

Curry County declares drought emergency

By JULIE AKINS
For the Pilot

When it comes to water, Oregon's cranberry capital is in trouble. So far, Curry County is at 60% of average rainfall, and the Chetco River is 60% below the record low set back in 1992. Curry is not alone in acknowledging a water crisis. According to the United States Drought Monitor created by several federal agencies -the entire Western United States is in a critical state of drought. 90 percent of the West which includes Oregon, California, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, New Mexico, Arizona and Montana are in drought. Conditions are considered "severe" or

"exceptional." And the demand for water continues to increase as the population increases, even in traditionally rural counties like Curry, which has grown by roughly 3% over the last decade, according to census data. That's a wallop to the agricultural producers of Curry County. There are 197 of them and among the top growers are cranberry producers who account for 99% of all cranberries grown in Oregon. But agriculture isn't the only thing hurting- drinking water supplies are affected in Port Orford where there's no back up water source to shrinking Hubbard Creek and the city loses 40% of its water due to an aging transmission system. To deal with this, the Curry County Board of Commissioners declared a drought emergency at its Wednesday meeting. They acknowledged as a group that Curry County doesn't have the resources to deal with the situation - a move made by several Colton Cosby overcame more than just tough weather and rough terrain when he completed the 402-mile Oregon Coast Trail last week. Below, Cosby celebrates after finishing the Oregon Coast Trail. Despite having cystic fibrosis, Cosby hiked 402 miles in 29 days.

Cosby finishes Oregon Coast Trail, dreams even bigger

By DIANA BOSETTI
The Pilot

Traversing the 402-mile Oregon Coast Trail, dubbed OCT by seasoned hikers, involves disconnected and sometimes unsafe routes that require the navigation of tidal flows in order to proceed. Add to that a diagnosis of cystic fibrosis - a condition that mimics breathing through a straw - and 25-year-old Colton Cosby's ambition might best be described as not a challenge, but rather a struggle.

Not that Cosby, or "CJ" as short for Colton James Cosby, saw it that way. He completed the trail solo on September 20, carrying a portable nebulizer in his 30-pound backpack in case he needed supplemental mist to open his airways. Ironically, when asked what was most challenging about the expedition, Cosby's response was downright common - "My feet hurt," he said.

The entire venture took 29 days to complete, or as Cosby described it: four miles per hour; 26 nights of pitching a tent;

Economy showing signs of improvement

By DAVID RUPKALVIS
The Pilot

The economic devastation caused by COVID-19 is almost repaired, but there are still some hurdles to clear.

That was the message Guy Tauer, a regional economist with the Oregon Employment Department, shared recently.

On Tuesday, the state released its latest unemployment figures, showing Coos County dropped from 6.6 percent unemployment in August to 6.29 percent in September. In Curry County, the move was similar as the unemployment rate dropped from 7 percent to 6.7 percent.

"We saw a little bit of a decline in the unemployment rate," Tauer said. "We're continuing to see a fairly tight labor market."

Tauer said the unemployment rate in both counties is actually below the long-term average, but it remains above the pre-COVID levels in March 2020 when both counties reported unemployment of about 5 percent.

Tauer said while there are jobs available, more than 1,800 in Coos, Curry and Douglas counties can be seen on job boards, employers are struggling to find good workers.

"What we saw across the state was an increasing number of vacancies the employers are saying are difficult to fill," Tauer said.

While some blame the tight labor market on increased unemployment payments, Tauer said the federal programs ended early this month. Whether the expanded payments kept people at home is not certain, he added.

"It's really tough to say," Tauer said. "In the states that ended benefits early, while there was an uptick of employment and earnings, the amount of people that

COVID cases continue to drop in Curry County

By DAVID RUPKALVIS

Curry County continues to show signs of improvement as the Delta variant appears to be releasing its grip in the county.

After several days with low single digit cases reported, the Oregon Health Authority reported 11 new cases in Curry County on Tuesday.

That was the highest case count reported in the last week, but it was still significantly lower than cases coming in just a few weeks ago.

Over the weekend, just five new COVID cases were reported in Curry County after a report that showed two new cases Friday. No new COVID-related deaths have been reported in the last week.

Curry County's number follow the trend in the state, which seems to be on the downslope after record cases for much of August and early September.

