ROGUE RIVER

category'

"Without a navigable channel, we are going to lose our fishing, we are going to lose our recreation, we are going to lose our tourism, and the economic fallout from that will be huge," declared Curry County Commissioner Chris Paasch. Paasch's warning came during a discussion of issues affecting the Rogue River at the Aug. 7 Curry County Board of Commissioners meeting in Gold Beach.

"The (Rogue) has received an inordinate amount of rock coming down it the last several years," Paasch said. "We've started to look into how we can make changes to that and how we can correct it."

Paasch said he contacted U.S. Rep. Peter DeFazio's office several times to prompt the congressman to speak with the Department of Transportation, instead of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, to free up the permitting process for dredging.

"I'm afraid for the public," Paasch said during a subsequent phone interview. "A boat could be unaware of the shoal in the (Port of Gold Beach) entrance and hit it at 20 to 30 knots, and people could suffer serious injuries."

"The losses sustained ... because of the loss of recreation and fishing are devastating to the lifeblood of this county. The revenues lost cannot be regained. This river needs some attention and we need to restore it to its former greatness."

The Corps of Engineers is in charge of keeping the Rogue River open from the mouth to the port's business entrance, said Paasch. "The Corps of Engineers should keep the traditional channel clear up to Elephant Rock," he said.

"That would traditionally ensure that the river flows freely

Imagine you're paddling your kayak off-shore along the southern Oregon coast. Suddenly, you spot a giant, seldom-seen sea creature in the water ahead.

That's exactly what happened to South Coast Tours owner and guide David Lacey and his group last week during a sea kayaking tour near the Thomas Creek Bridge.

"Conditions were stellar this day and we were enjoying some of the best conditions I've seen in two years," Lacey said. "We had finished our lunch break on an actual secret beach north of the famed 'Secret Beach.'"

After paddling alongside a school or two of harbor porpoise and through 10 natural rock arches, the group saw a fin in the distance. "I was very apprehensive as we approached this finned creature, as I had this childhood horror movie rhythm in the back of my head," Lacey said.

"Turns out this sea beast was not the white shark that I first envisioned, but none other than a large ocean sunfish commonly known as a Mola mola."

Improvements are wrapping up along a wildly used stretch of U.S. Highway 101 that leads from Oregon into California.

The spotlight controlling one-lane traffic at Thomas Creek Bridge over Highway 101 is set to shut down any day now, according to Oregon Department of Transportation (ODOT) Public Information Specialist Dan Latham.

Commuters will soon enjoy a 5-minute shorter drive by using both lanes.

The spotlight was installed to regulate traffic coming from both directions. The bridge was open with just a single lane during the multi-year, multi-million-dollar construction project.

Motorists who travel the route frequently may have noticed that workers began packing up the scaffolding and other equipment and loading it up onto trucks a few days ago.

Located 8 miles north of Brookings, the Thomas Creek Bridge, built in 1961, is Oregon's highest, at 345 feet.

Bridges along the coastal highway are particularly vulnerable to wear and tear from traffic, marine-air corrosion, and occasional earthquakes, according to ODOT.

The paint on the bridge's steel truss sections had deteriorated. The project, which began in August 2017, removed all existing paint, repaired areas where corrosion had damaged the steel, replaced damaged rivets, and repainted the 58-year-old bridge's trusses and towers.

All of work performed on the bridge was below the deck, but containment structures could be seen from the bridge's deck. Its surfaces had been rehabilitated in 2016.

"They completed work on the north tower a few weeks ago," Latham said. "They are doing some touch-up work now, and removing the scaffolding and containment."

"Everything appears to be on schedule for completion this month."

The painting work was contracted through S&K Painting, Inc.

The Thomas Creek Bridge work cost approximately $10 million, of an estimated $11.7 million slated for work on both that bridge and Reinhart Bridge south of Port Orford.

