Steve and Barbara Slaggie: Leading Through Experience and Vision

Longtime Marco residents, Steve and Barbara Slaggie first connected with NCH after receiving exceptional rehabilitative care. Their gratitude turned into action and funded the renovation of the very facility that helped them, ensuring others would receive the same caring support in their time of need. Recognizing Marco Island’s growing population and its evolving healthcare needs, they later provided a transformational multi-million-dollar gift challenge, which energized the campaign and continues to inspire community participation. In honor of their leadership, the Marco Island campus proudly bears their name.

Pat and Scot Kaufman: A Decade of Local Leadership and Commitment

Pat Kaufman has served in a leadership role for NCH on Marco Island for more than 10 years, giving her a deep understanding of the Island’s unique healthcare needs. She and her husband Scot made a meaningful gift that supports NCH’s ability to expand and elevate care on the island. Their belief that “to whom much is given, much is expected” shines through in their philanthropy. A true embodiment of giving back to the place they call home. Their gift is recognized through the naming of the Pat and Scot Kaufman Healthcare Center.

or talent, it is a gift to be able to help. Their recent gift supports the modernization of the new facility and reflects their deep dedication to ensuring residents and visitors access outstanding care close to home. Their generosity strengthens the foundation for future generations and reaffirms their longstanding commitment to Marco’s wellbeing.

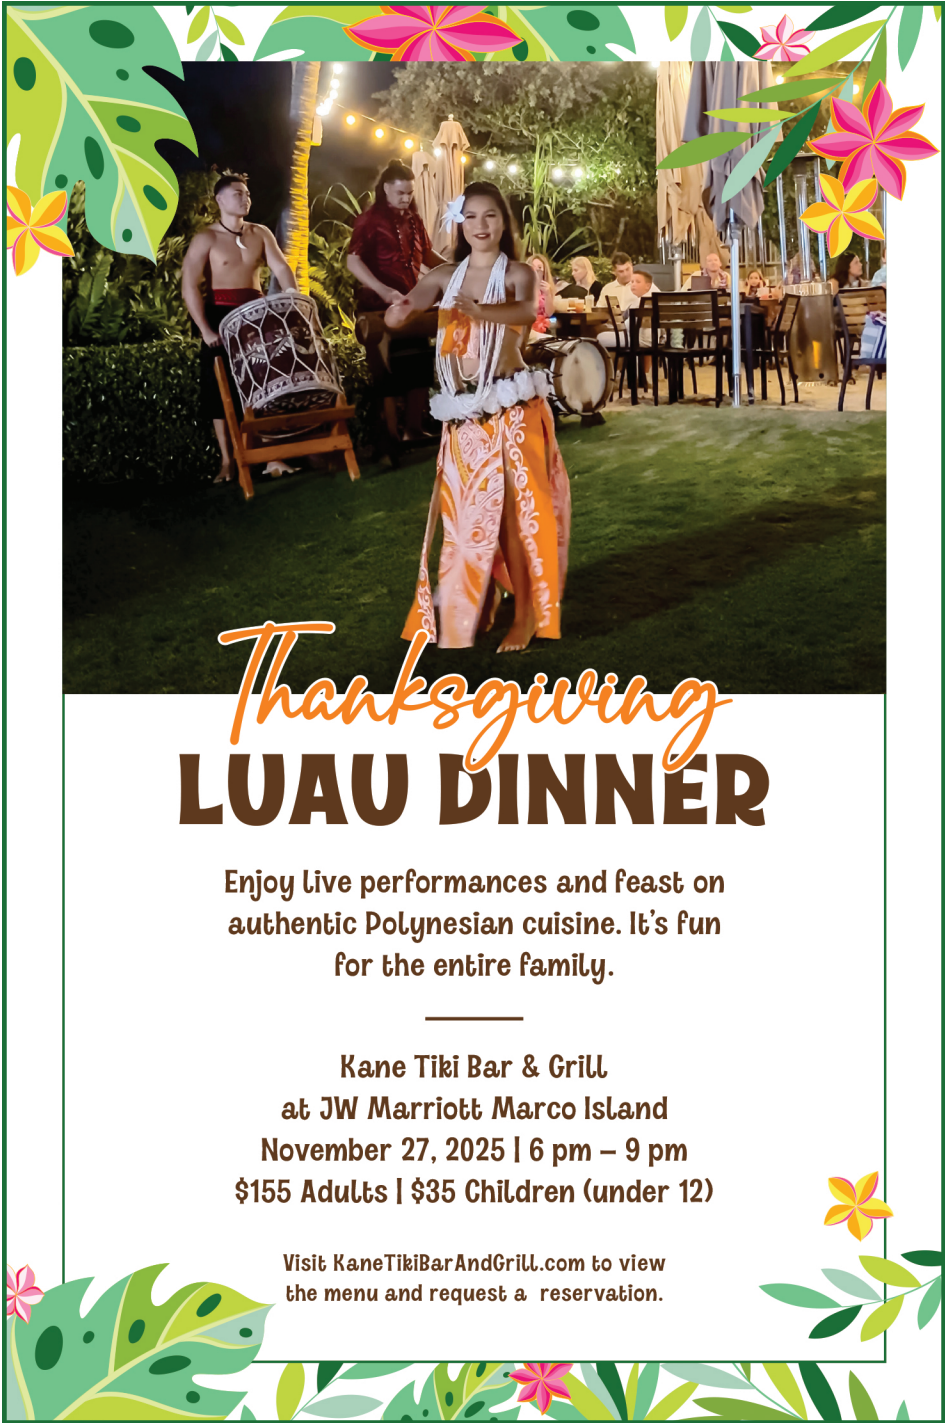

Robin and Tom Gunkel: New Residents Leaving a Lasting Impact

As newer residents, Robin and Tom Gunkel quickly embraced the island and its community spirit. Tom’s service on the Marco Island Healthcare Committee deepened their understanding of NCH’s mission and together they chose to invest in a healthier future for their neighbors. Their gift symbolizes their belief in supporting the place they proudly now call home and helping sustain care for the entire Marco community.