While the case count has dropped, there are still strong challenges to the healthcare system as hospitals, and intensive care units, are filled with patients.

According to data released by the Oregon Health Authority, there are only 78 non-ICU hospital beds open in Region 3, which includes Curry, Coos, Douglas and Lane counties. As of Tuesday, there were only five adult ICU beds available in the region.

While Curry County has shown improvements in recent weeks, both Coos and Douglas counties continue to see high numbers and new COVID-linked deaths.

Coos County reported 86 new cases and three new deaths Tuesday while Douglas County reported 85 new cases.

With the Delta variant remaining a threat as it remains highly contagious, health experts encourage local residents to take steps to prevent getting infected.

Getting vaccinated remains the best way to protect yourself, as more than 80 percent of new cases in Oregon are among the unvaccinated. Wearing masks in public, social distancing and washing hands frequently are also recommended steps.

one night in a hiker hut; one night in a Motel 6 (to shower and wash some clothes), and some unfortunate road walking along the 101 where 10% of the trail isn't rooted in nature. "That's when my feet would hurt," said Cosby, who at a stature of 210 pounds talked about the trek with a boyish nature. "But I needed to do this first. I plan to do the Ice Age Trail in May or June of next year, and that's 1,200 miles over the entire state of Wisconsin."

A quick Google search pegs the Oregon Coast Trail at 362 miles. But that doesn't account for the road walking that Cosby said he had to trudge between established walking paths and camp sites - hence the extra and arduous 40 miles that Cosby said he wished the Oregon state park system would invest funds towards, in the interest of not only his feet, but the safety of those who tackle the trail.

Cosby, who lives in Douglas County and finished his trek at the Oregon/California border in Curry County, is used to obstacles, however, and isn't easily deterred. Near the age of 5, Cosby had not yet begun to speak. His adoptive parents learned sign language to connect with the active toddler, and his dad said he's been adapting to his son's unique obstacles and ambitions ever since.

"CJ can be hard to keep up with," said David Cosby, who works in the logging industry as a security and fire watcher in the field for Dancer Logging, Inc. "Even more so when trying to keep up with his mind, because he has so many hopes and ambitions of things he wants to do with his life."

The junior Cosby said his ultimate goal is to cross the Pacific Crest Trail, a behemoth 2,650-mile jaunt that begins at the small town of Campo at the Mexican border and reaches north to Manning Park in British Columbia. Cosby hopes to master this and other trails while pursuing a degree in documentary filming between excursions. This could also mean a lot of travel time for Cosby's dad, who walks with him during day trips on local trails but opts to travel from a distance in his 32-foot travel trailer during the longer hauls.

It's obvious the duo is close. Cosby finished the Oregon Coast Trail on September 19, but decided to spend the night at Crissey State Park so that he and his dad could walk the last mile together, ceremoniously touching the state park sign with the palm of their hands.

While Cosby noted he has the support of his dad, he is also inspired by another: Nick Talbot, a County Durham, England-based climber who also has cystic fibrosis. Talbot was the first man with cystic fibrosis to summit weather-fickle Mt. Everest - on his third attempt. On his second attempt, he suffered cracked ribs and hypothermia after an 8.7 magnitude earthquake caused an avalanche that killed many climbers, including his friend and Google Executive Dan Fredinburg.

The climbing community, though vast, is nonetheless close knit. Talbot responded to a request for comment from the Curry Coastal Pilot about Cosby's achievement.

"First of all, a big congratulations to Colton," Talbot said. "402 miles is impressive for anyone to do, let alone someone with CF (cystic fibrosis).

He must have overcome so much to achieve this. I'm happy that my Everest challenge has encouraged Colton to push impressive new boundaries, and I hope all CFers get to live their best life and push their own personal boundaries whatever they may be."

"That has made my day," responded Cosby, who was eating his first post-hike, home-cooked breakfast when notified of Talbot's words.

Talbot echoed Cosby's drive to keep pushing forward.

"I was inspired to climb by the desire to push boundaries and raise profile and money for CF charities around the world," he said. "It's really tough having challenging goals with CF because it is so much harder to become as fit as other people, deal with lower lung capacity and potential infections and continue treatments. Sometimes, you have to develop special techniques to deal with CF to achieve your goal."

