is when you feel most alive, when you're being tested competitively and challenged in new ways, different ways," Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said. "This is a quality opponent. This is the way the whole playoff system is supposed to be set up. It's supposed to get tougher and more challenging every single round and may the best team win at the very end."

Parents take school year on the road

Remote learning promotes mobility

LEANNE ITALIE
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In RVs, rental homes and five-star resorts, families untethered by the constraints of physical classrooms for their kids have turned the new school year into an extended summer vacation, some lured by the ailing hotel industry catering to parents with remote learners through "roadschooling" amenities.

With the pandemic ongoing, the change of scene for desperate work- and school-from-home families boils down to "risk versus reward," said Amanda Poses, a travel consultant and mother of two teenagers in Austin, Texas. "God willing, we don't have the opportunity to do this again."

Poses and her husband let 13-year-old Addison attend school from Park City, Utah, for three days of a five-night stay in early September. In search of a flight of three hours or less, they rode horses, hiked and zip-lined. They went tubing and enjoyed an alpine slide. And, yes, there was a bit of logging in to school.

"I ended up skipping like half of my classes," Addison smiled. "It was nice. It was like a new start."

Addison's 16-year-old brother sat out the trip. "He was concerned about being distracted," mom said.

One of the places the family stayed, the luxury Montage Deer Valley mountain resort, now offers "Montage Academy" for distance learners, complete with an all-day monitored "study hall" and access to virtual tutors. Other hotels are offering on-site tutors and tickets for "field trips" at area attractions.

lurking in schoolcautions as well.

"Formal schoolcaution programs have the potential to create further achievement gaps between high- and low-income families, and more cost-effective versions should be developed, but overall there are many learning benefits for taking children on schoolcautions," Khazenon said. "If students are burnt out and understimulated studying at home, then they may not be engaged in class at all."

Jennifer Steele, an associate professor of education at American University, said that if distance learners don't show up for class during schoolcautions, "we would expect them to lose some knowledge and skills." In addition, she said, the idea "exposes socioeconomic inequities in terms of people's inability to leave and go to difference places."

Since the start of the pandemic, families of means have decamped to second homes or taken long-term rentals in vacation spots around the world. With summer over, schoolcautions offer

“ Family vacations are the new field trip. The virtual learning has been tough for a lot of kids. They're stuck on screens all day or sitting there at home, with their parents over their shoulders, doing work sheets. ” others similar experiences, whether they're roughing it on the road for extended periods or spending on hotels and resorts trying to make up for a summer slump.

For Jayson and Tammy Brown, schoolcautions for their three kids have been both ongoing and life-affirming over the past five years. The parents and 11-year-old Jayde, 13-year-old Jay'Elle and 14-year-old Jayson are used to traveling the world with school topics in mind, but the pandemic has them avoiding planes.

Before the pandemic, there was a trip to Israel at a time Jay'Elle was studying the Mideast. Young Jayson made science connections between rock formations there and bioluminescent organisms he saw on another adventure.

In South Africa, the family focused on Nelson Mandela, visiting the former prison and military fort Constitution Hill, which has been turned into a history museum on the country's journey to democracy.

The Browns have taken a few road trips within driving distance of home in Atlanta since March, and have more planned. Tammy, a special education teacher, is handling her students remotely. She and her husband make sure their kids log on to school when attendance is required.

"Oh we stay on them for sure," dad said.

What do the kids think they're gaining?

"I find it much more fun than school, being able to experience firsthand what I'm actually learning in class," Jay'Elle said.

Her brother's favorite part of all that travel? "The food, and the animals," he said.

The siblings are writing a book about their travels.

Terika Haynes, a luxury travel planner in Orlando, Florida, said all of the "school from paradise" packages she's recently spotted guarantee dedicated workspaces for children. Some are adding after-school activities, including sports training for student athletes.

Packages range from seven to 21 days, she said.

"It's a bit too early to capture numbers since these programs are just starting to roll out, but these programs are designed for those with more of a disposable income who are accustomed to luxury," Haynes said.

In Florida, the Marker Key West Harbor Resort began offering private tutors in mid-September. It has technical support available for kids, and educators to cover local topics, such as the island's literary history and marine life. There have been a handful of reservations so far.

