County eyes ‘property registration ordinance’

Brian Williams
Pilot Editor

Curry County Commissioners moved closer to implementing a vacant “property registration ordinance” for out-of-county property owners during Wednesday’s regular meeting, Feb. 5.

According to county staff, some non-owner occupied properties in the county have become eyesores and the ordinance would give officials a tool to clean them up. Commissioner Court Boice said the problem “is growing dramatically and that is what has given us some pretty serious concern here.” Commissioners moved the ordinance forward in the process with a 3-0. The next step is a public hearing on Feb. 19. Property owners would have to pay a fee and register their property if it “is not legally occupied at least six months in a calendar year by the owner of the property, and the owner does not declare a home elsewhere in Curry County as their permanent residence,” according to staff. “Vacant properties, or those where the owner is absent, tend to attract squatters, nuisance and crime,” according to county staff. “As a routine matter, the Sheriff’s Office ends up spending more time at these properties or patrolling the areas, as do the Code Enforcement Officers.” Two people spoke during public comment on the ordinance. Both were not in favor of it, saying it penalized everyone instead of focusing on the small percentage of problem properties.

“We are conflating a problem with just a larger body of things and we are going to be charging people who might live 35 miles out Forest Road 3310 and own a piece of property out there and they are going to be paying because properties up here close by are having

TRANSIENT CAMP CLEANUP

HARBOR HOMELESS CAMP CLEARED OUT

A large and sprawling homeless encampment in Harbor, upriver from the Chetco River bridge where U.S. Highway 101 crosses, is being cleaned up, starting on Feb. 12 by Curry County crews. Tarps and makeshift tents covered hundreds of square feet of county property along the curvature of the bank and sheltered piles of belongings mixed with rubbish, assorted junk and heaps of trash. “We are taking the public complaints seriously, and are trying to take care of the mess,” said Julie Schmelzer, county administrator. “The site was unsafe for the encampment due to highway access (curve), because it is a designated landslide area, and we are concerned about fecal matter and debris entering the Chetco River.” The property was posted on Feb. 10, providing notice of the impending cleanup. Curry County Sheriff deputies arrived first to clear the camp of the sole occupant before crews could begin. At one point, as many as 18 people inhabited the camp. “He was asked to leave the property, he doesn’t own the property, and so he was arrested for trespassing,” said Sheriff Lt. John Ensley. “Unfortunately, it’s gone this far, and now we’ll do what we can to get it cleaned up,” said Sheriff’s Capt. Phil McDonald. “I know the gentleman that created this mess is not happy. We gave him the opportunity to pick up the things he needed to have and go or be arrested. He chose not to do that, so he was arrested. The thing is, this isn’t a guy camping. That’s not what this is. This is a garbage dump that this guy has created. He is homeless by choice, and he’s made this mess by choice. I know there are people who say, ‘Oh, poor homeless guy. Why are they doing this to him?’ But why is he doing this to us?” Curry County Code Enforcement Officer Dave Fortman led a tour for The Pilot before the cleanup began through a winding narrow path inside the various makeshift tent chambers full of stuff piled 3 to 4 feet high. We couldn’t go around the outside of it because it extended right up to the edge of a steep bank, so we had to go through it, ducking in places and stepping over trash to reach the other side. Deep in the bowels of the tent maze was a burn barrel, where the occupants burned trash, including plastics. One of the complaints about the camp was from a nearby cancer patient who has trouble breathing and has especially suffered from the pollutants emanating from the illegal burning. A perilously short distance from the burn barrel was a large propane cylinder

Hooskanaden project awarded to Suulataaq

The Hooskanaden slide repair project on U.S. Highway 101 will be underway in early May, as soon as the ground dries out. The project should be completed by August, says Oregon Department of Transportation spokesperson Dan Latham. The current project was delayed from starting last fall due to a failed bid process. The winning bid in the current round was awarded to Suulataaq out of Suisun City, Calif., for just under $3.7 million. The money for the final repair will come primarily from federal emergency relief funds. The company awarded the bid pronounces its name “soo loo dock,” which means “gold” in Yupik, which is an Athabascan language. “Hooskanaden” means “grave

