KNOX KERANEN
The Pilot

Some local law enforcement officers are calling for an upgrade to the county's aging radio dispatch equipment.

During a Wednesday board of commissioners meeting, members of the Curry County Sheriff's office made their case for upgrading the dispatch system, which multiple local police and fire agencies use for communication.

Among those using the system, Gold Beach and Port Orford police, multiple fire departments, as well as the sheriff's office and Coos Forest Patrol. Brookings police has its own dispatch system.

Captain Phil McDonald recommended the commissioners consider using some of the incoming federal coronavirus relief money, which can be used toward infrastructure, to pay for the $714,000 upgrade.

"It's not a matter of if this breaks, it's when this breaks because it is old equipment," said McDonald. "We have the opportunity to have our system updated, a big portion of it, not being borne by the taxpayers of the county, it's being borne by money from the federal government."

Sheriff John Ward said the sheriff's office recently experienced an issue with the equipment during a May 11 rescue of four people, whose boat became stuck on a gravel bar on the Rogue River.

"We sent a marine deputy up there with a couple of SAR [search and rescue] members, it was very tough to hear what they were saying. Our marine deputy ended up getting his boat stuck...It all ended up pretty well, but my point is it's been an ongoing issue," said Ward.

Commissioner Chris Paasch spoke in support of the upgrade and noted the importance of emergency communications.

"This is an integral part of the infrastructure of this county," said Paasch. "For me, to be proactive on this, it's imperative that we look at this."

He said he did not expect the board to take action at that meeting, but he wanted to bring it forward sooner rather than later. Commissioners Court Boice and John Herzog were also in favor.

Boice said they may vote on the upgrade in early June. Additionally, the board plans to form a committee to evaluate what exactly coronavirus relief funds should be used toward.

Alfred A. Loeb State Park reopens

KNOX KERANEN

After remaining closed for more than a year because of revenue shortfalls and reduced staffing due to COVID-19, the campground at Alfred A. Loeb State Park has reopened.

Located eight miles inland from Brookings along the Chetco River, the park features 48 campsites with electrical hookups, as well as three group picnic areas and restrooms with showers.

In addition to the reopening, Loeb has enrolled in the statewide online reservation system. Previously, all campsites at the park were first-come first served, which "created inefficiencies and inconsistencies to the process of administering campground stays," stated an April 29 press release from the Oregon Parks and Recreation Department announcing the reopening.

"Adding the park to the reservation system has been a long-term goal for the OPRD," said Coastal Region Manager Dennis Comfort in the release. "It brings consistency to agency processes and to the visitor experience. Now anyone can enjoy this beautiful campground, with the peace of mind that you'll arrive and

County supports bill to attract filmmakers

KNOX KERANEN
The Pilot

The Curry County Board of Commissioners will move to support a bill in the Oregon Legislature which proposes increasing tax incentives for companies producing films in the state.

Miranda Plagge, economic development assistant for the county, presented a letter of support for state House Bill 3244 to the commissioners during a Wednesday meeting. She said the bill could give Curry County an opportunity to attract more filmmakers into producing their films here.

"We can create a niche industry here in Curry," said Plagge.

Plagge said a recent science-fiction film made in Brookings, titled "54," had a dramatic impact on the local economy over the course of the three-week shoot.

During the shoot, the production company paid out $1.4 million in gross wages to Oregonians, as well as $120,385 in local site rental fees and $990,000 in goods and services, which includes $431,000 spent on lodging alone, mostly in Curry County, according to the Oregon Film.

"What I'm excited about is... Curry's on the map now," said Plagge. "We have the ability to help facilitate more productions."

All three commissioners were in support of the bill. Commissioner Chris Paasch said he has seen first-hand how a film production can be a shot in the arm for local economies.

"The movie 'Dreamers,' some of that was shot at my ranch in Kentucky. They rented everything," said Paasch. "They hired locals for all of the extra work, they leased wagons and gates and everything... The economic incentives for the county are tremendous."

Before voting on sending a letter of support, the commissioners wanted to amend some of the language.

U.S. Senator Jeff Merkley held a remote town hall with his Curry County constituents Wednesday. Beforehand, the Pilot asked Merkley about steps he is taking to address the challenges facing our region.

If passed, how would the proposed $2 trillion infrastructure bill, "The American Jobs Plan" help Curry County residents?

"The American Jobs Plan is going to address traditional infrastructure, as well as other types of infrastructure. The traditional is the jetties, dam repair, the roads, the bridges and then extending that to other forms that may be electric transmission lines.

Businesses must see proof of vaccination to forgo mask rules

ZACK DEMARS

Oregon businesses, employers and faith institutions must review proof of vaccination in order to ease up on state masking and social distancing rules, the Oregon Health Authority announced Tuesday.

The state's newest guidance on the issue came after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention announced fully vaccinated individuals can safely remove their masks in many instances.

"Under the updated guidance, people who are fully vaccinated will no longer be required to wear a mask indoors in most public settings where vaccination status is checked. In indoor public settings where vaccination status is not checked, masks will still be required," said state epidemiologist Dr. Dean Sidelinger.

Sidelinger addressed questions about the new policy in a press briefing Tuesday.

Here are some answers to a few top questions about the seismic shift in state policy, according to Sidelinger and the state's guidance.

Who counts as "fully vaccinated"?

Anyone who's more than two weeks past their second dose of a COVID-19 vaccine is considered fully vaccinated, according to OHA.

