Popular whale watching events canceled due to COVID

JEREMY C. RUARK
Country Media

The COVID-19 pandemic has again canceled the popular winter Whale Watching Week that attracts people to the Oregon Coast.

"Volunteer support and access to the Whale Watch Center in Depoe Bay have been canceled for both winter and spring whale watches in 2020 and 2021, so the last four opportunities," Oregon State Parks and Recreation Department spokesman Chris Havel said. "We will be back with the volunteer team as soon as it's safe."

Havel said coast visitors wanting to see the whales under the canceled situation have faced limited opportunities since spring 2020.

"You don't need gear, but wide-view binoculars and spotting scopes can help you zoom in after you spot the puff of water vapor from a blow with your naked eye," he said. "After you see the sign, start tracking south to follow the whale's journey."

Havel said morning viewing is best.

"If it's not totally overcast, so you're not fighting the sun while looking west," he said. "There are plenty of tips online for Oregon whale watching."

2021 year in review

Debate over feeding homeless splits community

BY DIANA BOSETTI AND DAVID RUPKALVIS
The Pilot

A lot of news took place in 2021 as COVID continued to plague the community, county commissioners fought over almost every issue and Brookings even crowned a state champion.

But one story took hold in Brookings and refused to let go - a debate over whether nonprofits and churches should be able to feed the hungry without governmental interference.

Brookings made national news this year when benevolent kitchens run by community churches were told to limit those operations to two days a week and three hours or fewer per day.

The controversy goes back nearly two years to when four churches that served charitable meals resulted in an increase of calls for police service.

A petition citing safety concerns was also signed by 29 residents who live near St. Timothy's Episcopal Church - which was serving meals from its kitchen four days a week.

Fast forward to a June city-sponsored community workshop that was held to address those concerns, and the issue got more complicated when the Oregon Health Authority classified community kitchens as restaurants - a designation prohibited within residential neighborhoods.

On Oct. 25, the council voted to modify the ordinance that prohibited churches from operating charitable kitchens, but those who opposed the move stated the ordinance was on the books but applied to traditional revenue-generating restaurants, and accused the city of placing unconstitutional restrictions on their right to minister and practice their faith.

Nearly all of the Brookings benevolent kitchens have since applied for and obtained a conditional use permit, and the city council followed through on its promise to waive the $3,012 permitting fee for doing so.

St. Tim's, however, has not applied for the permit and continues to open its kitchen 4 days a week.

Father Bernie Lindley with

A volunteer at St. Timothy's Episcopal Church put together food to feed the hungry during the church's food kitchen, which runs four days a week. Problems surrounding the benevolent kitchens led to the Brookings City Council limiting the times and hours meals can be served. Below, the R.T. Rev. Diana Akiyama receives a COVID shot from Loren Farmer.

St. Tim's has stated that constitutional protections afforded to religion, including ministering to those in need, prohibits municipalities from imposing restrictions on how often they operate.

The ordinance isn't scheduled to be enforced until at least January 26, but if St. Tim's receives a violation notice, benevolent kitchens may continue to be Curry County's top news story going into 2022, as Lindley has stated he is prepared to file a federal complaint in court.

COVID continues to plague community

COVID rates in Curry County trended below most regions of the state in 2021 - with 1,983 reported cases and 40 deaths - but rates failed to decline enough to lift indoor mask requirements.

By the end of 2021, The Centers for Disease Control deemed residents of Curry County as facing a ‘substantial risk’ of contracting COVID, though surrounding counties fared worse and were designated as ‘high risk.’ Lincoln County is currently the only other coastline community that matches Curry’s risk level.

Moving into 2022, the recent Omicron variant could push risk levels upward, and on Dec. 17, Oregon Gov. Kate Brown urged Oregonians to vaccinate against the virus of what she called “an Omicron-fueled surge of positivity rates.”

According to the CDC, 55.4% of Curry County residents are fully vaccinated.

Oregon Health Authority data also shows that between December 23-26, Curry County’s average daily rate of COVID-positive cases per 100,000 people was 8.9%, with a 7-day average of two cases of COVID each day.

Available ICU beds in Curry currently sit at 8%, and 13% of non-ICU beds are open.

