

Rifle barrel plant to be rebuilt

Jeremy C. Ruark
Plant Editor

The Pac-Nor Barreling Plant in Brookings, destroyed by fire Oct. 23, will rise from the ashes.

Owner Chris Dichter is moving ahead to rebuild the plant, at 99299 Overlook Rd., following the blaze. The plant manufactures precision rifle barrels.

At the time of the fire,

Dichter estimated the loss at between $4 million and $6 million. As he watched the intense fire consumer the building, Dichter told The Pilot, "Thirty-five years of my life went up in this fire."

As to whether he would rebuild or not, Dichter said, "I am 66 years old and I don't know if I have the time left. It took my lifetime to find all the machinery in this plant."

But now, following discussions with his insurance company and his family, Dichter said he is moving forward with rebuilding the plant, with his son, Casey, taking the lead. "If it wasn't for my son, I wouldn't do it," he said. "I am putting him in charge."

THEY'RE DOG-NAPPED!
(A TRUCK WAS TAKEN, TOO)

Gary Maschmeyer of Brookings decided to go birding on the loop trail around Lola Lake in the Pistol River area at 8:50 a.m. Nov. 8. "It was foggy and cold, and my two chihuahuas, Billy and Bella, didn't want to go with me," Maschmeyer said. "So, I left them in my truck."

When he returned at 10:30 a.m., his tan 1998 Mazda truck - and the dogs - were gone. "I called 911 from my cell phone and reported that my truck had been stolen, with the two dogs."

Three deputy sheriffs and two state troopers responded to the call. One of the troopers gave Maschmeyer a ride home. "He told me that all law enforcement agencies in Coos, Curry and Del Norte counties had been notified and that if they found my truck or the dogs, they would call me."

Meanwhile, Maschmeyer's daughter, Cassie, who lives out of state, posted pictures of the two dogs and her dad's pickup on social media. "My dad's 1998 Mazda was stolen at Pistol River along Hwy. 101 today at 9:30 to 10:30 a.m.," she said. "Along with his 2 dogs. We really only care about the dogs."

"If they pushed the dogs out, this bed and two banana boxes were in the truck that they lay on. Maybe someone will see the boxes on the side of the road to give a lead where the dogs are."

Sea urchin invasion triggering environmental, economic havoc

State officials and fisheries managers are monitoring an explosion of purple sea urchins along the Oregon and California coasts.

"We haven't seen this change in populations or levels of purple sea urchins before," said Scott Groth, an Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) project manager. "With surveys extending back to the 1980s, we've never seen many purple sea urchins at deep sites. Now, they dominate those areas."

According to reports cited by the ODFW, the purple sea urchins have devoured much of the giant bull kelp forests in northern California and are now moving north along Oregon's sea floor, threatening the local marine ecosystems.

Groth said the purple sea urchins are in competition with other species for the grazing of kelp beds. "Most concerning would be their competition for food and space with abalones," he said.

"These urchins have become more numerous (because of) good environmental conditions for recruitment events, such as temperature and currents, and the lack of their primary predator, the sunflower star, which went from very common to effectively absent following the 2014 sea star wasting event."

It's unclear, according to reports, whether climate changes have triggered the purple sea urchins explosion.

Dr. Cynthia Catton, a scientist for the California Department of Fish and Wildlife, said the impact of the purple sea urchin explosion has significantly impacted the California recreational red abalone fishery, which was closed last year. That fishery contributed an estimated $44 million annually to the California coastal economy.

In Oregon, the ODFW has suspended abalone driver permits for three years.

Catton said due to the decline of the kelp forests, the red urchin fishery also has been hit hard, and she expressed concern about other species that will be affected by the decline in bull kelp, such as rockfish.

"We are seeing the impact to red urchins and red abalone right away. Those are not subtle," she said. "But if we go too long without nursery habitat for rockfish species, we will be seeing those impacts as well."

According to Catton, human intervention could be one solution. For the past three years, she has

Gravel extraction plan spurring competing views

Linda Pinkham
Staff Report

Following the Curry County Planning Commission's denial of a conditional-use permit Aug. 15 for a gravel extraction project on the Pistol River, applicant Ron Adams has filed an appeal.