Do businesses need to require masks for patrons?

That depends. Under the new guidance, businesses can choose to either set up a system for verifying vaccination status before letting customers in, or continue to require masks and social distancing for all their patrons.

If businesses choose to verify vaccination status, those who are fully vaccinated can enter the business without a mask and without following social distancing rules.

"If they have a process to review vaccination records and show that people are fully vaccinated, they're free to serve customers in that manner," Sidelinger said.

Businesses who don't verify customer vaccination status must still follow the same guidance as before, with indoor masking and social distancing in place.

"If they don't want to or cannot implement a system like that, they can continue to operate under the OHA guidance that requires masks and physical distancing in most indoor public settings," Sidelinger said.

The rest of the state's guidance still applies, including the four-tier risk level system, which places capacity limitations on businesses,

Firefighters with Brookings and Harbor fire departments fight a blaze that broke out on Lone Ranch Beach.

Firefighters extinguish driftwood blaze

At around 6 a.m. Friday, Brookings and Harbor Fire Departments were dispatched to a reported large fire on Lone Ranch Beach. The Brookings duty officer called for Coos Forest Protection Agency and Cape Ferrell units to be dispatched while in route.

The first arriving fire unit found a large fire burning in the driftwood and starting to burn into the brush, around 50 yards by 20 feet in size. A hose line was put in from the apparatus and the fire was quickly knocked down and extinguished. Nineteen firefighters responded to the scene.

A park ranger was dispatched to assist with shutting down the access road while suppression was being achieved. Units were on scene for about four hours and park rangers will check the fire area throughout the day. The cause appears to be an abandoned campfire.

The Curry County fire agencies would like to remind the public not to build fires in the driftwood. If it's too windy by the water, it's too windy to have a fire. If you build a fire, you must have a means to extinguish the fire, a shovel and a bucket. Do not just bury the fire in the sand.

Curry County won't yet move to low-risk restrictions

ZACK DEMARS

The Pilot

Despite recording some of its lowest virus case counts in weeks, Curry County reported an additional COVID-19 death this week.

According to the Oregon Health Authority, an 83-year-old man who tested positive for the virus May 4 died May 10 at Bay Area Hospital. The presence of underlying conditions was still being confirmed by state officials as of the report last week.

The individual is the 10th in the state to die with the virus, according to OHA.

But in more positive news, Curry County is reporting low case rates.

The county reported just 12 cases of the virus between May 2 and 15, the lowest rate of cases in months.

That figure, coupled with a 4.2% test positivity rate during the same timeframe would have kicked the county into the low-risk tier of restrictions — but OHA officials announced changes in risk levels this week would only be based on vaccination rates, not case rates.

The move means that, if Curry County's case rates hold for another week, it could enter the low-risk category, allowing some restrictions on businesses to ease.

But the county has another option for moving to the low-risk category: Once 65% of the county's over-16 population has received a first dose of a vaccine, the rules stop changing, and the county stays in the low-risk category under a plan announced by Gov. Kate Brown last week.

On Tuesday, Brown announced five counties would be moving to the low-risk category of restrictions based on their vaccination rates, including Benton, Deschutes, Hood River, Lincoln and Washington.

As of Tuesday, Curry

County needed just under 3,500 more people to get their first COVID-19 shot before it met that threshold. Just under half of the county's adult population has received a dose of the vaccine, the 18th highest of the state's 36 counties.

Statewide, around 62% of the eligible population has received a dose of the vaccine. A 70% rate at the state level will largely do away with many of the restrictions that have hampered businesses and other activities for months.

Curry Health Network is continuing to offer vaccines weekly. More information and registration is available online at www.curryhealthnetwork.com/education.

Vaccines are available at other locations, too, including at: Rite Aid, Safeway and Albertsons stores, Fred Meyer, some Health Mart pharmacies, Bi-Mart and Walmart.

Masks

according to Sidelinger.

Do unvaccinated people still need to wear masks inside?

Yes. For unvaccinated individuals, the same indoor masking and social distancing rules apply as before. That means masks are required in businesses and other indoor settings.

Are their places fully vaccinated people still have to wear masks?

Yes, there are some exceptions to the loosening of mask restrictions.

Fully vaccinated people still must wear masks in health care settings; jails, correctional and youth detention facilities; shelters and transitional housing; public transportation and transportation hubs; and kindergarten to 12 schools, which are governed by a different set of rules.

How do businesses verify vaccination status?

Businesses need to review a COVID-19 vaccination card, Sidelinger said. That might include a physical vaccination card, a printout from a provider or a photo of a vaccination card on a cell phone.

Sidelinger said businesses should review the names and dates on the cards, making sure the individual's second dose of the vaccine was at least two weeks prior.

Businesses aren't required to record vaccination status, but just need to confirm that those entering a business are vaccinated.

"How they choose to keep track of that is an individual decision," Sidelinger said.

But isn't that a violation of privacy laws?

No. Federal medical privacy law prohibits medical providers and insurers from disclosing medical information to others without a patient's consent.

That law doesn't prohibit anyone from asking about someone else's vaccination status, and it doesn't prohibit anyone from voluntarily disclosing their own vaccination status, according to Sidelinger.

According to Sidelinger, those who don't want to get vaccinated or share the vaccination status don't have to.

"Those individuals can choose to get vaccinated, or if they choose not to, or don't want to share the fact that they're already vaccinated, they can wear a mask and keep their distance and be served by that business. Individuals have options, as do businesses in implementing this system," Sidelinger said.