Moving into the new year, Oregonians may also face an indefinite indoor mask mandate, which would replace the current 180-day temporary rule that the state has operated under.

The rule generally applies to all businesses in Oregon, and the OHA is proposing a civil penalty of $500 per person per day for non-compliance with the rule.

Controversy continues to follow Court Boice

2021 started very well from Curry County Commissioner Court Boice. During the first meeting of the year, Boice was elected chairman of the board of commissioners.

But despite the start, Boice continued to struggle to gain support in many of the policies he wanted to enact. On a regular basis, Boice and Commissioner Chris Paasch battled publicly over policy disagreements.

While Boice won many of the battles politically, the conflict took a toll. Midway through the year, Boice stepped down as chair after another dispute over parking spots that Boice felt should be opened to the public.

Commissioner John Herzog stepped in as chair while Boice continued to serve as commissioner.

Curry County commissioners Court Boice, left, and Chris Paasch continued to clash in 2021, although the two did agree on many major issues. Below, the Brookings-Harbor baseball team went 16-0 and won the state championship in the spring.

County hands over public health

During the middle of the COVID-19 pandemic, the Curry County Board of Commissioners caused a lot of controversy when the board voted to have the Oregon Health Authority take over public health duties in the county.

The vote came after the Oregon Health Authority sent the county a letter, saying things must improve in public health or the state would move to take over, saying things must improve in public health or the state would move to take over.

When the decision was made in April, Curry County had only one employee working in the public health authority, Sherrie Ward, public health administrator, and the demands of the COVID-19 pandemic made it difficult, if not impossible, to keep up.

The 2-1 vote was met with controversy. "This is the worst decision this board will make," Commissioner Chris Paasch said after voting no.

Court throws out conviction for low-speed chase

In a critical review of the arresting officers and district court, on June 9 the Oregon Court of Appeals reversed a felony conviction of Jennifer Gayman - a 50-year-old disabled woman who was arrested by Brookings police officers in 2018 for eluding police on a mobility scooter.

In November of 2018, two Brookings police issued a citation to Gayman for driving her scooter on the sidewalk and not wearing a helmet.

Gayman was also told she could not drive her scooter home, as she still did not have a helmet. Gayman took her citation and drove off anyway, and police pursued her in a low-speed chase with sirens and lights and requested backup.

Once Gayman arrived at her home, police arrested her inside her garage.

Two and half years after her arrest, the state court of appeals reversed Gayman’s conviction with a June 9 ruling, stating that the scooter was a motor assisted wheelchair and not a motor vehicle. According to the ruling, a person must be operating a motor vehicle in order to be charged with eluding or fleeing a police officer.

On Oct. 19, the Brookings City Council had to reallocate $25,500 in contingency funds to help pay for a 23 percent insurance cost increase for the 2021-2022 fiscal year due to the court’s decision.

Perfection: Brookings-Harbor wins state title

The Brookings-Harbor baseball team achieved something few ever do - perfection.

In the shortened spring season, Brookings-Harbor went 16-0 and cruised to the state championship with a, 11-2 victory over Yamhill Carlton.

The state title marked a school-first in baseball, and was only the team’s second whale-watching shows the best headlands where you can catch views of passing whales. The beach isn't a good spot for viewing.

Havel urges beach visitors to take additional precautions along the shoreline due to the winter conditions.

Take care to stay well back of cliff edges. There are fences in some places, and respect them, but not everywhere. Be your own best safety coach and be careful. After rain and wind storms, cliff edges are unstable and can give way without warning.

Check the weather and bring the right clothing to stay warm and dry.

Despite the pandemic, the whales continue their annual migration.

"In the winter, we get to enjoy seeing nearly 20,000 gray whales from mid-December through mid-January as they travel south to the warm lagoons of Baja Mexico," he said. "After giving birth, there's a north-bound migration in spring."

According to Havel, people are fascinated by large, wild animals for good reason.

"People are clever and good at inventing and building ways to survive and thrive, and wildlife like whales do the same thing through sheer awesome power," he said. "There's still some mystery about their lives, and seeing them in action is a thrill. Seeing them in real life is also a reminder of how we affect all marine life, and have a responsibility to eliminate pollution and be careful stewards of the planet's resources."