The extras add between $225 and $250 to the room rate, which varies depending on the date and room type.

"Family vacations are the new field trip," said Lee Rekas, the resort's director of sales and marketing. "The virtual learning has been tough for a lot of kids. They're stuck on screens all day or sitting there at home, with their parents over their shoulders, doing work sheets."

Stephanie Gunderson, a stay-at-home mom in southeastern Pennsylvania, plans a two-week trip to North Carolina's Outer Banks in October with her four children — ranging from 5 to 13 — and their school-issued iPads. Her husband will stay behind to work.

They'll be staying in a small cabin close to the beach that they rented at a lower, off-season price. They're packing in their food and will bypass the usual tourist attractions.

"We plan primarily to stay in the cabin doing schoolwork. That's the No. 1 priority, for the kids to attend school but then having the late afternoons free to walk on the beach or walk on a trail," she said.

Breaux Walker and Edie Silver Walker prefer Stormy, the nearly 30-foot RV they bought for $17,000 just before they took off Aug. 8 from home in San Francisco with their sixth-grader and twin first-graders. Logging in to school and homework is mandatory, the parents said.

"We're working our itineraries around WiFi. We're using hot spots on our cell phones a lot," Silver Walker said from Ennis, Montana, about seven weeks in.

Reyne, the 11-year-old doing full days of live instruction, didn't miss a moment when Stormy blew an air hose in the middle of school in a sleet storm north of Helena, Montana, on Interstate 15.

"With her laptop and her headphones, she just hopped up into the tow truck," Silver Walker laughed.

Breaux added: "We're out in the woods every single day after they go to class. They're getting the coolest, most experiential, useful education every day."

Annie offers advice

Dear Annie: My aunt "Amy" has been using Facebook and Instagram to post political memes, status updates and articles that reflect a viewpoint very different from my own.

DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My aunt "Amy" has been using Facebook and Instagram to post political memes, status updates and articles that reflect a viewpoint very different from my own.

Dear Annie: In our attempt to stop this pandemic, many people refuse to do their share by the simple act of wearing a mask.

Initially, there was an uncertainty of whether masks would do any good, so the public was told not to use them yet, because the health care and other frontline workers needed to be the first priority.

When this was discovered, scientists and medical experts changed direction and suggested that everyone should wear a mask. This was several months ago, and this advice has not changed.

In theory, if everyone in the country wore a mask, the pandemic would be over in a couple months. This virus, which requires a human host, would die out without any place to go, just like smallpox, and this pandemic would be over.

Wearing a mask is not an attempt by the government to limit your freedoms or tell you what to do, as some claim. It is an effort to save lives and bring an end to the pandemic as soon as possible so more people don't die.

Bridge

PHILLIP ALDER Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

On May 27, three days after his eighth birthday, Andrew Chen of San Jose, California, became the youngest life master ever.

Chen, whose parents, Sarah and Steve, and older brother Charlie also play, took his first lesson in September 2018. The next month, he and eight-year-old Brian Zhang won the newcomer pairs at a local sectional. In 2019, Chen amassed 215.82 masterpoints and won the Mini-McKenney Rookie of the Year award.

In today's deal, Chen played in four spades, partnering his father in an online event. Dad's support double showed three cards in spades.

When West led a low club, Chen knew that East had at least one heart royal; otherwise, West would have led the heart king. This meant that West probably had the other honor cards for his two-level overcall.

After Garrison broke the record, I asked him what his future bridge ambitions were. He effectively replied, "Been there, done that."

Bridge deal layout showing North, South, West, and East hands with cards and dealer information.

*SCAM ALERT****

INSIST ON CASH

Don't accept a check for more than the selling price. You can bet it's a scam.

Inform the Buyer that you'll wait two weeks before sending any merchandise.

Never use money from a check to send gift cards, money orders, or wire money to strangers or someone you just met. Many scammers demand that you send money through money transfer services like Western Union or MoneyGram, or buy gift cards and send them the PIN numbers. Once you wire money, or give someone the gift card PINs, it is like giving someone cash. It's almost impossible to get it back.

Toss offers that ask you to pay for a prize. If it's free, you shouldn't have to pay to get it.

- INSIST ON CASH
- USE ANOTHER FORM OF PAYMENT (SUCH AS WIRE TRANSFER)
