

Americans say race shouldn't be a major factor in college admissions

Despite some students wishing they could emphasize their racial and ethnic backgrounds more in their applications, the majority of Americans don't believe race should be taken into account in the admissions process.