Hacel adds that people are naturally attracted to the whales' beauty, mystery and power.

"But we also appreciate being reminded of our place in these natural systems, and it makes us all feel part of the family," he said.

While the cancellation of Whale Watching Week can be an economic impact for coast businesses, Havel said there have been so many other disruptions these last two years, people have adapted.

"Some people may choose not to participate in whale watching if there aren't volunteers available to help them, but many people have always done it solo, and there are also private boat tours available," Havel said. "Folks interested in the guided tour experience should check with Travel Oregon and the Oregon Coast Visitors Association for more information."

What to expect from wireless technology in 2022

By LAURENT “LT” THERIVEL
President and CEO of UScellular

2021 was a year of tremendous challenges, but there were also incredible strides made in the world of wireless technology that have changed the way we live, work and play – all for the better.

I have been in the wireless industry for more than 15 years, and as technology evolves, there’s always plenty to be excited about. Today, over 300 million people have access to a 5G wireless network, so it’s hard to believe this innovation became available only three years ago. 5G has been described as a transformative technology, but most transformations happen steadily – they become “trends” that happen over time. To that end, here are three trends I predict for 2022 that can have a lasting impact on families and businesses across the country.

1. Real Change for Rural America

A recent study by BroadbandNow indicates that more than 40 million people in the United States lack reliable access to high-speed Internet, many of them in rural areas. A primary driver for lack of coverage in these areas is simple economics – at times it can be twice as expensive to build the needed broadband infrastructure in rural areas, and there are far less people to help pay for the service – making it cost-prohibitive for providers and expensive for customers.

But there are encouraging signs that this will be changing. The recent infrastructure bill allocated more than $65 billion for broadband and provides an unprecedented opportunity for the expansion of high-speed connectivity to underserved areas, as well as increased affordability for consumers. And government leaders I’ve spoken to are eager to put this money to work for their constituents.

Additionally, revolutionary new wireless technology – 5G fixed wireless – can provide connectivity to homes and businesses at very high speeds, delivering reliable broadband access in rural areas quickly and cost-effectively. At UScellular, we’ve achieved world-record speeds in trials of our fixed wireless solution, and we look forward to rolling the service out to more customers in 2022.

Our investments in fixed wireless serve a dual benefit of also enabling enhanced 5G mobile broadband for consumers, allowing them to connect both at home and on the go.

I predict 2022 will be the year that we begin the path towards significant progress in connecting rural America and bridging everyone to the digital economy.

2. Internet of Things Goes Mainstream

You may have heard this one before. The Internet of Things – or IoT – has been touted for years, and while there have been significant strides towards the ultimate promise of a connected world, the hype has so far outweighed the results. However, business leaders I’ve met with have shared concrete examples that demonstrate IoT technology is starting to deliver on its potential, mainly due to the ubiquity of 5G networks that provide the consistent, fast connection that IoT devices require.

Hospitals are reducing costs and improving patient care by tracking the location of thousands of assets, such as beds, medical equipment, and specialized instruments, as well as monitoring temperature-sensitive medications. Precision agriculture allows farmers to automate their irrigation systems and monitor soil quality, minimizing money and resources spent by only putting water and fertilizer when and where they are needed. For consumers, the expectation that everything can be trackable and connected is becoming a reality with security cameras, smart watches and low-cost item tracking like AirTags.

According to CTIA, there are more than 190 million IoT devices in the U.S., representing over 40% of all estimated wireless devices. I predict that 2022 will be the year that IoT truly starts to emerge and deliver on the promise of a world where anything can be connected.

3. Connecting for Togetherness

Perhaps the most impactful change that I see for 2022 is reversing the trend of technology that divides us online, and instead helps us connect in real life. And the indications are there.

Connectivity has always been used to bring people together – phone calls, text messaging, video calls, and even social networks initially brought us together, helping us connect with old friends and share important life moments. But much of the online social discourse these days is divisive, poisonous, and at times even life-threatening. When people can hide behind digital disguises and speak to anonymous and faceless recipients, every online conversation can quickly escalate into an “us vs. them” division.

Encouragingly, at UScellular, we are seeing a steady uptick in personal communication. One-on-one text messaging is on the rise, and after previously declining year over year, phone calls per user increased on our network in 2021 – signs that people are connecting directly with each other, not around each other via social networks.