Route 197 closure at midpoint

David Hayes
Staff writer

The closure of California State Route 197 north of Crescent City for work on roadway culverts has reached its midpoint. Motorists will need to continue to use State Route 199, a short distance to the south, through Aug. 15, said state transportation officials. Highways 197 and 199 are the primary routes between Grants Pass and U.S. Highway

101, ultimately leading to Crescent City and Brookings. Myles Cochran, the California Transportation public information officer for Humboldt and Del Norte counties, said Route 197 remains completely closed about 3 miles from the Highway 101 junction for the repairs to drainage systems. He said the project was the more cost-effective measure of two choices. "The other option we looked at, of allowing one-way traffic control on Route 197, would have cost $2.1 million and taken 12 weeks," he said. "A full closure of Route 197 only had a duration of three weeks and a cost of about $613,000." Cochran said local residents have been able to access their driveways from each end-point of Route 197. "We like to do culvert work during the summer months," he said. "A, it's quicker and more efficient; and B, it prepares the ditches for winter storms."

Fishing options abound on ocean

REEL DEAL

BY MICHAEL ZOGG

It has been a good week for sportfishermen on both sides of the California-Oregon border as the tuna have moved in about as close to shore as they ever come, lots of California halibut have been biting on the beaches, and bottomfish has remained consistent as usual. Surf perch are also plentiful in Northern California and Southern Oregon for anglers who prefer to keep their feet on land.

On the ocean
The tuna have moved in close out of both Crescent City and Brookings. The fish started being hauled in between 15 and 20 miles from shore early in the week, after being caught between 30 and 40 miles from shore late last week. There have also been lots of California halibut caught throughout the week, both on the beaches of Southern Oregon, and on South Beach in Crescent City. Anglers fishing from the beaches are still finding lots of surf perch as well throughout the Wild Rivers Coast. Some of the most consistent fishing in the area is always bottomfishing, and rockfish and lingcod continue to provide relatively easy limits for anglers who are targeting them. Crescent City is still seeing its fair share of Pacific halibut throughout the week as well. The only fish on the ocean that don't seem to be biting much at the moment are salmon. The salmon bite has been slow all season out of Crescent City. There have been some strong fishing weeks for ocean salmon out of Brookings this summer, but the catch as slowed up there as well this week with warmer water close to shore.

River fishing
With salmon fishing still slow on the ocean, an anglers best bet to nab a salmon right now is the Klamath River. Although fishing on the Upper Klamath River is still slow, the Lower Klamath River saw a bit of a surge this week. If that continues, the start of the fall salmon season should get off to a good start on Thursday. This year the spring salmon run has been subject to unprecedented regulation due to concerns about the stock. After the season opened with a full closure, anglers have been allowed to retain a daily bag limit of one salmon per day since. When the fall run officially kicks off the daily bag limit will expand to two adult salmon, and two jacks (juvenile salmon) per day and will count towards the river's quota for the season. The only other place to fish for salmon this time of year is in the Rogue Bay, but that has reportedly slowed significantly over the last week. California halibut are occasionally caught in Oregon, but this summer big numbers are showing up near Brookings at the California-Oregon border. Photo courtesy of Andy Martin, Wild River Fishing

Summer concert features slide guitarist

Brookings' free "Summer Concerts in the Park" series continues Sunday with slide guitarist Dennis Johnson and his band, The Mississippi Ramblers, performing roots and Americana music, blues and New Orleans grooves at 1 p.m. at Azalea Park. Leading the San Francisco-based trio, Johnson is known as one of the elite slide guitar players performing, with a focus on preserving and innovating roots music. Watch a video of Johnson and his band at <https://youtu.be/5z0P5uw02sY>. The band's website is www.dennisjohnsonslide.com. The Azalea Park concert, presented by main sponsor Rogue Credit Union, is one of eight scheduled through September. Music fans are encouraged to bring blankets, lawn chairs and picnic lunches. The concerts often attract 500 to 1,200 people to the park's natural amphitheater. A snack shack operated by the Brookings-Harbor Rotary Club will be serving burgers, hot dogs, chips and beverages. This series is funded primarily by crowd donations, grants and local business sponsors, including the Curry Coastal Pilot, Good Samaritan Society-

New owners can mean changes ... and improvements

Dear Editor:
As a subscriber to both the Curry Coastal Pilot and The Del Norte Triplicate, I have watched recent issues with interest. Although readers were jolted by changes following the sudden ownership transition, I think the papers are improving with each edition over the past few weeks.

Several years ago, I wrote a history column for The Pilot, which required me to go through the archives. It was apparent to me that whenever there was an ownership change, in almost all cases there were big differences in the appearance of the newspaper and trouble with the equipment.

