

Brookings Line Worker Helps Light Up Rural Community

BY KELSEY BOZEMAN

Gary Veach has climbed thousands of poles and strung countless miles of wire, but he had never seen what electricity meant to people who have never had it.

The Coos-Curry Electric Cooperative line foreman has spent decades connecting power lines, restoring electricity after storms and extending service to remote Oregon communities and recently had the opportunity to extend his skill outside of this country.

In the Guatemalan village of Aldea El Coco, where families lived for generations without power, Veach discovered the true impact of his life-long work.

Veach volunteered for Oregon Empowers' second electrification trip to Guatemala. He expected a straightforward job, string some line, place poles and install some in-house wiring, but in this remote village cut off from the modern world, working alongside seventeen other Oregon utility workers, he witnessed something far more meaningful.

While Some Oregon Hospitals Face "Brink" of Closure, Curry General Charts New Course with Technology

BY LORI STODDARD

Four Oregon hospitals are at risk of closing because of Medicaid cuts in the new Federal Budget, but Curry General isn't one of them, according to Curry Health Network's (CHN) General Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Virginia Williams.

"While a reduction in Medicaid payments will require us to do more, with less money, we will need to find ways to be more efficient, especially by leveraging the advancements in technology," said Williams.

Williams said that means going beyond telehealth services and exploring the way Artificial Intelligence (AI) can work in the healthcare space.

"Artificial intelligence is already being used by insurance companies to deny claims," said Williams "and electronic health records are assisting providers to ensure they document more accurately and efficiently. CHN will be adopting AI technology called ambient listening which will dramatically reduce the amount of time a provider spends typing and checking boxes, allowing more time with patients and a better work life balance.

We are also evaluating technology that will allow patients to self-check in, self-schedule and a variety of other patient facing enhancements. Artificial Intelligence will also expedite certain clinical tasks that can only be done by very specialized providers, such as radiology interpretations. Many other advancements are being made in the healthcare sector."

Using AI technology and telehealth could save important dollars for struggling Oregon Hospitals. Oregon Public Broadcasting reports that Oregon hospitals are "on the brink," according to a recent Oregon Hospital Association report with half of them losing money on operations and more than two-thirds say they don't have the resources to keep up with patient care. This data is from 2024.

The anticipated federal cuts to Medicaid make the outlook even worse. Becky Hultberg, the President and CEO of the Hospital Association of Oregon, said that if the trends continue, or worsen, the state will see "a cascade of service closures, hospital consolidations or hospital closures."

Hultberg also said, "Oregon already has the second fewest hospital beds per capita. We can't afford to lose these beds."

And while Curry General Hospital isn't at risk of closing right now, Oregon Senators Ron Wyden and Jeff Merkley, both Democrats, warned even before it was passed, that the Republican bill with its Medicaid cuts could be devastating to Oregon's rural hospitals in communities like Curry County.

"Hospitals are often the backbone of rural communities in Oregon and across the nation. They are often the largest employer in a rural community, and more often than not, many of the families they serve count on Medicaid for health care," said Wyden, Ranking Member of the Senate Finance Committee. "The Republican bill would hit rural Oregon like a wrecking ball and among the first to suffer would be the rural hospitals and those they serve and employ who are already walking on an economic tightrope."

The reality is, rural hospitals like Curry General struggle because they treat more unin-

Ocean Fishing Scholarships Available from the Oregon Marine Reserves

The Oregon department of Fish and Wildlife (ODFW) Marine Reserves program secured a National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Dash Fisheries Grant.

It will fund ocean fishing scholarships to remove potential financial barriers for participation in hook and line surveys in the Cascade Head Marine Reserve near Depoe Bay and the deadline to apply has been extended to August 18th.

The scholarships aim to bring anglers to the reserves who are historically underrepresented in the surveys. Surveys currently rely heavily on male retirees who live on the coast and can pay their travel and lodging expenses for participation. There is also a large contingent of repeat anglers.

Looking to expand the breadth of participation in the program, there are now two Fishing Scholarship, per day, currently planned.