What about outside?

Masks are no longer required for anyone outdoors. However, OHA's guidance still recommends unvaccinated individuals wear masks outdoors in crowded spaces where social distancing can't be maintained, especially for those who are at higher risk for serious complications with the virus

That includes K-12 sports, which can be conducted maskless if vaccination status is verified, Sidelinger said.

Who enforces the rules?

Just like the rest of the state's COVID-19 rules, the mask guidelines will still be enforced by state and local health officials, Sidelinger said.

According to the doctor, Oregon OSHA conducts investigations and education on pandemic restrictions, and the Oregon Liquor Control Commission regulates businesses with liquor licenses.

Is this forever?

Probably not. Sidelinger said he expects the vaccination verification system policy to go away as the state continues to loosen restrictions.

"I don't anticipate that this sort of system will be in place forever. As (Gov. Kate Brown) announced last week, we have some goals in place for how we ease restrictions," Sidelinger said.

That'll happen when 70% of the state's 16-and-older population has received a first dose of the vaccine, and state health officials lift most aspects of the current restrictions.

its 123rd Basic Telecommunications Class.

The three-week course includes emergency call handling techniques, stress management, civil liability, ethics, criminal law, overview of fire-rescue and law enforcement operations and a number of other topics.

The 9-1-1 training program began in 1993 when the Oregon Legislative Assembly enacted legislation which requires that individuals who receive emergency calls for assistance from the public meet professional standards for training and certification. There are approximately 950 men and women across the state who work in this profession in city, county, tribal, regional and state public safety communications centers.

Basic Telecommunications #BT123 Graduation was May 14. Among them members of Basic Telecommunications Class #123 were Jasmin Brotton with the Curry County Sheriff's Office.

for housing to be part of the plan because that’s just critical infrastructure. We see the homeless, we see folks who can’t afford to rent, there’s not enough affordable rental housing.

Home ownership is getting out of reach, often even for middle class families, so we need to expand the housing stock. So, those are some examples of things that will go into the infrastructure bill.”

Working families in our county are struggling to find affordable child care; how can you help to expand daycares and preschools?

“The previous bill...the American Recovery Plan had a lot of support for child care, including the refundable child care tax credit, which is estimated to lift half of America’s children in poverty, out of poverty, so it’s a really powerful impact... We would try to extend that permanently, so it would become part of the American support system for families and enable people to balance work and child care much better.

Other funds will go as block grants, so the local community decides what’s most needed. Those block grants might be enhancing the community development block grants that are popular because of their flexibility, but they also might be health care block grants. Our employers right now are noting they really need more employees, so child care goes hand-in-hand with men and women getting back into the workforce.”

Nearly all of Oregon is expected to face an extended drought period this summer, how can the federal government provide relief, and what steps are you taking to combat increasingly common droughts?

“The drought is devastating, and it takes different forms in different communities. Over in the Klamath [River], we’ve just had the notice that basically no water will be available for on project irrigation, which is just a brutal situation. There won’t even be enough water to keep a healthy amount of water flowing down the river, so it’s going to be devastating for salmon.

This is becoming more and more common, we had a major drought in 2001, then 2010, then 2013, this is the worst yet. The funds I secured in that situation went to help farmers retire their water rights for one year, so they could receive some compensation by not pulling water out for irrigation — leaving more water available to others — and for groundwater pumping. In this situation, I don’t know either of those tools will work that well because people aren’t planning on planning, and I don’t think that enough water can be pumped to compensate, when there’s no water coming out of the reservoir system.

Water downstream will create different effects in other communities. I have a field team that’s in close communication with community leaders...so we’re going to hear what’s most affected and that will help guide what I fight for.”

How can you use your post on the appropriations (spending) committee to help the state?

“I’m the only member of Oregon’s delegation that serves on the appropriations committee in either chamber, the House or the Senate... This year, I’m serving as the chair of the interior subcommittee, the spending committee that deals with interior programs [and] works with the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service.

We have so much federal land in Oregon, so I wanted to fight to get as much funding as possible to manage our forests better.

To do more thinning, more prescribed burns and to do so, especially around our towns so they’ll be less likely for fire to burn our towns [like] what we saw in September.”

Sudden Oak Death?
“A big issue in Curry County going north to Coos County is this disease...I’ve been getting federal funds to do research on it, and this year I got $1.2 million in federal funds, and those are the type of efforts that are easier to achieve when you have a front-row seat on the spending committee.”

Individuals, businesses have choice with new mask rules, state says

ZACK DEMARS

The World

Oregon’s state health officer said May 14 individuals and businesses have choices when it comes to protecting against COVID-19.

“I think individuals have a choice which kind of protection they want to use,” said Dr. Dean Sidelinger, state epidemiologist, in a press conference. “Masks and physical distancing, or vaccination — and I hope more people choose vaccination, because it’s safe, it’s effective and it’s available across the state right now.”

The doctor’s comments came the day after the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention laid out new guidance for wearing face coverings, saying those who’ve been fully vaccinated against COVID-19 don’t need to wear masks or physically distance in many instances.

Oregon Thursday adopted that guidance, allowing the fully vaccinated to unmask (with exceptions, like public transit, health care facilities and homeless shelters, where masks are still required).

“We have the tools we’ve been using since last summer: keeping our distance, wearing our masks,” Sidelinger “Now we have some other amazing tools: We have three very safe and effective vaccines that people can choose to use.”