Letters to the Editor

Take some action

I read with interest your story on speeding in Brookings and traveling to Brookings every day, I can verify speeding is a problem.

The chart shown in the paper was illegible and worthless. Typical DOT, taking a very simple problem and devising a chart so complicated it can’t be easily understood.

There are several factors involved, one is, there are five changes in the limit from one end of town to the other. These are hard to see as there is so much advertising displayed, blocking the signs. Two, people just refuse to go the speed limit anywhere. Three, there is little to no enforcement. Most stops result in a verbal warning which in most cases does no good at all.

There is, in my opinion simple answers. Establish one speed limit through town, 25 or 30 mph seems reasonable, make sure it’s clearly marked. It works in Gold Beach, Port Orford and Bandon. Second, enforce the limits. Most of the speeders are locals who do whatever they feel like. Cite violators until speeding is under control. Three, eliminate parking in the two outside lanes of Chetco Avenue from the theater to DQ. There is adequate parking nearby and a very unsafe condition for cars traveling in the lanes and people trying to safely exit their cars is eliminated.

Take some action don’t keep kicking the can down the road.

Amused by bridges

I was intrigued, amused and then amazed by the article on the bridges of Curry county. There were some interesting facts about several of the Curry County bridges.

Then amused by the literary freedom stating that “the Thomas creek bridge sits over the ocean.” We have passed over it many times during our 20 plus years living in Brookings and when I look down below the bridge, I see tress and brush. I was amazed at the lack of math of the writer who several times mentioned nine bridges in Curry County and no mention or counting of the bridges at Pistol, Chetco and Winchuck rivers.

I hope the Pilot will cover the construction of these bridges when they happen and include them in future counting of Curry County bridges. This list also does not include the various bridges crossing the creeks along the north bank road of the Chetco River.

Common Decency

They used to call it common decency because it was considered common. Now it would be more aptly called uncommon decency because it’s so infrequent.

Everyone is so impatient, so intolerant, so out of touch with what used to be thought of as good manners or social etiquette, that we just don’t have time for or see the need for being courteous or decent when dealing with others. I’ve finally come to realize that my needs, my sensibilities, my priorities are just not as important as the next person who bumps into me without saying excuse me or cuts in front of me in line or cuts me off on the road or tailgates me. So having a better understanding of my place in society, I just move out of their way and I’d like to publicly apologize to anyone whose progress I might have impeded by being the obstacle in their path and I promise to do better in the future.

So, the next time somebody knocks you down like a bowling pin because in their mind, you’re in their way and they just don’t have the time for you, do what I do, step aside, say you’re sorry and let them pass. Their life must be so much more important than yours and whatever they are doing, it has got to be more significant than your little meaningless in their way existence.

I just hope that by reading this, it did not interrupt your prior plans which I’m sure were much more important than reading my meaningless drivell.

Wreaths Across America honors Curry County vets

At the National Day of Wreaths Across America Day, December 18, Daughters of the American Revolution, Cape Sebastian Chapter and Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 4439 celebrated the first wreath laying at Rogue River Cemetery where over 100 volunteers joined together to lay 310 remembrance wreaths on the graves of United States veterans.

Each volunteer was encouraged to say the veteran's name aloud and to take a moment to thank them for their service to our country. The wreaths that were laid were not done to decorate graves, but to remember the veteran's lives. Each wreath is a grateful America.

Thank you to all the volunteers, sponsors, businesses, to our veterans, to the U.S. Coast Guard Service-men, Brookings Coast Guard Station, to the Curry County Event Center that graciously provide a beautiful venue at the last minute and to our honored guests, Dorothy Nickerson and Bud Dubay, World War II Navy Veterans.

For next year's wreath laying, Wreaths Across America is matching every wreath sponsored from now through Friday, January 14, for placement next December. Go to www.wreathsa-crossamerica.org/OR0067.

Brookings mayor steps down

In April, Brookings Mayor Jake Pieper went on Facebook to announce he was stepping down as mayor.

Pieper's decision came after the city council criticized him for writing a letter in support of Project Turnkey.

In his resignation announcement, Pieper said he could not continue as mayor after losing the support of the council.

