Gov. Brown extends school closures

Linda Pinkham
Staff Writer

Governor Kate Brown announced during a press conference on Wednesday, April 8 that in-person classes in Oregon will be closed through the remainder of the school year.

"Schools and learning will continue as best as we can using remote means," Brown said. Less than a month ago, Brown had ordered schools closed temporarily through April 28.

"My top priority will always be the health and safety of Oregonians," Brown said. "That is the forefront of my mind with every single decision that I make. To the best of my ability, I also want to provide Oregonians with as much information I have as quickly as possible so you may have some certainty in these very uncertain times. We want to give you the ability to make plans for your children's education and for everyone's health and safety, especially because I know that social distancing orders have required huge sacrifices from our children. Missing school is especially difficult on our students and on their parents."

In the first stage of switching over to distance education and remote means of learning, high school seniors take priority. Those students who were on track for graduation when schools were closed, will be given passing grades for their classes and will receive their diplomas.

"I refuse to punish students, many of whom have been in Oregon schools for over a decade, because they could not attend classes for a little over two months," Brown said.

Students who did not have passing grades will be the focus of efforts to ensure they can graduate.

"However, for those students who did not have a passing grade in mid-

HANDY HEROES MAKING NEEDED SANITIZER PRODUCTS

Linda Pinkham
Staff Writer

The lack of hand sanitizer hasn't stopped a local group from taking the matter into their own hands to solve a big problem. They decided to make sanitation gel and spray sanitizers themselves and distribute them for free to first responders, health care workers and facilities, essential businesses, like grocery stores and UPS and FedEx, and anyone else who needs them.

Josh Stout, the Director of Program Development for Reach Out World Wide (ROWW), is used to improvising when he helps out in disaster zones around the world. See our story "Reaching Out: Local man helps around the world" on currypilot.com.

"Gee, how could I apply what I learned here?" Stout asked himself while considering the COVID-19 pandemic. "We make our own hand sanitizer and cleaning supplies when I deploy with medical teams across the world. I talked with our medical people at ROWW and they sent me their recipes. Now I'm turning into a chemist and never expected it."

The products follow approved WHO specifications.

"We are quickly and efficiently producing sanitizer that is 95% alcohol — far exceeding the minimum level of effectiveness to kill viruses such as COVID-19," Stout said.

Gold Beach Fire Chief Tyson Krueger and Stout fronted the money to launch CLEAN 1 Initiative and soon received a substantial donation from Lowe's Home Improvement Stores because of their relationship working with Stout and ROWW over the years.

"COVID-19 has struck the world off guard and has many of us scrambling to find the necessities to protect ourselves and our loved ones," says their GoFundMe site. "Essential supplies like sanitizing spray and hand sanitizer are hard to find or even non-existent, yet crucial to our everyday safety as we fight this unprecedented virus. We are aiming to do our part to help curb the

Council approves vehicle camping at churches

Brian Williams
Pilot Editor

Not everyone has a home to "stay safe" in during the coronavirus pandemic. To help the homeless, Brookings City Council unanimously approved overnight vehicle camping in church parking lots.

Councilors adopted, 5-0, a temporary emergency rule during a special meeting on Monday, April 6, allowing "camping by homeless on the property of religious institutions, limited to the period we are under the governor's 'Stay Home, Stay Safe' order for COVID-19." A Google search found 15 churches in Brookings.

The emergency rule includes provisions of Oregon Revised Statute 203.082 — "Camping by homeless on the property of religious institutions."

The new temporary rule states that churches must request a free permit from the city that would allow the church to have up to three vehicles in their parking lot each night. The church must provide campers with access to sanitary facilities, including but not limited to toilet, hand washing and trash disposal facilities. The church also has to update the city with the number of vehicles staying each night at the church.

Only churches with a permit would be allowed to offer vehicle camping. As far as the permits, "it should be real simple, more of a documentation so we know who is doing it," City Manager Janell Howard said, describing it as a "checklist."

The temporary emergency rule only had the three guidelines. For instance, the number of people allowed per vehicle or if a church representative has to be at the church overnight are not addressed. The finer details were left to the church to decide.

"We are entrusting that they are going to do what is best for the community," said Mayor Jake Pieper.

Prior to the temporary rule, the Brookings Municipal Code only allowed sleeping in a recreational vehicle or travel trailer on private property with a residential unit or during construction, not connected to the city's water or sewer system and for not more than 14 days per calendar year.

