

Columbia Public Schools lags behind K-12 districts

Columbia Public Schools trails behind average scores for K-12 public schools in all subjects except social studies and student group performance in social studies and science, according to the Annual Performance Report released on Tuesday. Student group includes low-income students, students with disabilities, English learners and students who belong to the major racial and ethnic groups in Missouri.

