your used fishing line and help keep the wildlife from deadly entanglement. For the August beach cleanup, volunteers found several clumps of monofilament fishing lines discarded along the shorelines - luckily, it was low tide!

When Thunder Roars, Go Indoors! According to the National Weather Service (NSW), Florida led the nation with the highest number of lightning-related deaths in 2023.

How can you stay safe? At South Beach, as you enter the beach from the boardwalk, you will notice on your left a Thor Guard Lightning Warning system with a small white dome top that looks like a mushroom with a strobe light. When the system predicts a high probability of a lightning strike, it will emit a 30-second siren or blast with an accompanying flashing light. When you hear three five-second sirens or blasts, and the light is off, it is safe to be outside.

The following locations on Marco Beach have a Lighting warning system:

- JW Marriott
- Crystal Shores
- Residents Beach
- Tigertail Beach
- South Beach

On Saturday, August 24th, a small group of dedicated beach volunteers gathered on South Beach and picked up a grabber, a bucket, and gloves and removed 60+ pounds of trash from entering the ocean, keeping the sea turtles and other marine animals safe.

To participate in the monthly volunteer beach cleanup, check the City of Marco Island Calendar for locations.