Gov. Kate Brown issued the "Stay Home, Stay Safe" order on March 23, but it does not specifically address the homeless. Brown did not provide an end date for the order. As of Tuesday, April 7, Curry County had three confirmed cases of COVID-19.

After receiving a permit, city staff said they would not be driving around to each of the churches within the city limits to check on them. They would only do so if they received a complaint.

"As far as monitoring it's no different than any other abatement," said Tony Baron, City of Brookings Public Works and Developmental Services Director. "If it gets overused and abused — if they have five, eight, 10 RVs — we are going to get a call on it and we are going to abate it just as any ordinary nuisance abatement. I don't feel our department needs to go by every church every day to see how many RVs are parked there. When the issue

Council quickly appoints Alcorn to fill vacant seat

Brian Williams
Pilot Editor

Brookings City Council wasted no time filling the seat vacated minutes earlier by Councilor Bill Hamilton during a special meeting on Monday, April 6. Brad Alcorn was unanimously appointed to the council.

Hamilton has served on the council for nearly eight years and the seat is up for election in November of this year. He submitted his letter of resignation on April 2 and with a 4-0 vote, it was accepted by the council Monday afternoon.

Hamilton, who has a progressive disease and limited mobility, said via phone he was advised to step away from the council.

"My health is good but it was recommended that I slow down a little bit to keep my health good," Hamilton said. "I'd just like to thank all of you on the council and all of the staff at City Hall for an absolutely wonderful 8 years. It's been the thrill of my life to be there. It's the best experience I

Letters to the Editor

A plea from those who serve you

Editor:
I work at one of our local stores. In speaking with coworkers and other clerks in the area there is something I need you to know. We are hurting too. We are feeling unsafe and vulnerable. We do not have a choice to stay home and stay safe.

Here's how you can help. Recognize that we are not therapists. Please find other avenues to take out your annoyance and frustrations.
Recognize that we do not control the supply chain or corporate decisions. We are just as surprised as you when we come to work to find barriers etc.

We are working because it has been decided that we are necessary for your life. Please don't shop because you're bored. Please get what you need and leave. Don't touch everything. We have to clean it.
If you must take a small child in, please hold their hand so they don't touch everything.
Please keep your opinions on how we got here or who's at fault to yourself. We are just trying to get through the day. Believe it or not, your opinion is not original. We've heard it 50 times already today.

Please keep your distance from us. We are trying to be helpful and friendly. Please help us to stay safe and sane.

Elmo lives

Editor:
Elmo Williams Day Committee Chair Carolyn Milliman announced that plans for the fourth annual commemorative celebration scheduled for the fourth Sunday in April have been canceled due to COVID-19. Following is a transcript of remarks by former City Manager Gary Milliman from the first annual celebration.

Elmo lives on!
He lives on through those physical contributions made to the community that bear his touch:
• The formal gardens at Azalea Park
• Kidtown
• The Capella by the Sea
In his invitation letter for the dedication, Elmo described the Capella by the Sea as follows:
"Capella by the Sea was conceived as a quiet sanctuary where troubled people can come to meditate and sort out their problems without the distractions of this frantic world."
Elmo lives through his contributions to the arts community. Through the Chetco Community Players...the special narrated screenings of films...and through his theatrical creation...The Corner Pocket.

He lives on through his contributions to the spirit of the community. Through his Brookings booster persona. When I interviewed him to be a part of the City's promotional program to attract new residents, here is part of what he said:
"My wife Lorraine and I discovered Brookings during a casual drive down the Oregon coast in 1983. We fell in love with the town, and with the people. We moved to Brookings and built a house, and have enjoyed living here.
"We found many opportunities for involvement in the community, from working in the botanical gardens at Azalea Park to participating in live theater
"I've traveled around the world...could have lived anywhere in the world...but made the right decision to make Brookings my home. We have a

could ever hoped to have. I praise all of you for the work we have done, that will continue to be done.

"I've enjoyed every minute of it. It's been a true honor," he added.

The remaining four councilors spoke fondly of Hamilton.

"I'm sorry this is coming this way, Bill. It's been a pleasure to work with you. Sorry to see you leave," Councilor Ron Hendskog said.

"It's been a pleasure to sit next to you up here. Congratulations on your new retirement," Councilor Brent Hodges said.

"Thanks for everything and for being patient with the rookie councilman on the board and being patient with me and giving me good advice when I needed it," Councilor John McKinney said.