Eventually, the paper started looking better, as the new owners figured things out. I suspect the experience at The Triplicate was the same over the years.

A trend I noticed reading through old copies of The Pilot was that owners were typically tired and ready to turn the paper over to someone new. Operating a community newspaper is exhausting work. Fortunately, brave new owners appeared each time to take the helm.

Most recently, of course, family-owned Western Communications had to let go of our local papers due to a second bankruptcy. And, fortunately, brave new owners arrived to take on the important task.

Many communities have been left without newspapers, as print media have declined. I am grateful for the commitment Carol and Steve Hungerford made in taking on these struggling newspapers.

As with past transitions, I am sure they and their two staffs will work through the problems, and hope that the community will step up as well, with subscriptions, advertising and patience.

Democrats are on a spiral heading down

Dear Editor:
Never in my lifetime did I expect the Democratic Party to annihilate itself in such a short amount of time.
A little over 4,000 votes went to Hillary Clinton in Curry County. And Oregon, being as strong as it is with Democrats, I'm sure those among us are staying quiet.

The entire state will move slower than the southern counties, but if the Democrats stay on the current path, it will demolish the party's name. Not one Democrat running for president has a chance to beat President Trump.

The only thing Democrats are doing at this time is giving Trump more to make them look stupid and silly. How on earth can a political party guarantee free health care when every city run by its party is piled with garbage, people sleeping and pooping everywhere, rats and mice taking over, and the four new representatives (the Squad) asking for a New Green Deal?

There is only one scary thing that must be contained: our news media. After CNN closes its doors, maybe the others will report the truth.

My first time to vote, at 22 years old, was for JFK. I was proud of him and his brother, Bobby. After their assassinations, Ted turned left and the press stood behind him. The press would not say anything against the man who had lived through his brothers getting assassinated.

Ted picked up on what was happening, so he "Borked" a man running for a top justice position, and didn't report the death of a 21-year-old girl after he drove off a bridge, until he sobered up the next day.

Since that time, the press has flowed left for Democratic rule.

If this election goes one-sided toward liberals, it very well may be the start of the end for the USA.

VA changes are bad news for local veterans

Dear Editor:
This, from Jefferson Public Radio regarding the Oregon Department of Veterans Affairs, dated Aug. 6, 2019: "The Veterans Administration Medical Center in Roseburg has been warning veterans for months that a shutdown of their emergency department could be imminent. Now, that warning has become a reality.

"Instead of a full emergency department, the Roseburg VA has decided to operate a Monday through Friday urgent care clinic in its place. VA officials cited the difficulty in hiring specialized staff, such as lab technicians, who are needed to support an emergency care facility."

Bad news for local veterans. I may be wrong here, but I think the only full-service VA hospital in the entire state of Oregon is in Portland, five hours away.

The VA clinic here in Brookings has but one physician. Dr. Matty left a few months ago for Coeur d'Alene and we had no physician for a month. I tried to get an appointment and the wait is two months, backed up because they could not find a physician.

The VA is going to have to begin paying competitive salaries, or this is our future. Medicare is going to have to begin paying competitive rates to doctors, or even more will stop seeing seniors, or retire, or go out of business. This is happening now.

Do you think for one moment that "Medicare-For-All" will pay doctors a fair rate, when they can make more money flipping burgers at a fast-food joint? The government-run Veterans Administration can't do it.

Medicare pays way less to doctors than do insurance companies. Currently, doctors cannot survive on Medicare payments only.

Medicare for seniors is one thing. Medicare for all is quite another. Look at it from the doctors' standpoint.

We better think this through before November 2020.

America's center will not be able to hold its place

Dear Editor:
Obviously, America has become extremely polarized politically. I worry about the future of our democracy, given the current state of affairs.

Could somebody please explain to me how we're supposed to resolve our differences, when we're in a verbal straightjacket when it comes to talking about politics in pubs and taverns?

Taverns are where people congregate on a regular basis. I don't believe people are more apt to become violent if they discuss or debate political matters. Violent people act out for thousands of reasons.

Our soldiers are fighting around the globe, supposedly to spread and defend freedom and democracy, but we don't defend them here.

So, we're not allowed to discuss the slaughter in El Paso, for example, because it involves politics. Our nation's social fabric is being torn apart and we're supposed to sit silently by?