The commissioners will hold a special hearing at 10:15 a.m. Wednesday in the Board of Commissioners chambers in the Curry County Courthouse Annex on Moore Street in Gold Beach. It will be a "de novo" hearing, meaning it will start from scratch without relying on any prior factual findings or legal conclusions.

Meantime, on Nov. 14 at the Friendship Hall in Pistol River, local resident Eleanor Foskett put together a forum for the community to "define, prioritize and confront the issues." The issues listed in the forum's invitation included property degradation, the condition of the river and needed repairs, flooding, environmental issues, and fish and wildlife matters.

Approximately 65 people from the community and surrounding areas showed up at the forum.

The community has a lot at stake, given the condition

Renovation to take months for Grocery Outlet store

Jeremy C. Ruark
Pilot Editor

It won't be a quick conversion to renovate the former Ray's Food Place location at 906 Chetco Ave. in Brookings for a new Grocery Outlet location. Shane Navarro of Allied Roofing and Construction, the main contractor for the project, said much work has yet to be done. "We demolished the whole interior," he said. "We are grinding the floors, framing, putting up Sheetrock, adding new refrigerators, new roofing, and paving the parking lot." Navarro said the building renovation could be completed by spring. Grocery Outlet has not yet formally announced a specific opening date for its new store. In October, The Pilot confirmed that Grocery Outlet would be relocating from its current site at 16261 U.S. Highway 101 in Harbor to the Chetco Avenue building. At that time, Grocery Outlet co-owner Lori Panter said, "We are projected to open in early 2020." The Ray's building, which was the first store in the Ray's grocery chain, has been vacant since November 2016. Grocery Outlet has more than 270 independently operated stores in California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Washington, according to the company's website. There is no official word yet about what businesses are considering the space to be vacated in Harbor once Grocery Outlet relocates.

Cranberries are a saucy class act

Linda Pinkham
Staff Writer

'Tis the season for feasting and giving, and that's exactly what students in Michelle Prudden's Exploring Careers class at Brookings-Harbor High School are doing. This day, they are making cranberry sauce. Lots of cranberry sauce. Cape Blanco Cranberries of Port Orford gave the class 80 pounds of deep ruby-red, fully ripe, organic cranberries. Those berries were no match for the culinary expertise of Kashus Blackwelder, Katrina Krawez and Stephani Zavala-Luna, who quickly turned them into 50 jars of cranberry sauce, which will be distributed through Meals on Wheels, to the Brookings Food Bank and community soup kitchens. The students, working on two batches of sauce, carefully measured 24 cups of cranberries for each batch, then washed them. Next, 12 cups of water and 12 cups of sugar went into each pot, to be brought to a rolling boil for five minutes to make syrup. The cranberries met their delicious fate when they were cast into the pot without stirring until each berry had burst. The delectable, already-jelling concoction was placed into jars and sealed in a water-bath canner. The class will make labels for the jars along with handmade holiday cards, using a die-cut machine, to deliver with the cranberry sauce. Krawez's partner on the project, Stephani Zavala-Luna, has been helping make the sauce and will be operating the die-cut machine to produce card-making supplies for the class to assemble. The class has been making cranberry sauce for several years with the help of a Wild Rivers Community Foundation Holiday Partnership grant. This year, the research and grant application for $676.63 was completed by Krawez. The projected number of beneficiaries of the food giveaways and meals will reach 90 youths, 100 adults and 85 seniors. Along with grant funding, $180 of in-kind donations of time and materials have been pledged. The sugar used for the project came from prize winnings at last year's Curry County Fair, and some of the funding was raised through selling class culinary products the previous year. "This year, students will not only learn how to produce a meal for themselves," Krawez said, "but they will also get the opportunity to help support their community during times of need. "This has given me the opportunity to write my first grant, teach my classmates, been working with the commercial red urchin industry and local recreational fishermen to develop a program for harvesting purple urchins.

This project examines whether human intervention can play a role in helping shift the balance of the ecosystem back in favor of the kelp.

“The idea is that if there are fewer urchins in strategic locations along the coast, the kelp may have an opportunity to recover and replenish bull kelp spore availability more broadly,” she said.

