

Supply chain issues continue to be an issue for small business owners

The NFIB Research Center released results for its 19th COVID-19 survey about how the pandemic has impacted small businesses. The survey was conducted Sept. 1-6 and included 586 responses. In the results, half of small business owners reported a significant impact on their business because of supply issues.

55% of small business owners who are impacted by the supply chain disruption report the issue is worse than it was three months ago

86% of small business owners said they anticipate supply chain issues to continue for at least the next five months or longer.