Seed library will sprout in Brookings

Brian Williams
Pilot Editor

Lynette McPherson is becoming known as the seed lady. She is the driving force behind the first seed library in Brookings. The Chetco Seed Library kicks off at 10 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 22, inside of the Chetco Community Public Library, 405 Alder St., Brookings. People can come by and check seeds out of the library until 11:30 a.m. “The goal is to help residents of Del Norte and Curry counties sow, save and share heirloom, non-GMO, non-hybrid, open-pollinated seeds acclimatized to our region,” McPherson, who is the garden manager for the Brookings-Harbor School District. People can come and take some seed packets, or as many seeds as they think they will use. The seeds are free, but McPherson is hoping to see a return on the investment. “On the back of every packet is a little thing about you agreeing to sow the seeds and return them,” McPherson said. “If we don’t get any seeds back this will be a grand experiment and I will have this awesome cabinet at my house.” Processes for checkout, recording garden conditions, saving, and sharing future seeds are available at the seed cabinet. “Each packet has a list of what they are, where they come from and where to grow them,” said McPherson who grabbed a runner bean packet and began reading some of

‘Gladys in Wonderland’ takes stage in March

“You get up one day, eat a donut, read the paper and some clown in a Good Humor suit says you’re going to die!” exclaims Gladys Overmeyer, the feisty 87-year-old heroine of Brookings Harbor Community Theater’s next production, “Gladys in Wonderland,” now in rehearsal.

The comedy by Rosemary Frisino Toohey, directed by Teri McGregor, is a funny and touching reminder that “Old age ain’t for sissies.”

Between eating cream-filled doughnuts and reading the obituaries, Gladys does not have time for the unexpected visit from the Angel of Death. The Angel of Death must convince Gladys that it is her time to go. He parades in an entertaining cast of obnoxious friends and relatives; not to mention the Meals on Wheels expert and the hilarious visit with the inmates of a nursing home.

Veteran actors Victoria Weller and Mike Vest play

Gladys and Mort, the Angel. Also featured are Therese Betencourt as Gladys’ frustrated daughter, Tommy Jones and Kathleen Teague as her pushy brother and sister-in-law, and Jennifer Buchnoff and Jon Smith as her nifty niece and nephew. Denise Dubois plays her well-meaning best friend and Jessica Vance is an officious Meals on Wheels lady. Janie VanWoerden and Vicky O’Hara are scrappy nursing home inhabitants.

“Senior audience members will certainly be able to relate, middle-aged folks will get a peek into their future, and younger folks will be reminded of their older relatives,” says McGregor.

Mark your calendars to attend and enjoy this comical, entertaining, and even thought-provoking play at the Brookings Harbor Community Theater located at 15542 U.S. Highway 101 in Harbor. The show dates are March 6, 7, 8 and 13, 14, 15. Show times are Friday evenings at 7 p.m. and 2 p.m. matinees on both Saturdays and Sundays.

on its side, creating a fire hazard.

Empty food tins, numerous bicycles, a grocery cart, a wheelchair, discarded clothing and blankets, crates, baskets, potato chip bags, paint cans, dirty dishes and other garbage overflowed the county property, spilling onto the neighboring property below, owned by Dave Jenkins, of YMT WoodWorks.

“I’m not necessarily happy. It was something that had to be done,” Jenkins said. “The human waste and the smell was horrible in the summer, and things like that, with my business right there, customers complained. I had a water problem and my waterline goes through there. I brought in a new waterline because I couldn’t get under that,” he said, gesturing to the tented encampment. “It was a bad issue. I’ve dealt with it a long time, and it’s just grown too much. The trash is one of the things that people who donate (to homeless people) don’t realize. The week after Thanksgiving, they’ll have more garbage because everyone gives them food. They don’t have anywhere to dispose of it. I’ve rented a dumpster three times to clean out under the bridge.”

Jenkins knows the man who was arrested and feels bad for him.

“There’s so many different sides,” he said. “Gary’s lived here in Brookings a long time. He had an apartment and lost his job. So he’s been in the area. There’s history. He’s a resident. The camp was up there, they moved him out and he moved down here. But where’s his waste going? It’s going into the river, and people are catching crab right down there.”

Jenkins is now worried about retaliation. He was contacted by the county to see if the camp was on his property.

“So I’ve been a little involved,” he said.

Fortman explained why it took so long for the county to take action after the subject came up at a county commissioner’s meeting last fall.