But human intervention might be questionable, according to Cal Poly University marine ecologist Benjamin Ruttenberg, who said there are other factors besides purple urchin predation that can limit kelp.

So even with extensive urchin harvesting, a recovery of the kelp ecosystem might not happen. At best, it might work on a small scale, but that would require continuous urchin harvesting and monitoring.

Catton said the efforts to control the purple sea urchins will need to be a long-term investment.

Dogs

“I waited all day,” Maschmeyer said. “No one called. Not much sleep that night.”

At about 9:00 the next morning, Maschmeyer took a call from a woman who identified herself as a housekeeper for a motel in Grants Pass, fully 100 miles from Brookings. “She asked me if I was missing two tan chihuahuas, one named Bella,” he said.

“When I told her we lived in Brookings, she asked how the dogs got so far from home. I told her the dogs were in my truck when it was stolen the day before.

“She told me there was a brown Mazda pickup parked at the motel. I told her that was my truck and to call the sheriff’s office and let them know.”

Even as deputies arrived at the motel, Maschmeyer and his wife, Jill, were already on their way to Grants Pass. The officers were surprised to also find a stolen Ford SUV they’d been looking for parked right next to Maschmeyer’s truck. The SUV had been stolen in Klamath Falls.

Officers got a room key from the manager and went into the suspects’ unit without knocking. Both of the suspects, a man and a woman, were still in bed. Loaded rifles and pistols were on the floor on either side of the bed.

According to Maschmeyer, both were convicted felons and had active felony warrants for their arrest.

The truck and the SUV were packed with stolen items, some from yet another truck the pair had burglarized the night before at an economy motel.

“One of the sheriffs asked me if I had left my keys in the truck,” said Maschmeyer. “When I told him I hadn’t, he asked me if I kept a spare key hidden around the truck. I told him that I did not.

“He then reached in my truck and pulled a key from my ignition and said this is a Mazda key,” Maschmeyer pulled his keys out of his pocket to show the deputy he still had them.

The officer compared the two keys. They were different, all right, but so close that the suspects’ key had worked in Maschmeyer’s truck.

“So, this is how it all happened,” said Maschmeyer. “On Thursday, ‘Bonnie and Clyde’ stole a Ford SUV from Klamath Falls and then decided to take a drive along the Oregon coast with their new vehicle. They spotted my truck parked in a dirt area next to U.S. Highway 101. They knew it was a longshot, but if the Mazda key they had would fit my truck, they had an easy theft.”

Sure enough, their key worked. So, they drove both vehicles to Grants Pass and stopped at a motel. There, the pair spotted a pickup with some “good stuff” in the bed. They stole that stuff and drove on to another motel for the night, Maschmeyer said.

“When at home, Bella wakes me up every morning at 5:00 to go outside,” he said. “She evidently did that at the motel. Being the irresponsible people that they are, they must have let both dogs out, shut the door and went back to bed.”

When the housekeeper came to work, she saw the two dogs. She assumed they belonged to one of the motel’s guests and kept an eye on them so they wouldn’t wander off. After a couple of hours, she decided the dogs didn’t belong to a guest there and instead might be lost.

“Billy was scared and wouldn’t go near her, but Bella did,” he said. “She saw Bella’s nametag with a phone number.

“Because of Bella’s nametag, we got our dogs and truck back. The people in Klamath Falls got their SUV back, the man at the motel got his stuff back, and two felon scumbags were arrested for vehicle theft, burglary and being felons in possession of restricted firearms.

“The police said there will be a separate charge for taking the dogs.

“After having possibly the lowest day of my life, now I am looking forward to reopening the plant,” he said. “That will be my highest day.”

Rebuilt

Since the fire, the initial cleanup and removal of hazardous materials at the site have been completed. “We are now pursuing permits for rebuilding,” Chris Dichter said. “There is a lot of paperwork to do.”

As the plant is rebuilt, Dichter said, it will fit the existing footprint of the original structure. “But instead of a stick building, it will be metal,” he said. “That’s for fire safety.

“A fire hydrant will also be installed closer to the new building, and the structure will be built with an overhead sprinkler system.”

Fire investigators have yet to publicly announce the cause of the fire. Dichter said the fire began in a wall near one of the shop’s lathes.