As for his next excursion? Cosby conceded he will need to give up his penchant for junk food, opting instead for a high-protein and nutrient rich diet.

"This time I was able to complete the trip with a basic outline that was loosely planned," he said. "But the next time I will need to eat healthier in order to meet the 10-20 miles of walking a day."

The senior Cosby, perhaps still recuperating from the month prior, was more inclined to reflect on the day's one-mile walk to the finish line.

"It was a very emotional time. He's got a disease," David Cosby said. "He's gonna die with it sooner or later, we just don't know when. Until then, he wants to get as much out of life as possible."

John Robert Deck, Sr.

OCTOBER 7, 1930 – SEPTEMBER 5, 2021

John Robert Deck, Sr; died after a brief illness on Sunday, September 5, 2021, a month short of his 91st birthday.

On October 7, 1930, John was born in Santa Anna, California, to John Martin and Virginia (Ruth) Deck. John's mom, Ruth, died when he was still an toddler. John spent his early childhood in Orange, and the family eventually moved to a farm in Garden Grove. John enjoyed working on the farm and maintaining equipment.

Early in John's life, Ruth's father, respectfully referred to as Grandfather Roberts, mentored him in business and financial skills that John built on for the rest of his life. (John sought to pass this same knowledge to his children and grandchild.)

John met the love of his life, Dorothy L. Collins while attending Garden Grove High School. He played football in high school and kept a picture of the team on his office wall as a reminder. John and Dorothy were married on November 27, 1949 (71 years).

After high school, John attended Santa Anna community college for several years until he landed a job at Johnson Tractor in Riverside, California. While employed from 1950 to 1974, John worked as a Diesel Mechanic, Service Manager, and Equipment Acquisition. While at Johnson Tractor, John obtained his Private Pilot's license for work-related travel and was active in Riverside Toastmasters.

After leaving Johnson Tractor, John and Dorothy moved to Brookings, Oregon, in 1975, purchasing Brookings Supply (later to become Napa Auto Parts). John and Dorothy sold the store in 1999, retiring a second time to enjoy RVing and fishing together. John also became reacquainted with his love for gardening, growing onions, garlic, and other vegetables and berries.

While in Brookings, John was a member of Rotary Club, Brookings Elks, and Board member of the Brookings/Harbor Ambulance Association. John enjoyed shooting Black power and was part of the Jed Smith Mountain Men and the Chetco Long rifles.

John is survived by his wife Dorothy and three children, John R Deck, Jr., Larry Deck, and Pam Dale; eight grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren.

We will remember John for his infectious smile, great laugh, and his firm handshake. John always sought to treat people fairly and look for the good in people.

His most significant achievement was practicing the lessons he learned from Grandfather Roberts and passing that same knowledge on to the family. (Though a close second was catching a nice steelhead or salmon.)

At the end of each day, John would enjoy sitting and watching a beautiful South Coast sunset. So, the next time you see one, remember John and give thanks; because that is what the family will be doing!

No services are planned at this time.

Obituaries

Guy Lawrence Wienert

Guy Lawrence Wienert entered the kingdom of heaven on August 26, 2021 in Springfield, Oregon surrounded by his 2 children. Guy was born on August 28, 1953 in Downey, California to Betty Lee Wienert and John Hugo Wienert. Soon after his birth he moved with his parents to live on Alcatraz Island in the San Francisco Bay Area. Guy's father was an active-duty United States Coast Guardsman and stationed as a member of the Alcatraz Lighthouse detail.

A few years later his parents separated, and he moved with his mother and younger brother to live with his grandparents in Garden Grove, California. His mother remarried and settled in Bellflower Calif. After his mother and stepfather separated, Guy and his brother became Wards of the court and were placed into the foster care system. Guy moved many times throughout the Southern California area, moving home to home. His experience as a foster child allowed him to learn about many different cultures and gave him a heart for the poor and less fortunate, and somehow gave him a positive outlook on life.

Guy loved to swim and especially loved the beach, and the Chetco River. He loved sports and played competitively in baseball, football, and basketball. His favorite sport was baseball, his favorite team was the Chicago Cubs. He was a baseball varsity letterman in high school, although his fondest memories included playing softball in a Tuxedo in Brookings. He graduated from Bell High School in 1971.

During his last years of high school, he started hitch hiking from Southern California to Brookings, eventually in the early 70's he decided to stay in Brookings and never leave.