Curry officials need to do right regarding SWOCC

Dear Editor:
On Aug. 7, the Curry County Board of Commissioners voted 3-0 in favor of further inquiry regarding the Southwestern Oregon Community College Tax District's financial circumstances, as pertains to the Curry campus.

The main reason behind this vote is that Curry County citizens pay $2.13 million in taxes to the college district. The expenses for Curry's programs have been cut back to only $850,000 this year.

That is, approximately $1.3 million of Curry County's taxpayers' tax revenue was taken from Curry County for use at the Coos County campus, or for expenses otherwise not specified by the college tax district.

Curry taxpayers' portion is 38.8% of the total tax base for the college district.

The previous year, the amount was $1 million taken from Curry tax revenues to be used other than in Curry County.

Similar numbers go back years. We get taxed, and Coos Campus grows. There isn't even a budget for marketing the Curry campus.

But hold on, that is not the only money SWOCC takes from Curry County citizens and Curry campus's programs. The SWOCC Foundation also solicits donations from Curry County.

We need to know how much of those donations are designated for use in Curry County (and if those donors' wishes and designations were honored). Or if those donations were undesignated or unrestricted and taken into the college district and not for the benefit of Curry County.

Additionally, other local special districts are filling in the gaps in services because the college administration cut those services, such as G.E.D. testing.

That means the college district "partners" with the special districts, then passes off the special districts' work and programs as if they were in the SWOCC budget still.

The problem is, special districts in Curry County are now picking up the tab using their own resources, not the college's resources, to do the work the college once did. Is that "double dipping" into Curry County taxpayers' pockets?

Please visit Brookings Oregon Nextdoor's Facebook page for 10 newsfeed posts (including pictures of the Coos campus, for comparison). If there was any interest in fiscal parity between the two campuses, Curry would have at least one-third of what the Coos campus has in terms of facilities, programs and services.

Curry County taxpayers need to know and to speak up!

Exactly which regs do slow new housing?

Dear Editor:
This is in reference to the article appearing in last week's Pilot concerning the high cost of housing in California.

We were informed in the article that these high costs are apparently due to excessive regulatory restrictions placed on housing in the state. How great! Almost everyone loves to hate California, including many of the almost 40 million who live there.

Excessive regulatory requirements is a favorite of the haters. I was gleeful. Here was an article that would explain what your headline very clearly indicated.

In reading the article, we learned that solar panels are apparently required by the state. Okay. Those may be costly. But, that was it. The article failed to clearly identify any other regulatory excess. It couldn't only be solar panels.

Was it because adequate sewage disposal capability was required? How about sidewalks? Adequate insulation? Appropriate roofing materials? Energy-efficient heating and cooling? Earthquake-resistant construction? Well?

It's hard to get our good California hate on for solar panels only.

While we may decry high costs, the results of low construction standards are often borne by those who reside in or own properties in the future, and who must suffer the consequences of planning based solely on initial cost (failed septic or water systems, streets too narrow for parking on both sides, etc.).

Perhaps the California approach is to consider lifetime cost for property owners and residents (an economic analysis method used for many public and private large-scale projects). We don't know that, because the article was sorely lacking in the specifics to support the article headline.

Many of us are all too eager to accept hearsay about some supposed truth, and your article kind of pandered to that.

I would have appreciated having a better understanding of the specifics of why the California requirements result in higher construction costs, and perhaps why industry professionals might believe those requirements to be inappropriate.

Safety City says thank you for successful year

Dear Editor:
Safety City has just completed its 22nd year, with a total of 56 graduates, during the three, one-week sessions. Safety City has now graduated 1,156 5-year-old children in those 22 years.

A big thank-you to all of the parents who made sure their children attended the free safety education program.

We also send a big thank-you to all our sponsors for helping to keep Safety City a free program for all children.

I also want to thank all the volunteer staff (which includes adults and students still in school). If it were not for the staff – there would be no Safety City.

much as 2,200 pounds. They're native to tropical and temperate waters worldwide.

"This one was about 7 or 8 feet across," Lacey said, "and close to 2,000 pounds. It was a giant beast. A gentle beast, too."

In 25 years of ocean life off Curry County, Lacey said, he had yet to see a Mola mola in the nearshore.

"The Mola mola swam all around our kayaks, while it absorbed the warmth of the sun, and did not seem to be worried about our presence," he said.