"We've been sitting together for quite a while man. I appreciate your willingness to serve in that capacity for as long as you did. If you've sat up here for a while you find out it's not super easy. I appreciate what you gave to the city," Mayor Jake Pieper said.

A vacancy on the council is normally filled with a majority vote of the council within 60 days. In this instance, they had until June 5. The process includes people submitting applications to the city recorder and then being interviewed by councilors during a council meeting. At that same meeting, the council makes an appointment and the person is sworn in.

Mayor Pieper, taking the lead, explained this was not a normal time, pointing to the coronavirus pandemic, and wanted to fill the seat immediately.

"We are all aware that something is going on and timely. We need all five chairs taken up here, you know, pronto," Pieper said. "There is a member of our community who has already shown himself to be pretty steadfast. New to the community but I think could bring needed experience and characteristics of what we would be looking for."

After explaining the usual process of filling a council vacancy, Pieper strongly urged filling the seat with Alcorn, who was at the meeting. Brookings Councilors have filled vacancies similarly in the past.

"Obviously kind of the norm of taking applications and going through a process isn't really feasible right now," Pieper said. "I would ask the council to entertain making an immediate appointment of Mr. Alcorn."

From there the appointment came quickly and without a word being spoken by Alcorn on the record. No application was submitted by Alcorn. He was not asked any questions. He was the only candidate brought up.

Alcorn, a retired Fresno Police Department officer, was serving on the Brookings Parks and Recreation Commission, is still on the Curry County Budget Committee and is a Curry County Sheriff's Reserve Officer and K9 Unit Supervisor.

Pieper concluded his push for Alcorn with "Brad is here out of willingness. He's ready to go when we are."

The vote to appoint Alcorn was 4-0.

Alcorn addressed the council after taking the oath of office from City Manager Janell Howard.

"Regarding that oath, I have taken an oath before as a peace officer and I don't take that oath lightly," Alcorn said. "I recognize the responsibility that comes with it. I just want to assure all of you and this community that I will work extremely hard and make sure I can get up to speed on as many issues as possible so that I don't hold anyone back or slow anything down. I know that there are some things coming up that are very important and I will be as prepared as possible to understand all sides of these issues. I thank each of you for your commitment and as long as I can serve my community where I live, I will."

In other matters, Alcorn stepped down from his post on the Parks and Recreation Commission; and Councilors approved, 5-0, financing of smart water meters.

The next regular Brookings City Council meeting will be at 7 p.m. on April 13.

wonderful arts community and great restaurants. But mostly it's the people. Brookings people are friendly. I just love Brookings and its people."

He loved Brookings and its people, and he wasn't shy about it.

Elmo lives through our remembrance of those hundreds and thousands of selfless acts of kindness. Cards received in the mail, little notes left at the office, personal poems, informal chats and patient listening. He lives through his interaction with the diversity and sometimes quirkiness of the people he encountered along the trail. He once loaned me a copy of his film documentary on cowboys. Somehow... he thought I would like it. I still have his note.

My wife told me that someone should write a book about Elmo and his interaction with the Brookings community. It would all make for a wonderful script, wouldn't it? Think about it. Elmo: The Movie.

Thanks, Elmo. We'll be seeing you again a little further on down the trail.

Hugs from Carolyn and all of your friends! Happy Birthday April 30.

Dear Reader

News related to the COVID-19 virus is changing by the minute. The Pilot continues to provide you with the most complete and accurate information possible about how these changes are affecting the lives of Curry County residents and visitors.

Oregon Gov. Kate Brown's recent executive order directs businesses statewide to provide for customer and employee social distancing, and for

In addition, our reporters will be working from their home offices, to further limit the number of employees in our office and provide for everyone's health and safety.

Meantime, feel free to call our customer service

DIFFICULTY RATING: ★★★★★

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

Grilfriend says man should find new home after prison

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend of 15 years is in prison. We have two children together. Our relationship has been rough. We had a fight, and he went to jail for it. Another reason he went to prison is he violated his probation and failed to report.