But the federal and state announcements last week have left a lot of questions still to be answered — particularly for businesses where COVID-19 restrictions have faced the most complexity throughout the pandemic.

Sidelinger said more clear guidance would be coming from the Oregon Health Authority, but that businesses also have the choice for how to keep their customers safe. They can’t choose to serve only vaccinated customers, but they can choose which set of measures to put in place, he said.

“Businesses should have a plan to either keep the current guidance in place — where they require physical distancing and masking for everyone — or implement a plan where they’re checking the vaccination status of those who come in and that those individuals could be allowed to be in that business without wearing their masks and with less physical distancing,” Sidelinger said.

The change doesn’t yet mean the state’s four-tier, capacity-limiting framework is going away.

Those rules are in place at least until 70% of the state is vaccinated, and businesses still have to limit their capacity based on those rules in their county. But businesses can now choose to allow fully vaccinated customers to unmask if they verify their vaccination status.

That adds another rule for businesses to keep track of.

“We know that this puts put them into a different position, if they chose to implement a system where those who are (vaccinated) can come into the business without a mask and without physical distancing, it will require them to ask about vaccination status and check on that before they come in, and that’ll put some in a difficult position,” Sidelinger said.

Sidelinger noted that voluntary disclosure of someone’s vaccination status isn’t a violation of privacy laws — but said the state is figuring out how that verification process should work.

“As you can probably imagine, this is a radical shift in the CDC framework,” Sidelinger said.

New rules and guidance from the state are in development and will be released soon, he said.

Sidelinger’s comments came as the state’s COVID-19 cases have begun to dip, and state models project future declines in cases and hospitalizations. Still, the doctor recommended getting vaccinated or taking other measures to keep those numbers down.

“Much like spring weather in Oregon where, right now, it’s sunny and warm but we know we’re not guaranteed sunny days all into summer — that’s how COVID is,” Sidelinger said. “Right now, we’re seeing decreasing cases and decreasing hospitalizations. But that decrease in cases depends on all of us taking action.”

Guest Opinion

It all began with pizza

By LAURA ROBERTS MCHENRY

In the mid-1960s, my dad served on the school board in Cortez, in rural southern Colorado. He recalled that at one meeting he said something a little too liberal because a fellow board member invited him to “step outside.”

Fast forward some 55 years and not much has changed in this town of 8,500 in Montezuma County. Cortez still has its Old West traditions of doing things as they’ve always been done for decades, though more than one quarter of residents are now Hispanic or Native American. It’s a gun rights stronghold, and to say residents are mostly conservative is putting it mildly.

But what surprised me this year was a painful public example of outright intolerance.

I don’t know Lance McDaniel, 64, well, but I’ve learned that he went to high school here, then left to grow a career and a family elsewhere in Arizona and California. When he moved back he felt a need to serve his community, so stepped up in 2018 to fill a vacancy on the school board. He says he soon realized he wasn’t fitting in, but things came to a head a few months ago.

It all began with pizza. McDaniel and others from a local church had been reading about how difficult it was for LGBTQ+ students to fit into middle school. So the group decided to show the kids that there were friendly people around by delivering free pizzas to three Rainbow Clubs established for LGBTQ+ students in the schools.

The group figured the kids needed community support, having read that several national surveys showed that “four out of five gay and lesbian students say they don’t know one supportive adult at school.”

As for the students, their reaction to the outside support for their get-togethers combined gratitude and relief: “It’s nice to have a place (to eat pizza) where we can hang out with no judgment,” said one student. “It’s nice to be able to talk with people my own age,” said another. McDaniel says it was clear that the kids liked the attention, “always thanking everyone involved” when the pizza showed up.

Somehow, though, as social media began telling the story, “pizza parties” of gender-fluid students were repeatedly mentioned in a negative way. It all came to a head when a virtual school board meeting was interrupted by people complaining loudly about these odd “pizza parties.” Worse, McDaniel and his family became the targets of threats and denunciations on social media.

Then last July, a petition to oust McDaniel from the school board began to circulate, with a recall election slated for February 16, 2021, if passed.

The petition charged that in

several of his posts on social media about social justice, McDaniel had “... proven to be a poor role model for our children.” The petition added, “We need school board members that understand leadership and the power of mentoring, and know not to voice their personal, political, or social opinions that could influence children.”

McDaniel told the local press that he stood by his social media posts. “My personal opinion is that (conservatives) have bullied us long enough, and that we don’t need to be quiet. If I see racism, I’ll point it out; if I see someone being oppressed, I’ll say something about it,” he said to local radio station KSJD.

McDaniel lost the recall by a two-to-one vote in an election that cost the school district $21,000. He could have been voted out for free, as his appointed seat was up in November.

Still, this punitive recall failed to silence McDaniel’s voice. On social media, he still sticks up for the underdog and likes to share a quote from Charles Dickens: “Never...be mean in anything; never be false; never be cruel. Avoid those three vices...and (we) can always be hopeful.” And McDaniel and his church friends continue to drop off pizzas for kids at their Rainbow Clubs.

But there’s a new problem: Stories are circulating that the school board wants to close down the Rainbow Clubs. To head that off, some community members presented a petition to the board on May 11, asking for support of the clubs and the students who enjoy getting together.

Let’s let them eat pizza in peace.

We always need to remember those who gave their all

By KELLY FITZPATRICK

For the second year in a row, Memorial Day observances in communities, organizations and even within family groups will look very different later this month because of the COVID pandemic.