In 1987 he married Patricia Scott and together they had 2 children. Raising his children was the greatest joy of Guy's life. Although their marriage didn't work, Guy loved Patt until the day he died.

Guy was a lily bulb farmer for Hastings for 30+ years, in the 1980's him and Norm Hanscam grew garlic, which eventually led them to Hastings. For the last 8 years of his life, he drove taxi where he was able to use the cab to serve others, every time his children talked to him, he was helping someone.

His great love of Music was always an important part of his life. His favorite music was the Beatles. From the time they first invaded America until his passing. His favorite song was "in my Life", which his daughter and he danced to at her wedding.

Nothing compared to his love for God and his family. He deeply loved his brothers and sisters, and his children were his greatest treasure.

Guy is survived by his children Jessica (Joshua) de Meurers (Vancouver, WA) and Ricky Wienert, (Redmond, OR). Siblings

Rick Wienert (NC), Lori Wood, Danny Mckee, Erik Wienert, and Mary Martinelli (CA). His sister Lori and their spouses raised their 5 children (all born within 28 months of each other) as siblings, Cory Wood (CA), Ashley Power, and Blaine Power (CO) were also his children. He was also survived by numerous other nieces, and nephews-he was uncle Guy to every kid he met. He had a lot of friends he was survived by but we feel like we need to highlight Norm Hanscam, Nick Anderson, Dave Monaghan, and Jill Aardappel.

He is proceeded in death by his parents, brother Randy, foster mom Mrs. Waterman, Grandmother Louis, Sandy Peterson, brother-in-law Jeff Power, and many friends.

A small group of family gathered to spread his ashes on September 11, there will be a big camp out celebration sometime in the future at Nook Bar.

How I learned to love maggots

By DAVE MARSTON

If you’re one of those people who composts everything you can think of because you want to build up your garden soil, you might — like me this summer — learn to love the maggots of black soldier flies. They put composting on speed dial.

When other volunteers planted or weeded at our community garden, I took on running two spinning composting bins. I filled both 50-gallon composters with kitchen scraps and woody material. But surprise, two Sundays later, black soldier flies had appeared. I’d inadvertently attracted them by leaving the bins in a state of putrescence, because while I was gone for a couple of weeks, no one tended them. They stunk up the place, but the good news was that soldier flies had detected that delicious rot and moved right in.

Peering into the bin, I saw nothing but the flies’ off-white larvae wriggling over each other. All that remained were pistachio hulls and wood chips. My first instinct was to call an exterminator, but after watching YouTube and seeing 200,000 fly larvae demolish a pizza, I realized the endless possibilities of maggots — and not just for gardeners.

I’ve come to think of the creatures as nature’s high-tech answer to organic waste. Simply spread the larvae on rotting food — or animal or human poop, for that matter — and they will chew the mess into something remarkably small. (To start your own colony, check out the many YouTube videos that provide helpful tips.)

Wyoming Extension Service entomologist Scott Schell is a fan of black soldier flies. He calls barnyard flies “filth flies” because they stomp around in poop and then hop on food in our kitchens, spreading bacteria that can make people sick. Even nastier, he says, are the stable flies that suck the blood of mammals.

Black soldier flies, however, don’t bite. They look something like wasps, and their wriggling larvae can chew through organic material and double their body weight in a day. You could call them the super-grubs of any compost heap.

Black soldier flies, Hermetia illucens, are present on six continents and in most states. The adult flies live just two weeks, using up the vast stores of energy accumulated during their five stages of pupation. While growing, the young larvae nosh like guests at an all-you-can-eat buffet, taking short breaks to digest and poop. Schell calls black soldier flies “a biological deterrent since their voracious menu includes larvae of all flies...filth flies included.”

Their poop is called “frass,” and it needs more time curing before it can be used as a soil amendment. Because the flies’ wondrous guts break down bacteria of all kind, frass contains no pathogens such as E. coli.

For chicken farms or dairy operations that swim in animal waste (one dairy cow produces 120 pounds of manure daily), black soldier flies can seem miraculous. But there’s even more to admire because the grubs themselves may be wriggling gold. With a fat content of up to 35 percent, protein up to 50 percent (depending on what they eat) and plenty of calcium, they are a super-food for fish or poultry, reports Nature.com.