Volunteer anglers join marine reserves staff, on a charter boat, where anglers catch fish in

Pacific Power Foundation Awards Over $300,000 in Grants to Advance Education and STEM Initiatives

E. SCHWARZ For Country Media, Inc.

The Pacific Power Foundation has announced the allocation of more than $300,000 in grant funding to 89 nonprofit and community organizations across California, Oregon, and Washington. These grants are dedicated to expanding access to quality STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) education and strengthening learning opportunities in the communities served by Pacific Power.

The Pacific Power Foundation, operating as the charitable arm of PacifiCorp in the western United States, has a longstanding history of supporting local organizations and initiatives. Since its establishment in 1988, the foundation has awarded over $80 million to nonprofit organizations, underscoring its enduring commitment to community growth and vitality.

Ryan Flynn, director of the Pacific Power Foundation and president of Pacific Power, emphasized the foundation's ongoing mission: "The foundation is delighted to support local organizations that uplift the next generation of STEM professionals. We are truly inspired by the communities' efforts in opening doors for the next generation of innovators, problem-solvers, and leaders."

This most recent round of grant funding, totaling $313,000, is part of one of four annual grant cycles. The foundation's focus on STEM and educational initiatives reflects a recognition of the vital role these fields play in preparing young people for the challenges of the modern workforce.

Among the organizations receiving support are:

Tolowa Needash Society here in Del Norte County. Funding will help build the Xwii-t'ii-dvn (People's House) and a storage unit at Nii--lii--chvn-dvn Ne'sr-dash-dvn (Dance Place).

This project provides the Tolowa

Dee-Ni Nation with an upgraded space for community gatherings and cultural events.

Mt. Shasta Museum Association in Siskiyou County. The grant will enable the museum to offer expanded STEM activities during its Science Saturdays program, encouraging families to engage in science learning together.

The Pacific Power Foundation typically awards grants ranging from $2,000 to $10,000 per recipient, with most grants falling between $2,000 and $5,000.

However, the precise figure for Del Norte County's allocation in this grant cycle has not been disclosed

The foundation's history of charitable giving demonstrates a consistent focus on education, youth engagement, and community enrichment. Over the years, previous grants have supported a diverse array of programs, including:

• After-school STEM clubs in rural school districts, providing resources for hands-on learning and mentorship.

• Scholarship programs for underrepresented students pursuing degrees in science and engineering.

• Community science fairs and robotics competitions, helping foster interest in technology and innovation among young learners.

• Teacher training workshops aimed at equipping educators with the tools to inspire and educate future generations in STEM fields.

These investments have contributed to increased access to educational opportunities, particularly in underserved and rural areas, and have helped build a foundation for long-term community resilience and growth.

The Pacific Power Foundation is one of the largest utility-endowed foundations in the United States. Its mission, through charitable investments, is to support the growth and vitality of the communities served by Rocky Mountain Power and Pacific Power. The foundation operates in six states, serving over two million customers as Rocky Mountain Power in Utah, Wyoming, and Idaho, and as Pacific Power in Oregon, Washington, and California.

By offering four grant cycles each year, the foundation ensures a steady stream of support for organizations addressing a wide range of community needs. The latest round of grants, with a strong emphasis on STEM and education, reflects the foundation's understanding of the transformative power of knowledge and opportunity.

As communities continue to navigate the evolving demands of the 21st century, the Pacific Power Foundation's support of educational and STEM initiatives remains an important resource.

The foundation believes that investing in the next generation of leaders, innovators, and problem-solvers, the fit is helping to lay the groundwork for a more equitable and prosperous future.

Going Where Needed: Brookings Resident Gary Veach helped to Empower people's lives in Guatemala.

For The First Time: Gary Veach connects an electrical light bulb socket to a local home in Aldea El Coco, Guatemala allowing the residents to experience a lighted house for the first time.

Way of Life: A local Guatemalan woman makes tortillas the old-fashioned way.

Line Worker

minated homes, families were filled with amazement. Women who had spent entire days grinding corn by hand suddenly saw possibilities beyond basic survival," Veach said.

What struck him first was the contrast to his own world.

"Most people are on foot. It takes them so long to get anywhere," Veach said. "But what amazed me was how genuinely happy these families were despite having so little by our standards."