“First we had to comply with all the laws and notifications and notices to move people off the property,” Fortman said. “In November, at the meeting, we had to request funding to do this. We’re looking at $15,000-$20,000 right now that we’re spending to get this cleaned up. It’s taking manpower time, all this is going to the dump, the county’s being charged for the dump fee, all of the particular property belonging to the transient that’s of value has to be stored at the county’s expense for 30 days.”

Workers were instructed that all of the bicycles, backpacks and tools were to be set aside, honoring the request of the site’s former occupant.

“The other reason for the delay is we tried to work with the transients,” he said. “We kept offering them services and trying to make alternatives and trying to get them to voluntarily move on. We’re complying with the law, but trying to be compassionate in finding alternatives. It was Christmas time, then budget funding time. I was told by the county commissioners they would find the money to take care of this. I tried to get local groups to provide services, but the residents here decided not to move.”

The man who was arrested had been offered housing vouchers several times, which he declined. Fortman also came by to warn him several times after posting the notice that the cleanup was coming.

“The county has a voucher program through the Homeless Coalition,” he said. “If they are veterans, the Veterans Administration has housing vouchers, clothing and bedding vouchers. Mental health is offered to them. Animal control offers them assistance with their animals.”

The Pilot caught up with a homeless woman, who had been at the camp across the river the day before. Fortman said that she had cleaned up her portion of the site before moving on. She was working on her car, which she is now sleeping in, near the current cleanup site.

Asking to only be known as K.H.O, she said, “Basically, I’ve been homeless for about 6 months, not by choice, no drugs, not anything like that involved. I’m completely clean, but people around me aren’t clean. I was working as a med-tech full-time, married, six kids. Husband decided to cheat and wanted me out in two days.”

She just broke up with a boyfriend who she said beats her all the time, but he was the only person who has been protecting her during this whole time, she said.

“I’ve been trying to get a good job, but no one wants to hire a homeless person,” she said. “I’ve been utterly humiliated. I decided that if I was going to be homeless on the street, I would turn my tent into a home. I had a little garden and a little stone path that I built myself and made it as comfy as possible. When they asked me to move, I cleaned up everything except where the others were literally still sleeping there. Thirty bags of trash is what I cleared of theirs.

“I usually have an upbeat personality, but I’ve had to pan to survive. As of 3 weeks ago, I had to eat food I found in the garbage for the first time because I don’t qualify for food stamps. I don’t qualify for anything else. I do what I gotta do.”

She’s been eating peanut butter sandwiches for the last week and a half. She doesn’t always go to the free meal sites in town when it’s cold or freezing rain. Fortman provided her with information where she could obtain a housing voucher during the Pilot’s interview with her.

When asked about what local government could do to help, she had a suggestion.

“Take one of these parks that they close for the winter and open it up for homeless,” she said. “For even $30 a month, all of them can get that. Instead of having camps everywhere, they would have a place they could go for a moment.”

She blames the freezing cold and lack of space to breathe as creating bad attitudes, causing some panhandlers to become ruder lately.

Another suggestion from K.H.O. was for the city to provide a dumpster at the proposed camp, or even one of the free meal sites where homeless people could dispose of their trash. She picks up trash daily, but the only way to dispose of it is to illegally place it in someone else’s container, she said.

As the cleanup progressed, vehicles passing by honked, people waved and gave thumbs up to crews doing the work. The cleanup was continuing through press time on Feb. 13. Personnel included nine members of the county road crew, two code enforcement officers, a parks employee and multiple sheriffs. The trash filled seven, 10-yard dump trucks. Another two dump trucks are estimated for removal of the brush, to be burned later by the county.

The next phase of the project is what to do with the property.

“We are looking for input from the public on the best use of the public space,” Schmelzer said. A viewing platform, benches to rest and take in the view, a picnic area are some of the ideas neighbors and onlookers suggested.

Ideas for how to use the space can be submitted to Schmelzer at schmelzerj@co.curry.or.us. If citizens want to report homeless encampments, Fortman recommended calling the Sheriff’s Department dispatch at 541-247-3242.

the information on its package. “Runner bean, really pretty pink blossoms, can be eaten fresh, canned or frozen.”

The seed library is stocked full and McPherson plans to keep it that way. She has been attending festivals and gathering seeds.

