

People who receive food from Missouri's food bank system likely to be young, white

Among those who seek food assistance from Missouri's network of six food banks, nearly three in four adults have earned at least a high school diploma, general equivalency or GED. Most live in small households, either alone or with one to two others.

Age

Race

Education level for adults

Household size