Much of the equipment lost in the fire was vintage and had been collected over a long period of time. But Dichter said he’s hopeful he will find what he needs to get started again.

“We’ve had calls from fellow competitors who have extra machines and we are in the process of locating other equipment,” he said. “But it will still take months to get specific machines built.”

Dichter said he is also receiving calls from clients, including the federal government. “They have been calling us pretty consistently and telling us they can’t find anyone else that does the type of work that we do,” Dichter said. “So, I’d like to get my 10 employees back to work to meet our clients’ requests.”

Dichter said he hoped to have the plant rebuilt in about one year, with much of the estimated $1.3 million in cost to be funded through insurance.

Community stepping up to fill Thanksgiving baskets

Jeremy C. Ruark
Pilot Editor

Community donations are helping fill Thanksgiving baskets for those in need, to be distributed next week by the Brookings Harbor Food Bank.

Food bank executive Pam Winebarger said an article published Nov. 9 in The Pilot has helped. “We’ve had people coming in with turkeys and cash donations,” she said. “We are still in need of mashed-potato mixes, gravy, stuffing, and fresh or frozen pies.”

Each Thanksgiving basket will contain a turkey, potatoes, gravy, stuffing, vegetables, rolls and a pie. There will be other food items that can be added to the baskets at the time of pickup, depending on the donations.

The food bank is still receiving phone calls from people requesting the Thanksgiving baskets, but who have not pre-registered. “We are getting calls from people who don’t know where to pre-register,” she said.

“For those who would like a Thanksgiving basket, they must come this week to the food bank to register. We’ll need an ID and something to show their physical address, such as a utility bill.”

The food bank, at 539 Hemlock St. in Brookings, is open from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. Monday through Friday. The Thanksgiving baskets will be assembled from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Nov. 25 at the Brookings Church of the Nazarene, 1600 Chetco Ave.

Clients who have pre-registered may pick up the baskets starting at 1 p.m. at the church.

Winebarger said the need for food by many families in the community continues to increase.

The food bank assembled and passed out 212 Thanksgiving baskets last year. “We’ll have at least that many this year,” Winebarger said.

DEAR ABBY

Stewing over her May-December romance

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 22-year-old daughter, “Cara,” who is having a relationship with a 65-year-old man, “Gary.” We do not approve of the relationship.

Gary is going through a divorce, and Cara has moved into his rented condo with him. She just graduated from college. She doesn’t have a job, has no money and drives an old car. She was always a good student and never did anything wrong. She didn’t date much and was a wonderful child. She and Gary have been together for almost six months now.

Cara knows we love her but do not approve of the relationship. She also knows that Gary is not welcome in our home. She sees nothing wrong with their relationship. She doesn’t socialize with her friends as often as she used to. Gary works full-time and also has a job on weekends. We never speak of him when we talk to our daughter. What is going on? What should we do? When will it end? Where is her head? -- NERVOUS IN NEW ENGLAND

DEAR NERVOUS: Your daughter -- who didn’t date much -- thinks she’s in love with Gary. Because she is emotionally involved, she’s thinking with her heart, not her head. What you need to do is loosen up.

Tell your daughter you and your husband will welcome Gary into your home. And when that happens, get to know him and talk with him about the importance of her getting a job in the field for which she has worked so hard to qualify.

Their relationship will end when she finally tires of living with someone who is old enough to be her grandfather, and who has little time to devote to her because he has financial obligations toward his almost-ex-wife. Cross your fingers and hope she grows impatient soon.

DEAR ABBY: At my preschooler’s concert, another parent asked me to hold a seat for her near the front. I draped a sweater over two seats. Shortly after, another family arrived, and the grandfather of another child removed the sweater, claiming the seats for members of his family who were also absent.

Three times I tried to explain that I was holding a seat for a parent with a disability who was having a hard time getting to the auditorium. Each time I was rudely interrupted. The man grabbed me by the shoulder, threatened me and even invited me to settle things outside. He later photographed my wife and children.

Not wanting to be that parent who gets into a fight over a seat at a children’s event, I backed down. Afterward, though, I did file a report with the police. Now I am deciding whether to press charges.