The kayakers were on South Coast Tours's Arches Territory Tour, a 15-mile sea kayak paddle that begins near Pistol River and ends at Whales-head State Park.

This particular tour is for experienced paddlers only, unless they pair up with a guide, said Lacey. Even then, they must be physically fit.

"Fifteen miles is a long time to be handling a paddle and the conditions can get rough around Crook Point National Wildlife Refuge," Lacey said.

"Blisters are not entirely uncommon. And sea sickness can ruin an inexperienced paddler's day, and jeopardize the safety and fun of the entire group."

As for Arches Territory, Lacey said it's not an easy place to paddle. "There are not a lot of safe landings, and the hydraulics inside these rock arches are crazy.

"Inside the arches and sea caves, the swell can more than triple as it gets compressed between the rock walls, leading to very dangerous situations."

SPACING OUT AT ...

BAND CAMP

David Hayes
Pilot Staff Writer

Imagine an alien invasion last night in Crescent City. A group of youthful musicians here did just that, playing an appropriate soundtrack to accompany such a sci-fi spectacular.

The performance featured this year's participants in Amy Ross's North Coast Summer Band Camp at Crescent Elk Middle School.

The musicians were fifth- through eighth-grade band members from Crescent City and Brookings schools, sprinkled with more-experienced high school musicians filling in.

Now in her 25th year running the camp, and the first year since she retired as music teacher at Crescent Elk, Ross said this year's theme was "Solar System and Space."

The students practiced Aug. 5-9 to perform recognizable sci-fi staples such as John Williams' "Theme from Star Wars" and the lesser-known but equally challenging "Aliens Landing in the Backyard."

Ross said the camp is a good way for the developing musicians to keep their skills honed over the summer break.

"On Monday, it always sounds pretty ragged," said Ross. "With only one or two years of experience, this music can be a lot harder (for the students) than anything they've done before. There's a lot of notes to learn and new rhythms to read.

"But it's amazing the progress they make over five days."

In past years, the camp has enrolled as many as 70 band members. (Sorry, no strings in the band, Ross said.) But this year, there was a smaller turnout, 25 campers. So, the 10 high school helpers and seven staff took on greater importance as mentors and fill-ins.

Joshua Peterson, 19, a recent Brookings High School graduate, was one of those who volunteered to be a helper as he awaits enrolling at Southwestern Oregon Community College's Curry campus.

"I love this camp," said Peterson. "It gets everyone together to prepare them for the next year."

Peterson has been playing bass guitar for five years. After three years of participating in the camp, this was his first as a high-school helper.

"As the experienced musician, you have to help more than those in your own section," he said. "You get questions like how to play a rhythm, was this the right note.

"Ms. Ross does a great job with the kids, making sure they get the help they need."

Some students attend the camp for reasons easy to understand, such as Patince Diehl, a Crescent Elk Middle School student now in her second year on baritone sax (or barry sax, for short).

"Why'd I join band camp? Why not? I love band. It's really fun, spending time with people and playing music."

For others, summer band camp offers an opportunity to hone up on an instrument they're still just learning, like Del Norte freshman James Appel, who has been playing tenor saxophone for just half a year.

"I switched over from percussion, after starting with the clarinet," said Appel. "So, I joined band camp to warm up for high school. I changed to sax because I like the feeling of moving your fingers and changing notes. It's really fun, being part of a band."

Appel isn't the only one who's switched instruments before settling on one instrument of choice. Charley Tygart initially followed her father, as a trombonist, in the third grade. But school district music programs don't begin until the fifth grade, when she chose to switch to percussion.

Now in the seventh grade, she felt drawn back to the trombone at Crescent Elk Middle School.

And, Tygart admits, she came into camp a little rusty. "It'd been all summer since I'd played music or heard music," she said.

"Coming in here the first day, I was like, 'Oh, my gosh, I don't understand.' It's so much more difficult. But I didn't panic."

Helping the young musicians from feeling overwhelmed was Kristen Volta, Ross's replacement as Crescent Elk's music teacher. The 23-year-old recent graduate of Northern Arizona University admitted she probably looks about the same age as some of the older students.

"Band is so enjoyable, so important to education and kids' academic life," she said. "This one-week band camp can be tough for the sixth- and seventh-graders, but it's a helpful jumpstart for those who have been too busy over the summer. It gets them thinking again about playing music."

