

'Inappropriately certified' courses taught by teachers with one year of experience rise at CPS

Under what DESE labels as “inappropriately certified,” courses being taught by teachers with one year of experience who only have substitute certificates have risen the most at Columbia Public Schools. Michelle Holz, the interim assistant superintendent for human resources, said none of these are at the elementary school level.