I don’t want to overreact, but I have heard from other parents that this man has a tendency to bully. I have always been bothered by stories about violence at kids’ events and feel this man crossed a line. Should I? -- PROVOKED IN THE EAST

DEAR PROVOKED: If this man behaved as you described and put his hands on you, then you were physically assaulted. If there were other parents who witnessed it and would be willing to testify if you press charges, go ahead and pursue it. When you do, the bully will be in the system the next time he does it to someone.

Patricia Ann Graham Burfield June 27, 1923 - Nov. 12, 2019

Patricia Ann Graham Burfield passed away on November 12, 2019. She was born in Medford, OR on June 27, 1923 to Hilda (Holderman) Graham and James Graham.

Patty is survived by her husband of 71 years, James A. Burfield, Capt., CEC, USN, Retired, of Lake Oswego, OR, and their sons James Roderick Burfield, William Bradley Burfield, Curtis Brent Burfield and her nephew Pat Tindall and their families. Patty was pre-deceased by her third son, Dale Graham Burfield and her granddaughter, Alison Garrett Burfield. The entirety of her descendants include 13 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

In 1932, Patty's family relocated to 29 Palms, CA where the family opened Graham's restaurant which is regarded as the town's first café. Patty waited tables for 50 cents a week and when she was able to drive (at 12), she often delivered hot meals to customers in ill health who couldn't cook for themselves. This early exposure to assisting others who were less fortunate is likely the cornerstone of her continued participation with charity and service groups as a volunteer well into her 80's. The café was a successful and expanding restaurant that continued 15 years beyond their stewardship, which ended in June of 1941. The sale coincided with Patty's graduation from 29 Palms High School with a class size of 19. The family returned north where Patty attended Lewis & Clark College in Portland prior to receiving her BA from the University of Oregon.

After working both in an office and as a substitute teacher, Patty married Jim in 1948. The first 26 years of that marriage involved being a US Navy wife and facing the challenges that military life imposes; being separated when the spouse is assigned overseas. These assignments varied between 7 months and 12 months and Patty and the children would remain stateside. Patty thoroughly enjoyed the Navy, which afforded them family foreign duty assignments that included Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, Subic Bay, Philippines, and Yokosuka, Japan. In addition, Patty set up homes in Monterey, CA, Port Hueneme, CA (twice), McAlester, OK, Great Lakes, IL, Washington, DC (twice), and San Diego, CA, which was her final Naval base residence. While the duty assignments were typically 2 years, the last Washington assignment was four years, the final year of which saw Jim serving in Vietnam.

Throughout her tenure as a Navy wife, Patty tirelessly volunteered at the base hospitals, assisting nurses and patients during the hours her children were at school. In addition, she also resumed her substitute teaching and even served as a scout leader for several of her boys. Although Jim (and Patty) retired from active duty in 1974, her voluntary contributions continued immediately by becoming intimately involved with the San Diego Red Cross Chapter; helping construct one of the first Vietnamese refugee camps in nearby Camp Pendleton, California. Patty's role in organizing shelter, food & clothing for thousands of refugees fleeing Vietnam after the U.S. withdrawal was hands on for over a year. Of all her volunteer activities, Patty was most proud of her contributions to the residents of the Vietnamese "tent city" at Camp Pendleton in 1975-76.

In 1985, Patty & Jim moved north to Brookings, OR, the first city on the coast north of the California border. In Brookings, Patty served as Coordinator of the Adult Respite Day Care Program for the Chetco Senior Center from 1997 – 2006. In 2008, Patty & Jim relocated to Mary's Woods Senior Living Community in Lake Oswego, OR.

According to her wishes, Patty is to be cremated and remain in Jim's care until the time of his passing. At that time, the surviving sons will organize a joint Celebration of Life for the two of them. In the meantime, please join her family in celebrating her remarkable life, her impressive list of accomplishments and their constant love, respect and appreciation for her.

and serve those in my community who have less than I do during this holiday season.”

As part of previous grants, students have prepared a traditional holiday meal complete with turkey, mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce and trimmings.

But, “That’s not what my family prepares for the holidays,” Zavala-Luna told the class. So this year, the class will learn how to make tamales.

Zavala-Luna’s mother, Betty Luna, has volunteered to come and teach the students how to prepare a traditional Mexican-American holiday meal of tamales with rice and beans.