I take the kids to see him, and he still wants us to be together. He has nowhere to go when he gets out. How do I tell him I don't want him back at my house without him retaliating on me? -- AFRAID IN TEXAS

DEAR AFRAID: This is how. Tell him plainly that because of the circumstances that sent him to jail, you no longer want him living under your roof. It's bad for the children. Therefore, he will be finding other living arrangements when he is released. He may not like it, but please remember you owe him nothing. You have to stand your ground for your children's sake. Should he stalk or threaten you in any way, go to the police. Tell them you are afraid of him and why, and ask about a restraining order because he is violent.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I eat a meal, as soon as he's finished he gets up and wanders around. We call that the "wandering" phase of his meal. I have asked him to no avail to stay seated and talk with me. I think it is disrespectful.

My husband also pulls out his phone when we are out with friends. I have told him that what he's doing is basically telling them he would rather see what's on his phone than converse with them. He doesn't do it for the entire meal, but when he does, it irritates me. How can I get basic manners across to him? -- LONELY AT MEALTIME

DEAR LONELY: I knew a person years ago who had an impulse control problem similar to the one you describe your husband having. The man had been in an auto accident and suffered a traumatic brain injury. In your husband's case, it appears he either has attention deficit disorder or "suffers" from a lack of consideration for your feelings. There is help for the former, but you can't teach basic manners to someone who doesn't want to learn. You have my sympathy. Try not to let it give you heartburn.

DEAR ABBY: I work as a parcel clerk in a major retail store. The biggest part of my job is returning shopping carts from the parking lot to the lobby. Shoppers have a habit that makes my job a lot harder than it needs to be, so I want to get this message out to as many people as possible:

Please push your shopping cart ALL THE WAY into the next one when you put it away. I'm not asking you to bring your cart all the way back to the store. Just remember that each cart can nest into the one in front of it.

You have no idea how much faster I could do my job if everybody did this. Thank you for helping get the word out. -- PLEA FROM THE PARKING LOT

DEAR PLEA: Glad to help. And as long as we are on the subject of shopping carts, may I add that those cute little straps that are meant to secure small children in the upper compartment of the cart tend to get caught and lock the carts together if folks are careless after they unhook their children. It can be next to impossible to untangle those carts. I speak from experience.

FAITH FORUM

A vaccine for fear

Barry Kimbrough

"When I am afraid, I put my trust in you" — Psalm 56.

Words like "global health threat," "death toll," "economic collapse," "shut down," and "social distancing," have become familiar in the past few weeks. The coronavirus pandemic has given birth to widespread fear and uncertainty. Questions abound. How many will die in the next few weeks? If the closures continue much longer, what will our country look like on the other side of this?

The world we knew has disappeared. Huge changes have happened in bewildering, quick succession. Will life ever get back to normal? And how do we cope?

Many are tempted to give in to despair. Others who have not been personally affected might think more of their safety than others' danger. We do our best to keep our distance and wash our hands and assume we will be OK. Possibly you, like me, have struggled with a mixture of both kinds of thoughts.

The only vaccine for fear is trusting God. A wise person once said, "I don't know what the future holds, but I know Who holds the future." The Bible has many promises that can help us deal with fear. Here are just a few: "For God has not given us a spirit of fear, but of power and of love and of a sound mind" (2 Timothy 1:7).

"Peace is what I leave with you; it is my own peace that I give you. I do not give it as the world does. Do not be worried and upset; do not be afraid" (John 14:27).

"Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for you are with me; your rod and your staff, they comfort me" (Psalm 23:4).

One of the things that strengthen our trust is knowing that God can bring good out of bad. Oddly enough, the shutdown has had some benefits. For example, people who live on the canals in Venice, Italy have reported that the water has never been cleaner. They can even see the fish.

Air pollution has been reduced. Many previously smog-filled Chinese cities are seeing blue skies. Researchers suggest that up to 100,000 premature deaths caused by air pollution in China could be avoided if the country would continue its industrial slow down for a full year. We are learning to wash our hands. We are now more educated about virus sanitation and disinfection. Italians are singing from their balconies. God is at work. He is using a variety of people to help in a variety of ways. A community spirit has emerged as people stay in touch by phone and learn to use other online platforms. He has used the crisis to show His love for the animal kingdom. Circus animals have gotten a much-needed break. People are walking their pets more. Many of the four-legged are enjoying the consequences of COVID-19. More unborn kids are surviving. Texas is one state that has enacted a temporary ban on abortion clinics. Some other states are doing the same. And what about respect for the elderly? Concern for seniors has increased as supermarkets and some banks have created special 70-plus time slots. Who inspired this? A long list of celebrities, professional athletes, generous philanthropists, and private businesses have donated hundreds of millions toward community food security, medical supplies, employee relief funds, and vaccine research. A much larger number of unknown ordinary folks are donating time and effort and money to help at food pantries and soup kitchens and other services.