The parades, large ceremonies and other occasions, which I and so many others in the Oregon veteran community have always found moving and meaningful, have not yet been able to safely return in many places.

Yet, the importance of this day — and the emotions and memories that it brings — have not changed.

For countless families across our communities, our state and our nation, Memorial Day is a stark and, often painful, reminder of those loved ones who went to serve their country and never came home.

Whether they volunteered during a time of war, stood guard over our peace or never expected to wear the uniform until their draft card arrived — their service and selfless sacrifice represent the best and highest ideals that America has to offer.

We continue to feel their loss today.

In recent months, and particularly as we have approached this year’s Memorial Day holiday, I have found myself reflecting on the themes of unity and strength in diversity.

It was just before the Korean War, in 1948, that President Harry S. Truman issued Executive Order 9981 — abolishing discrimination based on race, color, religion or national origin in the United States Armed Forces. When war broke out in 1950, our country entered the fray with a fully integrated and desegregated military.

I believe those who have served our nation in uniform know the meaning — and the value — of unity more than almost anyone else. We were trained to protect those on our right and those on our left — and to trust that they would do the same for us.

Every day in service, all that mattered was that someone had your six, and was there to offer a hand when you stumbled. Their color, nation of origin, religion or sexual orientation were not part of the equation.

After service, the diversity of our veteran community is a source of immense pride and strength. We are Black, White, Latinx, Asian American and Pacific Islander, men, women, transgender and non-binary, young and old, urban and rural, of every race, religion and creed — unified through our shared service and sacrifice.

The honored ranks of the fallen include Sgt. John Noble Holcomb, who was born in Baker, Oregon. John was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously for his extraordinary courage and sacrifice during the Vietnam War — where he singlehandedly forced an enemy retreat, despite being mortally wounded, saving many American lives.

They include Erin McLyman, from Eugene, Oregon, who proudly enlisted in the United States Air Force after recovering from a severe, years-long addiction to drugs and alcohol that began when she was in just her first year in high school. She later enlisted in the Oregon National Guard, and was eager to deploy to Iraq. She died March 13, 2010, in an enemy mortar attack.

They include the 100th Infantry Battalion — which became known unofficially as the “Purple Heart Battalion” — The unit was one of only two combat units during World War Two that was comprised of second-generation Japanese-Americans (known as “Nisei”) who had briefly had their rifles stripped away due to prejudice following the attack on Pearl Harbor.

They would go on to fight bravely in Europe, even as their families remained in internment camps back in the United States. The men of the 100th Infantry Battalion earned recognition as the most decorated American unit of its size and length of service. The 18,000 men who served earned nearly 9500 Purple Hearts, 21 Medals of Honor and an unprecedented seven Presidential Unit Citations.

And the honored ranks of the fallen include Army Sergeant 1st Class Alwyn Cashe, who was the first Black service member to receive the Medal of Honor for service in Iraq or Afghanistan for the heroism he displayed after his Bradley struck a roadside bomb.

The explosion ruptured the Bradley’s fuel cell, engulfing both the vehicle and its occupants in flames. Enemy fire soon rained down on their position. But none of that stopped Sergeant Cashe from acting quickly to save his soldiers.

Drenched in fuel, he pulled the driver and five other soldiers from the burning vehicle — saving their lives, while suffering second- and third-degree burns over 72% of his own body. Despite this, he insisted on being the last person on a medical evacuation helicopter.

Alwyn exhibited incredible courage during that attack. Despite the fact that both the vehicle and its occupants were engulfed in flames, and amid unrelenting enemy fire, Sergeant Cashe acted quickly to save his soldiers.

Putting the welfare of his soldiers ahead of his own and ignoring the terrible burns over 72 percent of his body, he insisted on being the last person on a medical evacuation helicopter.

Sergeant Cashe died 22 days later — on Nov. 8, 2005. He was only 35.

It is impossible to know exactly what was going through the minds of Sergeant Cashe, Sergeant Holcomb, Private McLyman, the members of the 100th Infantry Battalion, and so many other heroes as they made the ultimate sacrifice. But we who have served know they were motivated by the rare courage and devotion that is common to those who have borne the battle — to protect our nation, our loved ones back home and our fellow service-members.

The harsh reality of war and conflict is that not everyone will make it home. Let us honor the memory of heroes no longer with us — not just on Memorial Day, but every day. And let us strive to live up to the incredible example they have set for all of us.

May we never forget our fallen heroes. They were the best our country had to offer, and their memory inspires us to be better. Their courage moves us. The world is a better place because of them, because they lived and because they served.

May we never forget what they sacrificed, and what their loved ones have lost.

Director Fitzpatrick and the Oregon Department of Veterans’ Affairs will host a virtual Statewide Memorial Day Ceremony this year. All Oregonians are welcome to join for the live premiere at 10 a.m. May 31, or tune in at a later time.

Protect our environment

I currently live in Ashland, but I am a frequent visitor to the coast. I am on a waiting list for an apartment in Brookings and look forward to spending my “golden” years there.

As a child growing up in Oregon, conservation and appreciation of nature was taught at home and in school: a lesson that stayed with me all my life.

I have witnessed visitors kicking exposed mussels, trying to pry barnacles off rocks and walking on anemones. I would encourage hotels, motels, B&Bs to at least offer written material or talk to their guests about the sensitive environment we need to protect. We can’t assume that visitors understand about our environment and natural treasures.