Because millions of acres of arable land go into cultivating food for animals, and because overfishing has harmed fish populations, the United Nations champions maggots and insect production. Last year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture authorized the sale of insect larvae to commercial fish and chicken farms.

As rural Western towns suburbanize, black soldier flies could also reduce what gets dumped in landfills, but only if kitchen waste gets separated from ordinary trash. Organic waste is a great producer of methane, aka renewable natural gas, and once you remove materials that rot from landfills, you slow climate change.

As a sign of things to come, Enviroflight, a division of Darling Ingredients, is already running a commercial-scale Black Flies business in Maysville, Kentucky. It produces pet food and recently announced plans to build a second facility.

As the West grows in population, dealing with not-in-my-backyard issues like smell and flies will move to the top of many municipalities’ to-do lists. So just imagine a future where castoff organic waste is upcycled right in the neighborhood, where it’s turned into garden compost, chicken feed and, one day, even biodiesel for buses.

It’s time to stop shipping water across the Rockies

By DAVID O. WILLIAMS

It was 1952 when the cities of Aurora and Colorado Springs first started gobbling up water rights in a remote, high mountain valley on the state’s Western Slope. The valley is called Homestake, and now, those same cities want even more of its pure water.

In western Colorado, where only about 20% of Colorado’s population lives, all water tries to flow toward the Pacific Ocean. On the east side, where most people live, water flows to the Atlantic. To bring the water from the west side to the east side of the Rockies requires lots of money and lots of pipelines.

But money isn’t much of a barrier when your population is exploding: Colorado Springs, with 478,961 residents, and Aurora, with 386,261, need more water. And they aim to get it even if it must cross under the Continental Divide and damage a fragile and ancient wetland called a “fen” in the process.

The new reservoir the two cities plan to build would be five miles downstream from their existing Homestake Reservoir and called Whitney Reservoir after a creek that flows into Homestake Creek.

There’s also a Whitney Park within the nearby Holy Cross Wilderness Area, which could lose some 500 acres if the new reservoir goes through.

But protesters are already active, and conservation groups are threatening lawsuits. Meanwhile, the cities have already quietly begun test drilling at four possible dam sites on U.S. Forest Service land along Homestake Creek.

Obstacles, however, are popping up. The Forest Service says it won’t even consider a reservoir proposal that shrinks a wilderness area, and the cities would have to get that approval from both Congress and the White House.

The U.S. congressman for the district, rising Democratic star

DAVID O. WILLIAMS

Joe Neguse, has also made it clear he doesn’t support shrinking a designated wilderness or damaging wetlands. Local leaders are also chiming in: “A Whitney Reservoir would irreparably change and harm our community,” said Minturn Mayor John Widerman and Red Cliff Mayor Duke Gerber, who co-wrote a letter to the Forest Service. Both represent small towns dependent on tourism and outdoor recreation.

State Sen. Kerry Donovan, a Democrat who grew up in the nearby ski town of Vail, also wrote the Forest Service to oppose the dam: “I cannot express how sternly the citizens of my district ... oppose water diversion projects to Front Range communities.”

Another issue, and for some it’s the most critical, is the fate of valuable “fen” wetlands that would be destroyed by a dam and reservoir. “This is one of the finest wetlands we can find on our forest — it’s unbelievable,” White River National Forest Supervisor Scott Fitzwilliams told Aspen Journalism in 2019. “You can mitigate, but you can’t replace 10,000 years of work.”

Nor can you turn the clock back to 1952, when Colorado’s population was 1.36 million, compared to 5.7 million today, and the global land and ocean temperature was 1.52 degrees Fahrenheit cooler. Climate change, scientists say, will cause the Colorado River to lose up to 31% of its historical flow by 2052. That prediction was a factor in a recent, first-ever federal water shortage declaration.

“When Colorado Springs and Aurora got their water right, the [Holy Cross] wilderness wasn’t there and wetlands at that time were something we were just filling in,” said Jerry Mallett, president of the local conservation group Colorado Headwaters. “Since then (wetlands) have become an extremely valuable resource because of what they can do for groundwater recharge, addressing climate change — all kinds of things.”

