

UM music schools see slow improvements in faculty diversity as disparities persist

UM music programs have shown some improvements in diversifying their faculty, but white faculty members still make up around 80% of the department across all three campuses. In 2019, MU School of Music had the most diverse faculty in 10 years with six full-time faculty members of color.

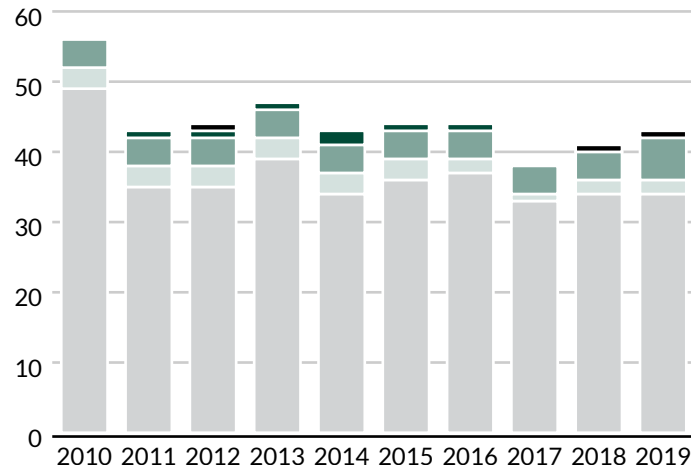

Note: None of the three music programs at UM had an American Indian faculty member over the last decade.