The applicant proposes to amend the zoning and land use designation of approximately 212 acres of a property used as commercial timberland to a property that could support rural residential use in the future. The rezone is proposed as a "ten-year rollout" meaning the re- designation of land use from timber harvest to residential use would not take place until ten years after the Board of Supervisors approves the project. The Planning Commission is first required to review and make a recommendation to the Board of Supervisors. The project does not include a subdivision tocreate legal lots, but rather sets up the land use and zoning for such an action in the future. The land is not served by public water or sewer and would rely on on-site systems. The application includes many special studies to support the environmental review. The total amount of the unpaid balance of the obligations secured by the property to be sold and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of the initial publication of this Notice of Trustee's Sale is estimated to be $244,218.51 (Estimated). However, prepayment premiums, accrued interest and advances will increase this figure prior to sale. Beneficiary's bid at said sale may include all or part of said amount. In addition to cash, the Trustee will accept a cashier's check drawn on a state or national bank, a check drawn by a state or federal credit union or a check drawn by a state or federal savings and loan association, savings association or savings bank specified in Section 5102 of the California Financial Code and authorized to do business in California, or other such funds as may be acceptable to the Trustee. The property offered for sale excludes all funds held on account by the property receiver, if applicable. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. ## Second sudden oak death site found outside existing quarantine area near Port Orford

PORT ORFORD – A second site where tanoaks have been found infected with the sudden oak death pathogen was detected 21 miles northwest of the existing quarantine area for the tree disease.

On April 27, an OSU researcher driving back from Brookings noticed dying tanoaks along Highway 101 just outside Port Orford. She stopped and collected samples, which tested positive on May 10 at the OSU Forest Pathology Lab in Corvallis for Phytophthora ramorum, which causes sudden oak death. The pathogen can infect many plants but kills tanoaks.

The new site's discovery comes just as cutting and piling of tanoaks at a site on the north bank of the Rogue River was completed. That site was discovered earlier this spring in the Rogue River-Siskiyou National Forest. Five tanoaks were found there to be infected with the EU1 strain of P. ramorum. To prevent spores from spreading the disease, all tanoaks near where infected trees were found were cut, piled and will be burned later this year.

Both sites are in Curry County but beyond the current 515-square-mile SOD quarantine area. The first site is near the Myrtle Tree Trail and about six miles north of the nearest previously known sudden oak death infestation. It has been determined that no public recreation restrictions will be necessary while treating this area. The second site is 13 miles south of Coos County.

Tanoaks dying from sudden oak death along Highway 101 are inspected by a worker.

Following federal protocol, the samples from the second site will be sent from OSU to the Oregon Department of Agriculture's Plant Health Lab in Salem for confirmatory testing. If positive, the samples will be shipped to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service Lab in Maryland for final confirmation. New infestation sites must be confirmed by APHIS' Plant Protection Quarantine unit before regulatory action may take place. Lab tests are still being done at OSU to determine the pathogen strain at the second site. SOD crews from the Oregon Department of Forestry and the USDA Forest Service will continue to heavily monitor both areas for the presence of infested trees and plants. Both areas will also be monitored by aerial disease survey experts, with helicopter flights over northern Curry County planned. Oregon regulations require state and private property officially confirmed as infested with SOD undergo eradication treatments. Federal and state funds are available to cover the cost of treating both infected areas. The full extent of the second site is still being determined pending surveyors being granted access to nearby private land. ODA maintains the Phytophthora ramorum Quarantine which allows any property in the state, including a buffer zone of up to 3 miles surrounding where a SOD infestation has been confirmed, to be placed under quarantine (OAR 603-052-1230(2)(d)). Thus, a unique emergency quarantine order does not need to be issued. Oregon's SOD Program will consult with stakeholders regarding any potential expansion of quarantine boundaries.

Two Curry County men arrested for exploiting a child

On two different days in April, Curry County Sheriff's Office detectives with assistance from a task force including the Oregon State Police and Brookings Police Department conducted an operation to detect and intercept adults online who are seeking out children and attempting to engage them in sexualized chat and or meet them in person for sex.

The investigation yielded five adult males in the Southern Oregon area from 21 to 71 years of age that engaged in sexualized chat to include sending pornographic pictures and videos to a person they believed to be a child. Two of the men arranged to meet in person to engage in sexual intercourse and deviant sexual intercourse with a person they believed to be a child under the age of 16. Fortunately, when they arrived at a scheduled location, they were met with deputies and detectives from the task force.

Robert Chester Wittren

Those men were 71-year-old Robert Chester Wittren and 47-year-old Dominique Jason Mclean. Both reside in or have temporary residences in Curry County. Both men were arrested and lodged at the Curry County Jail for the crimes of online sexual corruption of a child 1st degree, online sexual corruption of a child 2nd degree and luring a minor. Probable cause exists and arrest warrants are forthcoming for the three other adult men. Upon their arrests, the sheriff's office will name them. The Curry County Sheriff's Office would like to remind and caution parents that their children's electronic devices, to include gaming systems give their child a doorway to the rest of the world. Unfortunately, there is no shortage of people looking to exploit them in one form or another. Please educate your children about the dangers that exist online and monitor their use of devices connected to the internet.