As we look to the future, let us remember God is still in charge. We may lose some things, but we never lose the watch care of our heavenly Father. "For the mountains shall depart and the hills be removed," He says, "but my kindness shall not depart from you, nor shall the covenant of my peace be removed," says the Lord, who has mercy on you" (Isaiah 54:10).

arises, it is going to fester to us and we are going to respond to it." Fines could be levied for non-compliance, Howard added. Councilor John McKinney asked the city manager if churches specifically requested the city to allow temporary car camping in parking lots. Howard said she had not and pointed to Mayor Pieper for input. "No one specific had approached me since we met last," Pieper said. "I mean, this has been, you know, they didn't have to approach me, this has been something that they have wanted." Pieper and Councilor Ron Hedenskog said this was a small first step and that larger questions were on the horizon.

"We need to deal with perhaps, warming centers," Hedenskog said. "We need to deal with perhaps, a tent city, a small place where they can camp, maybe not even small, but at least small dwellings. We lost our mission that used to be out in Harbor. There is a possibility that an organization might want to pick up a mission here in the city and it might even be the city council would want to work with that to make it happen." Howard said doing something like this for the homeless was being worked on in the background for over a year and doing this now could provide valuable data for later decisions. "This is only temporary during this time and it gives you guys a good test period to see if it is working right before we adopt an ordinance," Howard said.

spread of COVID-19 by producing and distributing sanitizer to those who need it most." Several local businesses and organizations have joined in the effort, including Gold Beach Fire Department; Jerry's Rogue Jet Boats, whose boat storage facility is where the shipping operation is staged; Sunset Family

Pizza, where the products are mixed; and South Coast Storage and Equipment Rental for logistical support. Locally, 15 to 20 volunteers are working on the project, with about 50 total across the country and beyond. The operation has continued to grow, now expanding to Australia, plus four other states — California, Colorado, Kentucky and New Jersey. "There's a much larger need than I ever anticipated," Stout said. They have already distributed 700 bottles, with 400 of those distributed locally. The products have been distributed locally from Crescent City, Calif., to Coos Bay. "The struggle right now is finding ethanol distilleries to work with us," he said. "We aren't asking for donations. We can pay them to make the ethanol, which will keep them open and their employees working." School

March, and who need time to improve their grades in order to pass one or more classes needed for their diploma, I am asking school districts to focus their efforts finding creative ways to get these seniors the extra attention they need to get across the finish line," she said. Not reopening schools, which have operating costs to ramp back up, will allow schools to invest time and resources into distance education and remote learning, Brown said. At Central Curry School District 1, 36 seniors are in the class of 2020. Early estimates indicate that less than five may be impacted, according to Superintendent Tim Wilson. "We are confident that all will meet graduation requirements," he said. Gold Beach High School seniors have all been contacted already and will be called again this week to discuss their situations. They will be the first to check out school devices if needed. The district is working with vendors to potentially purchase hot spots for those students most in need. Approximately 10% of seniors in CCSD1 do not have a cell phone or device. "The governor's announcement wasn't a surprise, however, I will admit it was a difficult one to accept," Wilson said.

"We will move forward and hope that what we have learned from this pandemic will help us prepare for any future crisis." Brookings Harbor School District interim Superintendent Chris Eberhardt met with high school Principal DeAnne Varitek when schools first closed to see how many students were on track to graduate and which ones were not. "Fortunately, we did this a couple of weeks ago," Eberhardt said. "I just had a hunch we wouldn't be coming back to school. We've been in touch with every one of our seniors." Students need to achieve a passing grade for each class they were enrolled in if the classes are required for graduation. In addition, if they need to make up credits from previous years, they have to fulfill those class requirements.

The school district has been reaching out again to students and families since last week for them to pick up the devices they need. The school district ordered 50 hot spots for internet access a couple of weeks ago. "Seniors are our target audience for those," Eberhardt said. Some of the hot spots will also go to staff who live in remote areas without access. In some cases, students and staff will need to travel to locations where they can get a cell signal to download materials and work offline. Eberhardt predicted that all of the students could make up the necessary work to receive passing grades in 1 to 3 weeks, easily finishing by mid-June. Students will have until the end of August to complete work to still be considered part of the class of 2020, according to Brown. School districts will turn next to making sure