Former Mayor Ron Hedenskog was appointed mayor a few days later.

Housing continues to be a major problem

A lack of inventory in the housing market impacted real estate prices, people's ability to accept jobs, and municipal approaches to dealing with the crisis.

According to Multiple Listing Service numbers in October, sale prices of Curry County homes increased 5.2% in October compared to the year prior, in large part because very few homes are listed each month.

In July, the Curry County Board of Commissioners began accepting applications for accessory dwelling units to increase year-round rental opportunities.

In Brookings, the planning commission also changed its zoning language regarding workforce housing to clear existing restrictions for ADU development in residential zones, and approved two subdivisions: A 20-lot subdivision known as Seacrest Estates in the East Harris Heights neighborhood; a four-lot subdivision called Tide Pool Estates in the Dawson Tract area.

KCIW moves tower after dispute with Brookings

One day after its lease with the City of Brookings expired, Radio Station KCIW went dark on Nov. 1, then returned to the airwaves Dec. 5.

KCIW went off the air

after the Brookings City Council struck down a request for a 90-day extension to the radio group to use a city-owned radio communications tower.

KCIW had installed and maintained a radio broadcast antenna on the city's tower since 2014, but in 2019 that arrangement became conditional as city officials expressed disappointment with KCIW's emergency broadcasting capabilities, as well as interest in working with another company that could bring in more revenue.

KCIW broadcasts on FM 100.7.

Treasurer a concern in Curry County

At the beginning of the year, finding a county treasurer seemed like a difficult task.

The problems began when Terry Hanscam, who won election to the seat, announced he would not take the seat. By the end of January, the board of commissioners appointed Douglas Baker to the job, but he also resigned with a few days.

A few days later, commissioners voted to hire David Barnes as treasurer. Barnes has kept the role since, but has not indicated if he intends to run for election.

Stranded family rescued after being stuck in snow

A Christmas weekend excursion almost turned tragic for a local family.

Sheriff John Ward reported Curry County dispatch received a 9-1-1 call at 6:04 p.m. December 26. The phone number belonged to Kody Rosenstiel, but there was no voice contact due to poor service location, but dispatch was able to determine that the call was from the Bear

Camp Road area above Agness.

Dispatch was not able to reconnect at that time. About 30 minutes later, dispatch received another 9-1-1 call from the same number and was able to determine that twenty-two-year-old Kody Rosenstiel of Broadbent, 23-year-old Miranda Davis of Gold Beach, two children ages 2 and 3 and three dogs were stuck in the snow about six miles up Bear Camp Road from Agness.

Rosenstiel told dispatch he had to walk about an hour downhill in the snow towards Agness to get cell service to call. Rosenstiel told dispatch that they were in a Ford F-350 and did not have any supplies besides some food and water. Rosenstiel was told to return to his vehicle and that search and rescue would find them.

The Curry County Sheriff's Search and Rescue Snow team was called to respond with the Sno-Cat. SAR coordinator, Deputy Walter Scherbarth, led the SAR team of Steve DiCicco, Ryan McGinnis, Will Tucker, Craig Rasbury, Jennifer Stansell, Mike Merica and Jesse Fletcher to the Agness area and deployed the Sno-Cat, a tracked ATV and a couple four-wheel drives.

On their way to Agness, the SAR team had to navigate around a slide on the Agness Road to continue the mission. Once deployed on Bear Camp Road, Tucker with the tracked ATV went ahead and had to cut trees that were in the roadway and the Sno-Cat operated by McGinnis and DiCicco pushed the trees out of the roadway to continue up hill in heavy falling snow.

At about 10:25 p.m., the SAR team located the subjects and their stuck vehicle, and after winching the vehicle out with the Sno-Cat, it took about an hour to get them back down to the main Agness road. The Sno-Cat, which was purchased with a federal grant, has proven to be a very valuable asset, making it easier and safer for the SAR team to search larger areas in less time.

"The Curry County Sheriff's SAR team did an amazing job with all the obstacles they had to deal with to get the stranded family back to safety," Ward said.

"This is another example of people putting themselves in harms way and SAR saving lives. Kudo's for our dispatch for working hard to determine a general area where the 9-1-1 call came from and getting the resources out to rescue the stranded family."