Sheriff warns of laced drugs

THE PILOT

The Coos County Sheriff's office and South Coast Interagency Narcotics Team are warning South Coast residents about the dangers of fentanyl-laced drugs. The two agencies recently handled an overdose case where illegal drugs were laced with fentanyl, according to a press release from the sheriff's office. Fentanyl is 50 to 100 times more powerful than morphine and presents a serious risk to anyone using the drug illegally.

Fentanyl has been tied to an increase in overdose rates since 2013, the sheriff's office said. Law enforcement authorities have seen a rise in illegal drugs being laced with fentanyl, unknown to the users of the drugs. Overdose deaths have been reported throughout the country due to the increased potency of the laced drugs. In May of 2021, Deputies seized the pictured pills in Curry County. Similar pills, known as "blue oxy," were mentioned in Coos County after responding to an overdose that required administration of naloxone (Narcan). The two involved individuals would likely have died had the naloxone not been administered, according to the sheriff's office. Anyone who encounters these pills or any drug that could be laced with fentanyl should call authorities and no touch the drugs with bare hands. Fentanyl can be absorbed through skin and presents a health hazard, according to the sheriff's office.

Brookings Flying Club offers scholarship

Brookings Flying Club Youth Aviation Committee Chairperson Rosie Hoxeng announced that the BFC Board of Directors awarded a $1,500 scholarship to Sierra Brannon-Young, a recent graduate of Del Norte High School. Brannon-Young is attending San Jose State University studying aviation professional flight. The club congratulates Brannon-Young and wishes her success in her pursuit of an aviation career. BFCs Youth Aviation Committee encourages students to explore a future in aerodynamics, and the club offers scholarships to local students to assist them in achieving those goals. The aviation field offers many career opportunities. For example, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that employment categories in support of air transportation are expected to grow by 25 percent through 2022. Boeing recently forecast 558,000 new pilot jobs worldwide by the year 2034. Along with increased pilot hiring, the company anticipates a need for 600,000 maintenance technicians. # Rickard celebrated as Curry Health Network Service Excellence Superstar of the Month

Curry Health Network honored Service Excellence Superstar of the Month, Kathryn Rickard, at a celebration Wednesday, May 12. Rickard has been at CHN since 2016 and is currently the medical assistant to family medicine provider, Dr. Stephanie Laudert at Curry Medical Practice in Gold Beach. She was nominated for the award by a patient who has been receiving care for serious, chronic medical conditions.

In her nomination letter, the patient praised the attentive and compassionate care shown to her by Rickard and shared how the difficult months she's experienced have been made better by the personalized attention she receives from Rickard at every visit for treatment and care. The patient credits Rickard for being a true partner, thoughtfully remembering details about her medical needs — and her life — and making a trying time a bit easier.

The heartfelt nomination reads:

"I have been receiving treatment in the office of Dr. Laudert for two years, since I arrived in Brookings, Oregon. Since the first time I arrived in this office I have been treated by Kathryn as I enter the office for care. Each time Kathryn has been friendly, gentle, respectful, and, most importantly, she genuinely cared about me and how I was and what my concerns were or what care I needed. Many times before I could say, she would suggest that perhaps I needed "A" or "B". She was so familiar with my case and my current condition that she usually already knew what I possibly needed before I could tell her. I have a very complicated case that includes Lupus, Arthritis and Fibromyalgia. I take a drug store of medications and she knows most of them without looking at the computer. She will ask me if I need particular medications refilled in case I forget to ask. She makes sure that I stay on top of the many check-ups that I need to have each year. She also recommends which doctors or facilities are better than others for particular care. She even helped me get through the menagerie of paperwork, insurance forms, and office appointments that were necessary to get me an electronic chair for my disability. This was no small feat on her part. I know she had to make many phone calls and fax many forms back and forth to make this happen. I am truly grateful. She only called me once to request information from me. The rest of the time, it was all her.

She works extraordinarily hard to help her patients feel cared for and she takes really good care of all of her patients. I just thought someone should know. You have a very valuable employee."

With respect, a very grateful patient!

Karen Falchetta

Rickard earned an associate of science degree in medical assisting from the Southwestern Oregon Community College. Before joining CHN, Rickard had vast experience working in both medical and dental office settings.

A special congratulations to Rickard, and all of the CHN Service Excellence Superstar nominees, for living the CHN mission and providing our communities with compassionate, quality health care.

Oregon State lab creates environmental sensing tools for landslides, vineyards

By SEAN NEALON
For the Pilot

A student-driven lab at Oregon State University is celebrating its fifth anniversary with the development of environmental sensing devices that aid a variety of groups, including vineyard managers, agencies that monitor landslides and scientists focused on fish conservation.

The Openly Published Environmental Sensing lab works with researchers and professors at Oregon State and other universities, as well as private companies, to build devices used locally and worldwide by the ecological science and engineering community.

The lab employs several staff members, as well as 30 undergraduate students from Oregon State's colleges of agricultural sciences, engineering and science. Students are paired up with researchers who reach out to the lab, and using tools in the lab — including soldering stations, 3D printers and laser cutters — the students build the requested devices.

"The lab has really exploded in popularity since we got started in 2016," said John Selker, principal investigator for the lab and an Oregon State distinguished professor of biological and ecological engineering. "We are filling a need for researchers and at the same time providing an unparalleled experience for students."