Veach expected jungle conditions during the March service trip, but the contrast between his coastal Oregon home and the Guatemalan highlands was jarring. Where Brookings enjoys mild temperatures and ocean breezes, Aldea El Coco baked under relentless sun in desert-like terrain.

The eighteen volunteer line workers had to cope with the heat and unexpected technical challenges. Local utility poles were made of eucalyptus, significantly harder than the treated pine and fir poles common in the Pacific Northwest.

"Eucalyptus is incredibly hard and dense," Veach said. "These poles were like trying to climb concrete posts."

The unfamiliar material slowed progress during the two-week mission, but the team successfully installed thirty utility poles and nearly three miles of power lines throughout the village.

In Aldea El Coco, Veach witnessed a way of life that revolved entirely around basic survival. Without refrigeration, electric stoves or lighting, families' daily routines centered around food preparation over indoor open fires.

"Everything they ate was corn-based," Veach said. "Women would spend hours grinding corn by hand, cooking over fires, managing every aspect of food preparation manually."

Life moved with the sun, and evening activities ceased at dark. The absence of electricity meant no food storage, no time-saving appliances and no activities after sunset.

"You know, I always thought my job was just about keeping the lights on," Veach said. "But seeing what it meant to these families, that's when it hit me. In this industry, we're giving people a chance to do more with their lives."

Despite the language barrier, Veach discovered that small gestures could create meaningful connections. When he noticed a local boy watching the crew work with intense curiosity, he handed him a pocketknife from home.

"His face just lit up," Veach said. "That little pocketknife became his prized possession, and from that moment on, he was right there helping us however he could."

After days of challenging work in brutal heat, the crew finished installing electrical systems in homes throughout Aldea El Coco. As families gathered to witness the lights come on for the first time, Veach felt something he'd never experienced in all his years as a line worker.

"You realize you're not just electrifying the village, you're changing everything about how these people can live," Veach said.

The crew brought supplies for the villagers, while the community offered treats and gratitude in return, creating an exchange that went beyond technical work.

For Veach, watching those villagers flip a light switch was a moment he'll never forget. The transformation wasn't just about infrastructure, it was about opening up entirely new possibilities for how these families could live their lives.

In 2023, 750 million people worldwide lacked access to electricity, according to the International Energy Agency. Oregon's electric cooperatives established Oregon Empowers to address this need through international volunteer missions.

"Veach's involvement represents the best of what rural electric cooperatives stand for," CEC General Manager Brent Bischoff said. "Whether he's restoring power after a coastal storm or bringing electricity to a village for the first time, it's about serving people the energy that powers their lives."

The experience humbled him and deepened his appreciation for the infrastructure Americans take for granted and the resilience of communities that thrive without it.

"Once you've experienced something like this, it changes you," Veach said. "Knowing that your skills can make such a profound difference in people's lives, that's something you want to do again."

Curry General

sured patients than the national average. What's more, rural areas also see a significant number of folks with chronic diseases and multiple or cascading health issues, so they need extra care they might not be able to afford.

That's why, in the past, Uncle Sam offered Curry General and other rural hospitals a lifeline by allowing them to bill the government for cost "plus" for services, giving them a little more money when it comes to government Medicaid reimbursements, but with the new budget cuts, it's not certain how many of those federal dollars are still available and that's why Senators Wyden and Merkley are so concerned.

Senator Jeff Merkley said this isn't a political issue. "As I hold town hall meetings in each of Oregon's thirty-six counties, I frequently hear about struggles folks have in accessing health care in their communities. This isn't a red state or blue state issue. Medicaid helps every state, especially rural communities."

"More than three-hundred rural hospitals will be at risk of shutting down, in Oregon and across the country" said Merkley. "If Republicans betray middle class families and make these drastic cuts to Medicaid, all so that billionaires can pay less in taxes. This is the Republican plan: families lose, and billionaires win."

Even so, Curry Health CEO Williams makes it clear the Curry Health Network is not immediately considering reducing any services.

"In fact," Williams said, "we look forward to bringing Orthopedics and Oncology chemotherapy services to our beautiful coastal county."