Then there’s the issue of Kentucky bluegrass, Colorado’s land-scaping groundcover of choice. Kentucky gets more than 50 inches of rain a year compared to the Front Range average of 17, so why pump western Colorado’s high-elevation water through the Rockies for lawns?

Colorado photographer and conservationist John Fielder, who says he’s been just about everywhere within the nearly 123,000-acre Holy Cross Wilderness Area, wants people to just look at his images of the fen wetlands along Homestake Creek, and then ask themselves these questions:

“Is anything more sublime and fertile and life-giving than a 10,000-or-more-year-old fen wetland? You can’t “mitigate” the loss of ancient wetlands by creating a manmade wet place somewhere else. No more water to the Front Range.”

Oregon’s nine tribes ask for voice in water planning

The following commentary summarizes a letter to Gov. Kate Brown from the leaders of Oregon’s nine federally recognized Indian tribes. The letter was delivered Sept. 21.

Dear Gov. Brown,

We the nine sovereign tribes of Oregon thank you for your leadership in recognizing that our great state needs a water vision with at least a 100-year view. We are all dedicated to improving this beautiful place that we now call Oregon.

We have met as the tribes of Oregon to share and discuss our beliefs, concerns and needs for an Oregon water vision. Each of us is a distinct and unique sovereign, but we have all reached agreement regarding these issues.

Water is sacred. Water is life. Water is the heartbeat of our culture. Our understanding of these truths is based upon a legacy of survival and reliance on our Oregon oceans, rivers and lakes. Whether we are planning for one year or 100 years, any water vision must, at its core, restore and protect cold, clean water.

As modern Oregonians we have not done this well. It is time for a step forward.

Our tribes and their fisheries lived together before Oregon existed. Our ancestors understood that they had to live in a balanced relationship with oceans, rivers, creeks, lakes, springs, marshes, and the flora and fauna that depend upon them. There was, and is, no other way to survive. Many modern Oregonians, however, act as if there are no consequences or natural limitations of our water consumption, including groundwater.

Our people have seen the changes to our waters and our lands caused by mismanagement. There is a very real threat of extinction for steelhead, salmon, lamprey, suckers and other species in our oceans, streams, rivers and lakes. We have known of these problems for a long time.

The extinction of these vital fisheries would equate to the genocide of our people and the end of our irreplaceable lifeways — because these resources form essential parts of who we are. The extinction of native fisheries is completely unacceptable to our nations. Whether intentional or not, we know our state is treading a dangerous path in several watersheds.

We have seen many planning processes come and go. If a plan fails to take on these issues, it will fail to create acceptable solutions. The truth is that the state and the tribes in Oregon know the main barriers to healthy oceans, rivers, and waters. We all have known for some time. What is missing is the will to change the way we do business. Our water and those who depend on it have paid the price.

As Oregon’s “water vision” initiative moves forward, and to ensure that our voices will be clearly heard in all that process might entail, the tribes request the following:

1. By executive order, establish a “Tribe-Agency Water Vision Task Force” to include representation from Oregon’s nine federally recognized tribes and the nine state agencies identified in Oregon’s Water Resources Strategy. The goal of this group would be to fully coordinate the vision and goals of a holistic water vision.

2. Collaborate with each of our tribes to develop specific recommendations for the water plan. Each of our sovereign tribes may have unique, specific interests pertinent to water resources and/or water infrastructure within their ancestral areas.

All of Oregon’s tribes are eager and willing to engage.

All regards,
The nine sovereign tribes of Oregon lost benefits was greater. How will it play out in September? There’s so many moving parts going on.”

Tauer said hearing from employers is not the only evidence of a tight labor market. He has seen it himself.

“That’s a big challenge,” he said. “In the Medford area, we had a job fair. We had around 60 employers and around 50 people looking for jobs. It’s nothing like it used to be. We would have that many waiting in the lobby and a line out the door and down the block.”

A year ago, at the peak of the pandemic shutdowns, there were 2,045 jobs available. Today, in Coos, Curry and Douglas counties, that number is close to 7,000.

In addition to added unemployment benefits, Tauer said there were other factors keeping people from looking for work.

The biggest is the uncertainty due to COVID. Tauer said some older workers have stayed away due to concerns over catching COVID, and younger workers have struggled with schools opening and closing and finding daycare.

“How much will it change in the next month?” he asked. “There’re too much in play. What will happen with schools? Will schools be able to stay open? It’s hard to figure out how this will play out over time.”