One of the exercises Volta uses to help indecisive, often younger, students choose the proper instrument is "instrument petting zoo." She lays out the instruments for the students to handle and play a bit ... ensuring to sanitize the mouthpieces before passing them along.

"The instruments require a different embouchure to play," she said, scrunching up her lips to demonstrate the different pucker it takes to play a trumpet versus a clarinet. "We find that kids adapt better to one over the other, and we help steer them in the right direction."

When Volta took the director's baton during "Planets," a piece she chose for the band camp, Ross sat in with the students on flute. She'll continue to help Volta with the summer program however she's needed.

Said Volta: "Ross is big, big shoes to fill. The kids adore her. She has helped so many of them through the years.

WILLIAMS

Funny thing about our kids. After we pass a certain point in our lives, they decide they need to start taking care of us. Sometimes, that translates to them moving us great distances.

I hate seeing friends do that, but when all your close friends have either moved to that “celestial” address or away, it’s good to have those adult kids to care about you.

I remember, as a kid, how terribly old my grandmother seemed at age 50. Now, I look at my youngest child at age 50, and she doesn’t seem old at all.

I don’t really feel so old, until I look in the mirror ... to behold Nain (pronounced “nine”) – the welsh word for grandma), who raised my sister Mary and me.

But whatever directions things go, the one unchanging factor, the stabilizing one through all those changes, is our faith. Faith is a great sustainer in private – but when practiced with others, it can be so much more.

The group effort for joint activities begun by New Life Community and the Nazarene churches will have another event, on Aug. 17 at 2 p.m. at New Life, and will now be joined by a third church, Pelican Bay Evangelical Free.

Yes, the various denominations can have slight differences. But the most important basics are the same. And activities like these enable the various churches to get to know and understand each other better.

At a time when faith seems to be something many would prefer to sweep out the back door, our churches need to be able to stick together and lean on each other when needed. If you belong to one of these three churches, why not make it a point to check this out?

Meanwhile, the Smith River United Methodist Church will be presenting its annual sale Aug. 23 and 24, 9 a.m.-3 p.m. If you have something you would like to donate, call Marilyn at 707-954-1923.

On the other hand, you never know what you are going to find at one of these sales. Something you have been trying to find might just be the item someone else bought, and wondering later why they did, then tucked it away out of sight – later deciding to contribute. It might just be the “treasure that you seek.”

August 25 will be a very special day at the Nazarene church. “Kid’s Day” will be focused on those children in attendance. The music will be kids’ Christian songs, and the sermon based on the story of David and Goliath. Following the service, all will head to Florence Keller Park for a BBQ.

This brings to mind something from my childhood. Like today, we had celebrations for Mother’s Day and Father’s Day. But we also had Children’s Day – and as I have traversed time and distance, I have never seen it since those days in the ‘50s.

To contact Martha Williams, call or text 707-460-3000, or email watchnwait@charter.net. If you get a bounce message, please let me know. I have been battling this issue and every time I think I have it resolved, it pops up again.

DEAR ABBY

MOM HAS FALLEN OUT OF LOVE WITH GOOD MAN AND FATHER

DEAR ABBY: I'm a mother of two girls, ages 3 and 5. Their father and I are together, but I'm not in love with him anymore. I have felt this way for two years now.

I'm not excited to see him come home. When I take our children out, I hope he doesn't want to come. When he touches me affectionately, I want to pull away. I have talked to him about it, but he doesn't feel the same way. He wants to do everything he can to fix it. I'd love that too, but I no longer feel any connection to him.

He's not a bad guy. He gives me plenty of attention and is good with the kids. I feel like an idiot. What kind of person even thinks about breaking her family up when they've got someone so great? How much time should I give this before I call it quits? How much couples counseling should we pay for before we can say we tried, but it didn't work? Should I stay for the kids even though I'm not happy with him? -- JUMBLED IN OHIO

DEAR JUMBLED: I would love to know what happened two years ago that caused you to begin withdrawing from your partner. You ask what kind of person thinks the way you do? The answer may be a woman who is bored, confused, disillusioned or has stopped putting in the effort that's required to maintain a satisfactory relationship. Or, you may not have been in love with him in the first place.