You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself.

Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (800) 280-2832 for information regarding the trustee's sale or visit this Internet Web site www.auction.com - for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case: TS#181941. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer" you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call (800) 280-2832 for information regarding the trustee's sale, or visit the internet website www.auction.com or auction.com/sb1079 for information regarding the sale of this property, using the file number assigned to this case TS#181941 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase. Safety City:

Teaching Life-Saving Lessons to Generations of Kids

Finger Printing: Robert Jamison, who is three years old, waits his turn to be finger printed by Sydney Croft Masonic Lodge Members Stephen Lyons (r) and Steven Pomerleau.

Safety City Cart: Still in great shape after twenty years, the cart the kids get to drive provides great fun while learning driving safety.

Safety City Coordinators: Dan Palicki, who will be retiring as head coordinator, will be passing the torch to Ron Mills.

For twenty-seven years, Dan Palicki has been a familiar face in Brookings, tirelessly dedicating his time to Safety City, a unique program focused on equipping local youth with crucial safety skills.

"You name it, we teach it," Palicki said. "The kids learn safety in their environment like, pedestrian safety and hand signals. They also learn the importance of giving pedestrians the right-of-way. By end of the week, they'll have completed the course, then have a graduation ceremony."

From navigating cross-walks to understanding fire safety, Palicki and his team of volunteers ensure that no critical lesson is left untaught. The broad curriculum covers everything from gun and fire safety to water and forest safety to proper school bus etiquette.

"We start the day with the pledge: I'm special, I'm important," Palicki said. "It's important to build confidence in the children."

Palicki emphasized that the backbone of Safety City is its incredible volunteers. Many are high school seniors and with Palicki encouragement, they often recruit others as their replacement when the time comes for them to graduate high school, this ensures the program's continuity.

"A lot of the kids are seniors in high school, so I've been recruiting them to recruit their replacements," said Ron Mills, a volunteer with the program and soon to be head coordinator.

The program's success is deeply rooted in community support. The miniature cars used for teaching traffic safety were acquired through a donation nearly two decades ago, with the only cost being shipping.

"They're in excellent condition," Palicki said. "We're lucky to have such great volunteers that help us take care of everything and run the program."

There was a week full of fun skill building activities that allowed the kids to acquire a broad base of knowledge that each can take with them throughout their lives. Participants also expressed what they learned through drawings, which are displayed at the school.

The week began with the kids getting their ID card photos taken and learned their vital personal information, like their home address and phone number and their parents' first names (not just mom or dad) for emergencies as well as how to dial 911.

"We take the right and left thumbprint so that there's information that can be filled out by the parent on this paper that we give them," said Sydney Croft Masonic Lodge Steven Pomerleau, who is one of the volunteers. "Then they have a record of their child if he turns up missing or something."

The local Masonic Lodge has been with the Safety City program since it began twenty-seven years ago.

"We also give the parents these little ID cards with the information on them and we have a little envelope so the parents can put a lock of hair, you know for DNA samples," said Stephen Lyons, who is also a Sydney Croft Masonic Lodge member. "We love doing this for the kids and the community."

On Tuesday, Coos Curry Electric visited the group and set up a miniature city display to demonstrate the dangers of electricity.

The fire department took center stage on Wednesday and taught the kids important essential fire safety practices.

On Thursday, the focus shifted to car safety, reinforcing the pedestrian lessons learned earlier in the week and on Friday, they practiced a combination of pedestrian and car safety lessons and how to apply practical application to what they learned.

The course completed on Saturday with a graduation ceremony, where parents joined their children to celebrate their achievements.

While the program consistently sees success, Palicki acknowledges challenges, such as the changing demographics of rural areas, which have led to a slight decrease in participation in recent years.

"A lot of people are kind of moving out of the rural areas and that's affected it," Palicki said. "But the program will continue. I'm retiring this year and Ron is taking over."

Safety City operates completely free of charge for participants, thanks to generous sponsors who cover the approximate $60 cost per child for equipment, including the helmets that each child gets to keep.

"We always need volunteers," said Mills. "Honestly, without their help, this program wouldn't be as good as it is. They've been amazing."