The lab is currently working on 14 projects, including:

SitkaNet, which aims to gather and study soil and weather data to better understand the conditions that cause landslides. Students have developed a customized sensor system that allows monitoring of multiple potential landslide initiation points. The system is less expensive, smaller and easier to install than current commercially available options. It measures soil moisture and temperature, atmospheric pressure and temperature, humidity, well pressure and rainfall and transmits data wirelessly in real time. It's currently operating outside Sitka, Alaska. This project is in partnership with the Sitka Sound Science Center and Annette Patton and Josh Roering of the University of Oregon.

Smart Rock, a piece of PVC pipe outfitted with a suite of sensors that monitor water depth, temperature, turbidity and salinity of small, remote or seasonal streams. Current hydrological modeling is missing data from these streams, which provide important habitat. Smart Rock is designed to be built by anyone and currently costs about $250. Colin Hale-Brown and Martin Escoto are the students involved.

The Dendrometer, which provides an improved method to monitor how much water grapevines are receiving. Additional agricultural demand for freshwater in the face of climate change requires better irrigation management solutions to maximize the use of limited water resources. Soil water deficits can significantly reduce plant growth and development, which dictates the quantity and quality of the crop.

Dendrometers, which continuously measure small fluctuations in plant stem diameter throughout the day, which directly correlates to water stress, are a tool to improve irrigation management, but they are expensive, bulky and not very reliable. The automated dendrometer tailored for a grapevine that was created at the OPeNS Lab alleviates failure points.

WCSPA welcomes USDA seafood purchases

On May 13, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced its plans to purchase domestic seafood products, including up to $17 million for three products specifically from the West Coast, for food assistance programs. The timing couldn't be better as fishermen and processors are still coping with COVID-19 pandemic disruptions to seafood markets and global supply chains. The USDA announcement also calls for buying other domestic commodities.

Of the $159.4 million in funding for purchasing domestic products, up to $4 million can be used to purchase Pacific rockfish filets; $4 million for Pacific pink shrimp and $9 million for Pacific hake (whiting). Other seafood items include pollock and salmon from Alaska and shrimp from the Gulf of Mexico and South Atlantic.

"COVID-19 upended our domestic and global markets," West Coast Seafood Processors Association Executive Director Lori Steele said. "The USDA purchases will help supplement and stabilize our existing markets, allowing us to keep American fishing and processing families working through difficult times. The USDA and public get healthy, nutritious seafood from sustainable stocks. It truly is a win-win."

Pink shrimp, especially, is considered a good option for USDA food assistance programs. The small, coldwater shrimp common to the West Coast are flavorful and available year-round as individually quick-frozen products. They can complement salads; be formed into patties, like a burger; used to enhance breakfast dishes; or featured on their own.

"With significant inventory in stock and more than 18 million pounds of potential shrimp purchases coming up this season, pink shrimp could reach a number of food service outlets through USDA purchases," Steele said.

Vilsack said the purchase is largest single seafood purchase in USDA history.

"The entire West Coast fishing and seafood industry benefits from USDA purchases and from building long-term relationships with the agency," Steele added. "These kinds of purchase programs offer our industry an 'overflow valve' for some of our seafood products as well as some economic stability when other markets are unstable or unavailable."

DeFazio announces IRS to start delivering new child benefits July 15

Rep. Peter DeFazio (OR-04) on Monday announced the Internal Revenue Service will start delivering new child benefits to eligible families July 15.

The tax credit payments are part of the American Rescue Plan, which DeFazio strongly supported. More than 138,100 children in Oregon's 4th district – 90.4% – will benefit from this tax credit.

"Thanks to the American Rescue Plan, these new child tax benefits will set Oregon's children up for success and put money in the pockets of hardworking parents," said Rep. DeFazio (OR-04). "I'm proud to have supported this critical legislation that will help millions of families across the country build better lives for their kids."

How Much are the Child Tax Credit Payments?

The American Rescue Plan expanded the Child Tax Credit to up to $3,600 per child for children ages 0 to 5 and $3,000 per child for children ages 6 to 17.

The American Rescue Plan also authorized advance monthly payments of the Child Tax Credit through December 2021. Beginning July 15 and running through December, qualifying families can get up to:

- $300 a month per child for children ages 0 to 5
- $250 a month per child for children ages 6 to 17

The monthly benefit will be deposited directly into most families' bank accounts on the 15th of every month, or the closest day if the 15th falls on a holiday or weekend. Families will receive their remaining expanded Child Tax Credit when they file their 2021 tax return.

Who Qualifies for the Child Tax Credit Advance Monthly Payments?

Families will qualify for a full credit if their income is below $75,000 for single filers, $112,000 for people filing as head of household, or $150,000 for people who are married and filing jointly.

To be eligible, children must:

- Have a Social Security number,
- Live with you for at least half the year,
- Be under the age of 18 as of December 31, 2021, and
- Be claimed on your tax return.

Children are eligible if they are your children, adopted children, step-children, half-siblings, foster children, grandchildren, nieces or nephews, or other certain relatives. The adult filing taxes must have a Social Security Number or an Individual Taxpayer Identification Number.

How Can Families Get Help Preparing and Filing Their Taxes for Free?

Free tax preparation services are generally available until the tax filing deadline. Families should file their taxes even if they do not have earnings to report or do not normally file, because the IRS needs information from tax returns in order to calculate and issue monthly advance payments.

- Eligible families can file taxes for free online through the IRS Free File program at <https://apps.irs.gov/app/freeFile/>.
- Families where the parent or caregiver is aged 50 or older can use this AARP tool to find free tax help near them at <https://secure.aarp.org/applications/VMISLocator/searchTaxAidLocations.action>