In Coos County, the job gains have been fairly strong, but Curry County has lagged a little. Tauer said that is largely due to differences in the neighboring counties.

“Curry County is quite a bit smaller and a little more dependent on leisure and hospitality,” he said. “Definitely a smaller economy so not as diverse.”

Tauer said the biggest struggles throughout the pandemic and now in finding workers is in leisure and hospitality, with businesses such as restaurrants, hotels and others struggling.

But, he added, the pandemic has not spared any sector.

The Office of Economic Analysis recently released a study that predicts over the next year the labor market will remain tight with more jobs available than workers. The study predicts growing wages as a result.

But ultimately, Tauer said, COVID will play a role in how that works out.

“So much is unknown,” he said. “Fortunately, case counts have edged down in the last couple of weeks.”

Even with the uncertainty, the local economies are showing signs of life, and the good news is expected to continue in the coming months.

“We’re still slowly improving,” Tauer said. “A lot of it will be dependent on how fast consumers are comfortable living the lives they did in 2019. That will depend on vaccinations and variants and, of course, government response to case numbers.”

Drought

other Oregon counties including Deschutes, Jefferson, Crook, Harney, Malheur, Sherman, Wallowa and Klamath.

The declaration triggers a request to Oregon Governor Kate Brown who can, if she wishes, issue an executive order which directs the state’s Department of Agriculture to seek federal aid.

The first step is to do what the board of commissioners did Wednesday. With agricultural producers creating a $33 million industry - a lot in Curry County rides on water resources and a continued drought could create dire circumstances not only to its chief industry, but also to its residents.

In addition, the emergency declaration discusses the extreme risk of wildfire as a result of water shortages which it describes as “inevitable in 2022.”

The emergency declaration vote was two in favor and one opposed, with Chris Paasch voting no. Paasch argued that a hard rain in June combined with what he believes will be a wetter winter may prevent the declaration from being necessary.

He suggested that it would be better “to wait and see how things look in the spring.”

But the rest of the commissioners felt it would be best to get on the record now and in line for whatever help may become available, given that a spreading drought will create demand on aid dollars.

99.3% of Oregon is considered to be in “severe drought” according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which means fire risk increases, marshes dry up, little water is available for waterfowl and wildlife and bears move into the urban interfaces. Pastures are brown; hay yields are down, and prices are up; producers are selling cattle.

More than 76% of Oregon is in “extreme drought” which has the same features as severe drought but also includes extremely low reservoirs and irrigation water scarcity. Curry County has seven and a half fewer inches of water than normal and is the driest it’s been in 127 years.

100% of people in Curry County are affected by drought, according to the Atmospheric Administration.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. CAP introduces art to Brookings-area students

By SHARON GUY
CAP Coordinator

Developing children’s imagination is what brought former educators and Pelican Bay Arts Association members together to form the Children’s Art Program in December of 2018. They established their goals and created the following mission statement:

‘The Manley Art Program for Children is designed to teach art techniques and vocabulary. The program will focus on the seven art elements: line, shape, form, space, texture, value, and color. To build a solid foundation in art, we will incorporate art history, fun materials and exciting techniques. Students will be encouraged to view and discuss art, thereby expanding their ability to articulate their own thoughts, ideas and creative choices.’

Classes began in February 2019 with a generous donation for materials from PBAA members, and a significant donation from the Harris Family to be used for scholarships. With many volunteer hours, these dedicated members developed and implemented five classes, which were filled to capacity. Students ages 6 to 12 were immersed in art history

The Manley Art Program for Children is designed to teach art techniques and vocabulary. The program will focus on the seven art elements: line, shape, form, space, texture, value, and color. To build a solid foundation in art, we will incorporate art history, fun materials and exciting techniques. Students will be encouraged to view and discuss art, thereby expanding their ability to articulate their own thoughts, ideas and creative choices.

Children's Art Program mission statement that launched them into creating works incorporating the seven elements using various materials. Skills that were developed through drawing, painting and ceramics enhanced their imaginative creations.

Full steam ahead was voiced by all the CAP volunteers, until COVID-19 struck, the monster that put its foot down on our momentum and enthusiasm in 2020. Slowly but surely, we are coming out of our stupor. Putting their fears to the side, two PBAA members, Linda Evans and Chaney Delaire, successfully taught classes in summer 2021 to a full classroom, giving a much-needed artistic outlet to our local youth.