If you're sincere about it, try counseling, first to determine where your relationship went off track, and second to find a way to save it. Your daughters are little. They don't need their lives disrupted. Be sure the person you and your spouse choose is licensed. Give it a year. By then both of you will know whether it was worth the money.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

STRANGE BUT TRUE

* It was English novelist and essayist Virginia Woolf, one of the foremost modernist literary figures of the 20th century, who made the following sage observation: "For most of history, Anonymous was a woman."

* Would you rather give up TV or your phone? In a Pew Research poll conducted last year in the United States, only 31 percent of those surveyed said it would be "very hard" to give up TV, while 52 percent said the same thing about their cellphone.

* In the language known as Ewe, spoken by some natives of West Africa, the concepts of "yesterday" and "tomorrow" are expressed by the same word. If you were to translate that word literally into English, you'd come up with "not now."

* Most people are aware of the fact that scorpions have eight legs -- they are, after all, arachnids -- but you probably didn't realize that they also have eight eyes.

* According to the Crayola Company, you can eat 3,500 of their crayons a day and still not reach the level of toxicity found in an ordinary glass of drinking water. They don't mention how -- or why -- anyone would consume that many crayons in a lifetime, let alone a single day.

* Those who study such things say that Niagara Falls will only last another 2,400 years.

* Historians say that Mary, Queen of Scots was informed of the murder of her husband, Lord Darnley, in 1567 while she was playing golf. She must have been quite a dedicated sportswoman (or an indifferent wife) because they also say that she completed the round.

Thought for the Day: "I never lecture, not because I am shy or a bad speaker, but simply because I detest the sort of people who go to lectures and don't want to meet them." -- H.L. Mencken

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Cholesterol Plummets After Giving Up Bread

DEAR DR. ROACH: What is your opinion of the keto diet? I have been doing it for a few weeks now and lost a few pounds, but it goes against everything I usually eat -- high quantities of red meat, lots of full-fat foods and dairy. Since I am losing some weight and actually feel better and am sleeping better, I like the short-term results, but I cannot see this as a long-term way of life. I am concerned about all that fat going into my body and clogging my arteries. I exercise every day with Zumba, jogging, etc. -- J.P.

ANSWER: The ketosis diet favors very large amounts of fat -- 60% to 80% of calories, with 15% to 20% of calories from protein and 5% or less from carbohydrates. The theory is to cause ketosis, a physiological condition of ketones in the blood as a result of high fat intake. It has been used since the 1920s as a treatment for seizures, but now is used for weight loss. Like every diet, it has both good and bad aspects. On the good side, it is effective at short-term weight loss. However, much of the apparent early weight loss is due to water weight, which is a universal finding on a high-fat diet. Weight gain is likely when stopping the diet. It is highly restrictive. Further, many of the foods that you can't eat on this diet are those that have been shown to be associated with improved health, especially vegetables and most fruits. Most people will have a substantial increase in cholesterol levels (by as much as 50%). The red meat and saturated fat probably present an independent risk of heart disease and cancer (even apart from its effect on cholesterol), although this remains somewhat controversial. I do not recommend the keto diet for long-term use, at all. It may have some benefit in helping with short-term weight loss, but I think there are much healthier alternatives for most people.

DEAR DR. ROACH: Your

column about the 58-year-old woman who felt like she had oil in her eye reminded me of having a very similar situation. I described it to my optometrist, and he also diagnosed ocular migraine. I wanted another opinion, because the only symptom I had was the oil, no headache or visual disturbances. The ophthalmologist diagnosed blepharitis, or clogged oil glands at the base of my eyelashes. She recommended placing a warm pack of rice in a sock over my eye and then washing the eye area with baby shampoo on a washcloth. I did this for a week or two, and on my visit with her to recheck the eyes, the problem was gone. -- J.P.
ANSWER: Thank you for writing. Blepharitis is caused by changes in the meibomian glands, oil glands that are present in both eyelids, often associated with changes in bacteria. I usually see people with this condition noticing red eyes and a gritty sensation. However, you are quite right that it includes blurry vision, and the eye-care professional sometimes can see an oily or foamy film over the eye. The treatment the ophthalmologist recommended works for most people. Gentle lid massage may help get additional oily material out of the glands. However, antibiotics or other treatments are sometimes necessary.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu.