The Career Explorations class is part of the high school’s Youth Transition Program, which helps students gain employment and career foundations.

“The class satisfies the requirement for a senior project through project-based learning,” Prudden said. “They do career comparisons and look at wages and employment outlook. We just shifted into post-secondary training and pathways comparisons so they can look at different ways to get to that career.”

The Wild Rivers Community Foundation Holiday Partnership grants encourage organizations in Del Norte and Curry County to link with each other as they provide emergency supplies, food, winter clothing, hygiene products, and gifts to children and adults in the region during the holiday season.

The funds are made possible through donations from regional donors in Oregon and California.

With a portion of the grant, Krawez will teach a Native American tribe from northern California how to can cranberry sauce to help them fund their food bank.

And Krawez did receive funding for her senior project.

“It is my pleasure to inform you that the Holiday Funding Project has approved a $500 grant to Brookings-Harbor High School for Exploring Careers - Senior Project,” said Gina Zottola, director of the Wild Rivers Community Foundation, in a Nov. 7 letter to Krawez and Prudden.

Appeal

of the Pistol River watershed, but one possible solution to fix those issues has nearly ground to a halt after exhausting the planning commission process.

A 2014 NOAA Fisheries document (PistolRiver-SONCCPlan) cites “lack of floodplain and channel structure” as one of the “key limiting stresses for coho salmon recovery” in the Pistol River. The document describes longtime residents’ recollections of the river having 20-foot-deep pools and water too cold to swim in during the summer, neither of which is evident today nor when the report was written.

The floodplain now is filled with sediments and gravel deposits, which are a result of heavy logging activity in the watershed going back to the 1950s, according to the report.

Several local agencies “with knowledge and the ability to help” were invited to make presentations at the meeting in Pistol River. Some of the invited groups had filed objections with the planning commission about Adams’ conditional-use application, mostly because of the lack of detail in his proposal.

At the same time, those groups and agencies offered ways to help, including guidance - and even fundraising - to assist Adams’ gravel proposal through the complex process of government approvals.

Mark Sherwood, a Pistol River resident and executive director of the Native Fish Society; Ann Vileisis of the Kalmiopsis Audubon Society; Miranda Gray, coordinator of the South Coast Watershed; Drew Harper, riparian restoration coordinator for the Curry County Soil and Water Conservation District; and Ann Schmierer, executive director of Wild Rivers Land and Trust, made brief presentations about what each agency could offer to help solve the issues surrounding the Pistol River community’s problems.

Sherwood had written in an Aug. 1 letter that he would be “happy to help Mr. Adams connect with our local habitat restoration practitioners who would be able to help him put together a scientifically defensible restoration plan for his property.”

Sherwood says he is “both professionally and personally invested in the revival of abundant wild fish in my home river,” but could not support Adams’ application without more specific details about the restoration work or the gravel extraction details. During the Pistol River meeting, he told a story of how his organization assisted another landowner on the Siletz River.

For Adams, however, the need to fix the problem is more urgent than the additional years it could take, over what he already faces, to get through the processes proposed by Sherwood. “I just think they are putting too big a burden on the applicants,” Adams said.

Adams had pointed out during the hearing process that it will take him time to get approval from all of the agencies involved, and he would likely be back to renew the permit (three years) before it “ever gets used.”

From Adams’ viewpoint, approving the application would give him a green light “to take the first step.”

The Pilot confirmed with Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) salmon and trout enhancement program biologist John Weber that the process is complicated and lengthy to get approval for a gravel extraction operation in an estuary.

In addition to satisfying county ordinances and meeting community concerns, the project would also need approval from the National Marine Fisheries Service, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, ODFW, the Department of State Lands, and the Department of Geology and Mineral Industries.

Several gravel companies operating in this area have been able to meet all the requirements, he said. “Usually, those gravel removal projects (in estuaries) that are existing are pretty low-impact,” Weber said.

Although he said he was not familiar with this specific project, he agreed there’s potential for a gravel scalping operation to actually improve the habitat. It could expand the size of the estuary, which would provide more habitat for chinooks while they remain in the estuary during the summer, he said.