CAP encouraged attendance of Brookings-Harbor’s children from all income households by having a policy of keeping class fees to a minimum and making scholarships available. Although the classes were full, we still felt that some children were being excluded. We did not take into account the issues of after-school activities and transportation concerns. We needed a solution.

In the Spring of 2021, a proposal for a CAP pilot program was presented to the Brookings-Harbor School District. The CAP program would conduct one-hour classes for all the third-graders during the 2021-22 school year. Enthusiasm and encouragement came from all interested community leaders and resulted in the approval of this pilot program. CAP will now work with the Kalmiopsis Principal Carol Leonard and the third-grade teachers to have each student receive a one-hour art class for four weeks. They will have exposure to art history, the seven elements of art, develop skills in using art materials and, hopefully, this will ignite their imaginations. We are planning to implement the program this fall, provided the COVID-19 does not impact the health and safety of the students and teachers.

If this pilot program is successful for all partners, we hope to expand this program in the future.

The CAP Pilot Program would not be possible without the help of community partners through their encouragement, financial support and their expertise in organizing programs that benefit children. With sincere gratitude, from all the Brookings-Harbor children and the PBAA/CAP organization, the following organizations are appreciated.

- Brookings-Harbor School District
- Pelican Bay Arts Association/Manley Art Center
- Curry County Cultural Coalition
- Brookings-Harbor Educational Foundation, Inc.
- Oregon Cultural Trust

The Manley Art Center will continue to offer ‘outside of school’ classes that require more in-depth lessons, expert instruction and proper facilities. Of course, none of this is possible without dedicated teachers. If you love children and are passionate about fostering the love of creating art, CAP will be happy to assist you in becoming a CAP teacher of ‘imagination’. Construction begins soon at Curry Medical Center in Brookings Renovations to Curry Medical Center in Brookings are expected to begin September 20 and end in December. Curry Health Network asks that you pardon the dust as work is done to make key technological upgrades to diagnostic imaging equipment.

“Curry Health Network continues to improve and expand the services it offers to the communities it serves. The renovations at Curry Medical Center provide for the installation of a new CT Scanner and Nuclear Medicine Camera, both arriving at the of October,” said Ginny Williams, CEO of CHN.

Williams wants to reassure patients and visitors to the facility that impact will be negligible.

“They will notice a mobile CT Scanner outside the building, but the quality of the mobile CT is better than the CT being replaced, and patients will present to registration, as usual,” she said.

CHN provides expert care in health — from diagnosis to rehabilitation — and this new state-of-the-art technology will improve the health network’s imaging capabilities.

The CT scanner is a critical diagnostic tool that helps with everything from identifying fractures to aiding in cancer screenings. This new scanner provides for more accurate scans, a better patient experience, and is an overall aid to the medical team.

The Nuclear Medicine Camera allows diagnosticians to get a clear and thorough picture of your heart, which helps identify coronary artery disease. The technology can be lifesaving as it can show which patients may have a greater risk for heart attacks.

These technological advances are an investment in the health of the Curry County community. They will help the expert team at CHN have a clearer picture of your healthcare needs and provide the best possible tools right here in your community.

High quality care and excellent service are the top priorities at Curry Health Network, and there will be no disruption to normal services at Curry Medical Center during construction. Appointments can be scheduled as normal by calling 541-412-2000.

Soroptimist announces local scholarship winners

Soroptimist International of Brookings is excited to report that seven scholarships have been awarded to local women.

Kaylee Strain and Savannah Sanders each received $1,500 scholarships. A $500 scholarship was awarded to Makala Fulton and Alexis Pacino. These scholarships are financed by Brookings Soroptimists’ various fundraiser which the community so generously supports.

The annual Holiday Wreath Sale is the main financial support for this program and more information on the sale will be available shortly. The Judy Dobberpuhl Bright Light Scholarships in the amount of $1,000 each have been awarded to Alexis Pacino, Gina Podesta and Ashlie Pieren, who may also reaply in the Spring.

It is the thoughtful financial support of this community that enables local women receiving these awards to achieve their goals to further their education, improve their lives and the lives of their families.
