City considers new transmission line

The proposal would create a 161-kilovolt electric transmission line that would strengthen the city's power grid. The city is currently served by a single 69-kilovolt transmission line. The project, expected to cost $35 million, has been in consideration since 2009.

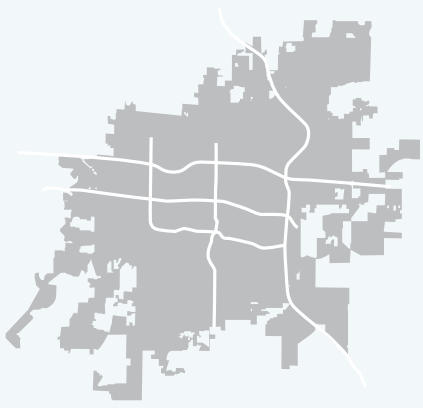

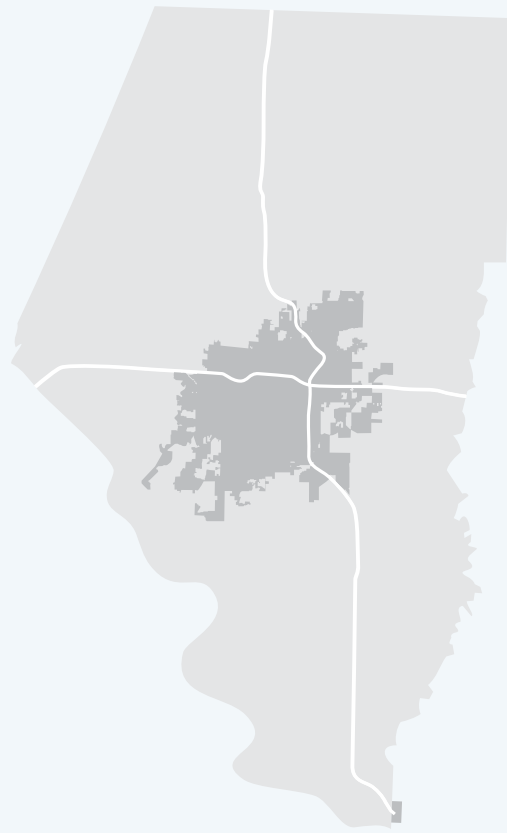

Source: Missourian reporting

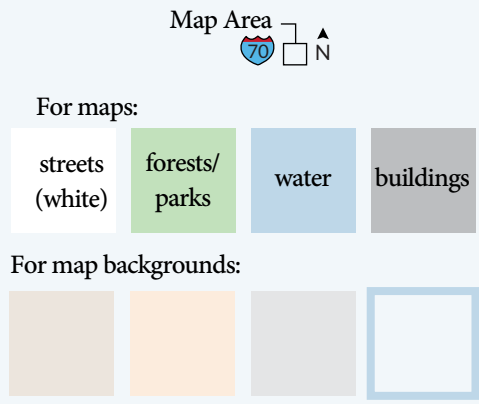

KENNEDY VOSS/Missourian

Map Materials

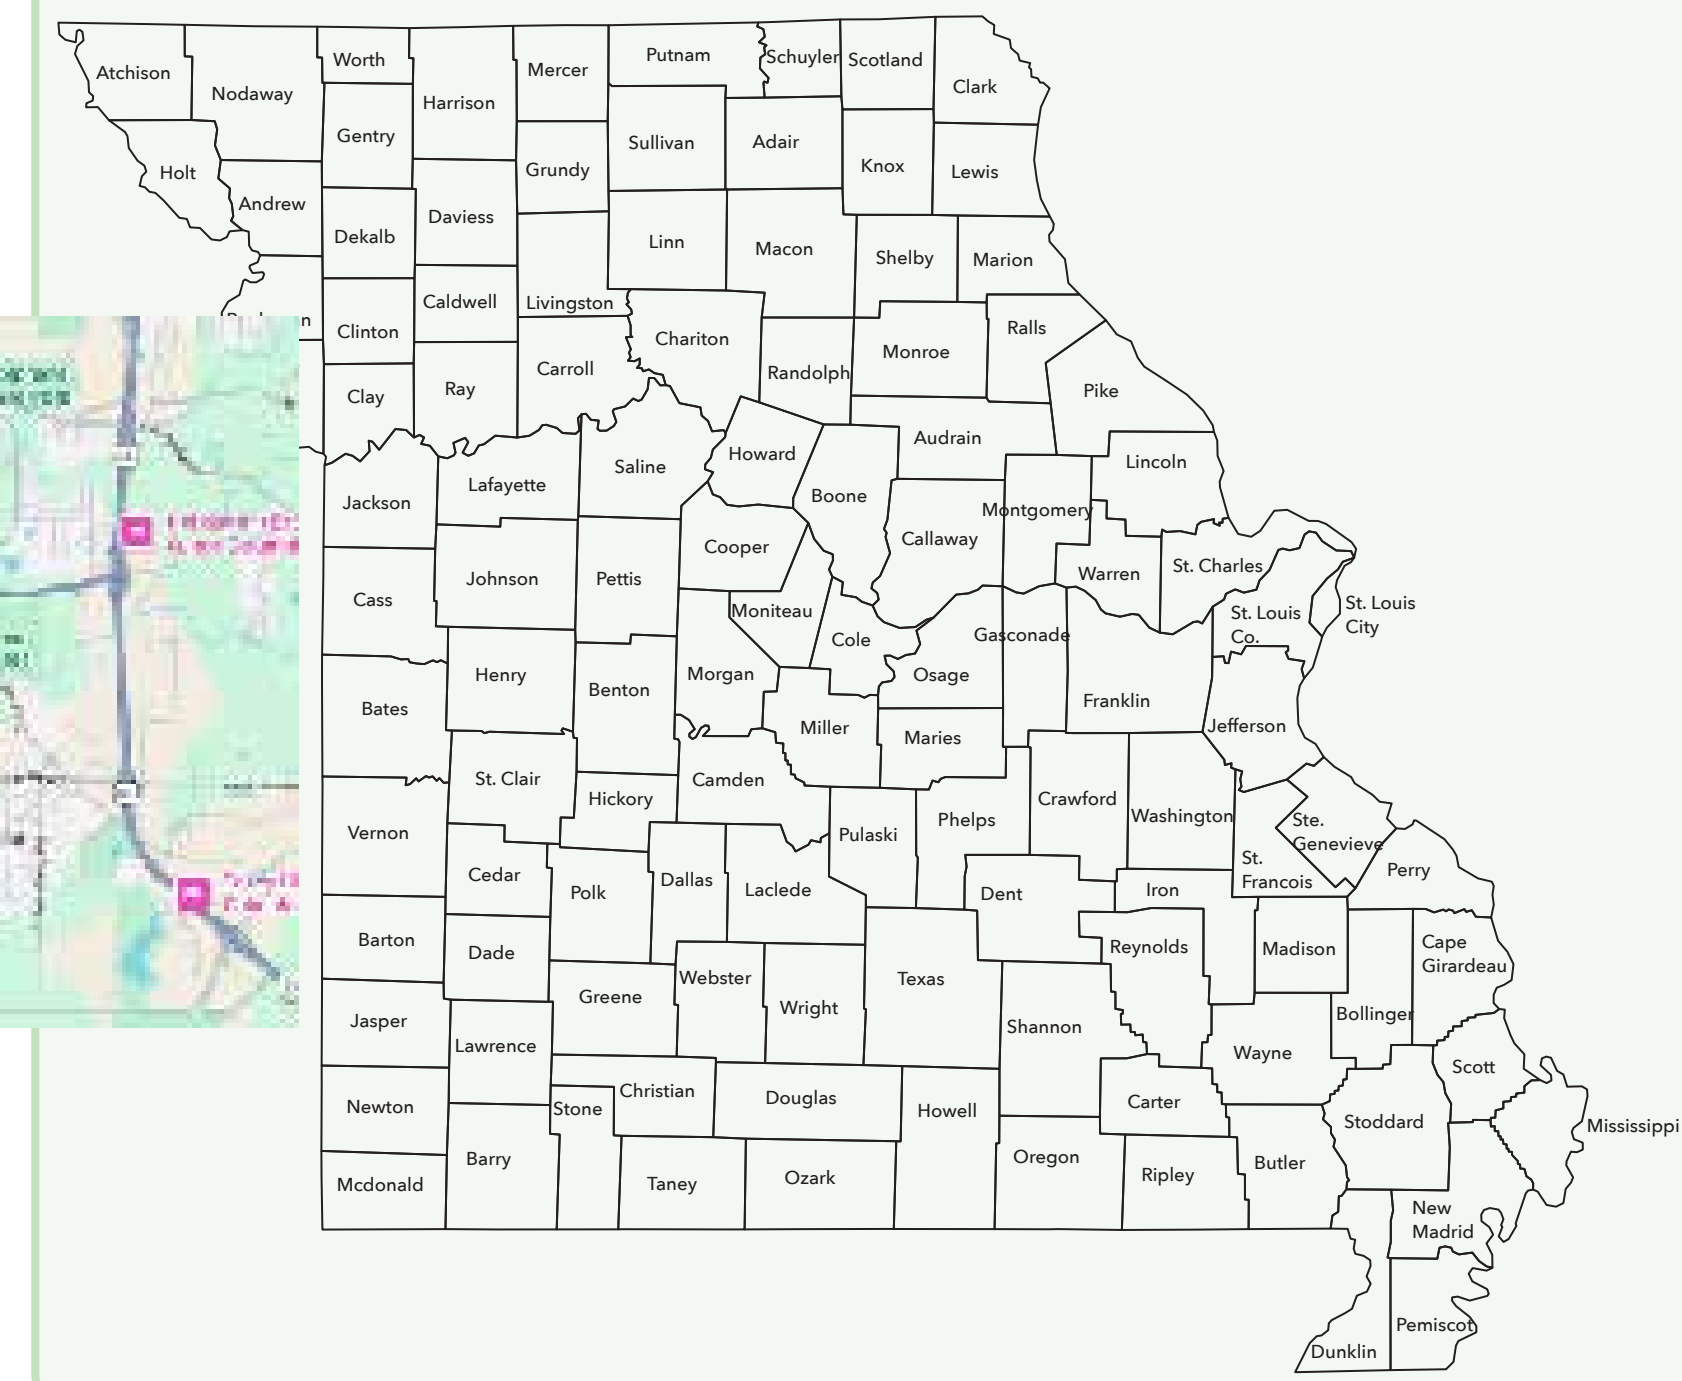

City of Columbia map with major roads | Boone County map with city of Columbia inlet

Missouri state map with counties (editable-->ungroup)

U.S. State map (editable --> ungroup)