The lengthy application process started last May when Adams filed an application to remove gravel for sale on two parcels he owns that are located above the Pistol River Bridge on Pistol River Loop Road.

In his application, Adams states, “The impact of this operation should be mostly positive. The waterway of this area of Pistol River has been in disarray for many years.

The river has eroded hundreds of feet of river bottom away on the south side of the river causing it to fan out, many times its natural width. That’s causing water temperatures to rise, which kills fish, algae growth which lowers oxygen levels in the water and removes safe fish habitat.”

Adams goes on to state he “will work with fish and wildlife to make improvements” and “rehabilitation will be to comply with ODFW to make it better than when we started.”

At the June 20 planning commission meeting, planning director Becky Crockett said the property has a history of being a gravel extraction resource and is noted as a Goal 5 resource in the county’s comprehensive plan. A previous approval had been granted for the site (involving a different applicant), but was revoked when licenses and permits were not obtained within a specified time.

According to the meeting summary, Crockett advised that “the application lacks details and there has been only limited agency coordination.”

Neighbors turned out to make public comments against the project, which ranged from concerns about noise and dust, to quality-of-life and property values, road and bridge conditions, and worries about the river and environment.

No one came to the meeting to support the proposal.

The hearing was held open by request to receive more public input. Adams submitted answers to the comments received, and on July 25 the planning commission re-opened the record for an additional seven days for “interested persons to respond to the new evidence” Adams had submitted.

The Pilot asked Crockett for clarification on the final decision. “The decision made by the planning commission focused specifically on whether or not the applicant had adequately satisfied the required land-use criteria for proposing a gravel extraction operation along the Pistol River, as set forth in the Curry County zoning ordinance,” Crockett said.

“The (planning commission) determined that the applicant had not presented enough site-specific information to address many of the environmental issues required to be addressed by the county.

“Oregon statute and the (zoning ordinance) require that land-use decisions be supported by factual findings.”

When asked what Adams could have done differently with his application, Crockett responded, “What I advise folks who come in to the planning department on a potential land-use application is, to make sure that they include thorough findings for all of the applicable criteria set forth in the (zoning ordinance).

“The county’s application states that it is the responsibility of the applicant to address the criteria with findings. Specifically, our application states, ‘The burden of proof is on the proponent; therefore, it is required that the application provide findings to support the request’ and ‘These findings must be sufficiently specific to allow the decision maker to determine whether your request meets the relevant standard.’

“The (planning commission) stated that there was not adequate information in the application or presented by the applicant to make the required land-use findings to approve the application.

The (zoning ordinance) does not include a provision for a ‘preliminary process’ or permit.”

In Adams’ appeal, he identified the specific appeal issue for denial as, “The County Counsel told the planning director, the planning director told the planning commission that this would be appealed to LUBA, and LUBA would overturn the permit, so the planning commission had no choice except to deny the permit. So, without any discussion or input from the applicant, it was denied outright.”

Adams continued, in part, “Most of my information for this application was never even given to the planning board because of the county counsel’s concern over LUBA overturning the planning board’s decision. Any input that I was able to inject was limited to my reminding the planning commission that I was asking for a preliminary permit.”

“There was absolutely no discussion by the (planning commission) or staff regarding the potential for an appeal to LUBA for this application,” Crockett said. “The focus of land-use review of any application is the (zoning ordinance) and state statute governing land use.

“The references to LUBA were made in the memo by the assistant county counsel to provide legal context to the need to make adequate findings in accordance with the (zoning ordinance). It was not to point out any potential for the Adams application to be appealed to LUBA.”

In an interview, Adams complained about the lack of clear, written procedures in the hearing process. “The first thing they said to me when I started to lay out my plan (at the planning commission meeting) is, ‘You’ve got 15 minutes’ and I said, ‘I don’t think I can do this in 15 minutes.’ So anyway, it screwed up my whole presentation, and I just put it down.

“Then every time I would go to talk, the county counsel would tell me I couldn’t talk. And I would say, ‘Why can’t I talk?’ and counsel would say, well, ‘Because I’ve closed that.’”

Adams said he plans to present the new evidence he was not allowed to enter into the record because of the planning commission’s hearing rules when he appears at the county commissioners’ de novo hearing Nov. 20.