“I’ve collected all of these seeds. I went to a national heirloom festival in Santa Rosa this last fall. It’s like a mecca for seed for seed people,” she said. “I talked to a lot of seed library people and seed exchange people. That is where I kind of got the idea to do this here.”

Julia Bott, an avid gardener, is helping McPherson with the seed library. They have organized informational gardening classes that will be held monthly at the library.

Toward the end of the growing season, they will instruct people on collecting and returning the seed from their garden to the seed library.

“It’s nice to let things go to seed in your garden, for a variety of reasons,” Bott said. “As people return their seeds grown here they will be climatized a bit more for our area.

“The other nice thing is that you get to hear about other peoples’ challenges and also their successes,” Bott added.

People will reap the rewards of their effort when they get to eat what they have grown, learning a valuable skill in the process.

Much of what is sold in stores are picked green, sprayed an acceptable color and dipped in wax before it lands in a grocery store, McPherson said, adding that it does not taste anything like a home-grown vegetable.

“My job at the school there are three things I like to do with the kids specifically is get them a pea off of the vine, that is fresh, or let them pull a carrot, wash it and eat it, or let them taste a tomato because this is what real food tastes like,” she said.

McPherson has a greenhouse and it allows her family to have a “50-foot meal.”

“You walk 50 feet to the garden, you pick it and you eat it for dinner,” she said.

McPherson and Bott will also be encouraging people to take part in the Plant A Row for the Brookings Harbor Food Bank. Gardeners will be asked to plant an extra row and donate the extra row’s harvest to the food bank.

With the opening less than a week away more than 150 people have indicated they were interested in the seed library after seeing a post about it on Facebook.

“Lynette planted a seed and it took,” said Bott.

For more information, visit the Chetco Seed Library Facebook page or the Chetco Community Public Library website, or contact McPherson at bhhsgarden@gmail.com or 971-319-0290 or Bott at jbott@batnet.com or 650-520-5673.

place” in Tututni, which is also an Athabaskan language. Perhaps common language roots will bode well for the project, although spelling will likely still suffer.

Suulataaq is an Alaska Native Corporation subsidiary and is a Federal Small Disadvantaged Business.

“We operate our company to comply with the values of our more than 3,600 Alaskan native shareholders,” says the company’s website.

“We’re still very early in the process, and the contractor will need several weeks to get organized, submit paperwork, etcetera,” Latham said. “We will likely have a pre-construction meeting a few weeks prior to breaking ground. By then, we should have more information about the staging plans and construction schedule.”

Construction will require lane closures, and flaggers will be used as needed, he said. “We don’t expect any delays to exceed 20 minutes.”

The plan is to restore the highway to three lanes, plus shoulders as it existed before the slide.

Currently, the temporary route resembles an asphalt roller coaster with its two narrow and winding lanes that dip and climb across the chasm created by the giant mudslide nearly a year ago on Feb. 25 that completely closed the highway for nearly two weeks. According to an article in The World, heavy rains dropped the road 30 feet and shoved it 100 feet west.

“Tidewater Contractors went above and beyond the call of duty in responding to the Hooskanaden slide and quickly reopening the highway,” Latham said.

ODOT spent about $1 million for the temporary repair, which closely bypasses the original slide area.

While the highway was closed, the Carpenterville Road, Highway 255, was the winding and narrow detour route between Brookings and Pistol River that added about 25 minutes to the commute and made many drivers anxious.

ODOT looked at alternatives to simply restoring the same highway configuration.

“When it comes to the geology of the southern Oregon coast, I’m reluctant to ever use the word ‘permanent,’” Latham said. “However, last year we looked at three different options that would help keep the highway between Gold Beach and Brookings open every winter:

- 1) improve Carpenterville Highway so it could act as a fully functioning alternate route,
- 2) use a variety of strategies to stabilize the hillside, or
- 3) build a bridge that spans the slide area.

“Our back-of-the-envelope analysis suggested that the cost of these efforts would range from $300 million to nearly $440 million. Securing the funding for any of these options would be a heavy lift.”

ODOT continues to monitor the site daily, checking on cracks and ground movement. Past closures from large events occurred in 1977, 1995 and 2019 — about every 15 to 20 years.

“The cracking we’re currently seeing is consistent with the ground movement that happens most winters,” he said. “We’ll keep patching the road surface as best we can until Suulataaq begins work.”

Ordinance

problems,” said Gold Beach resident David Barnes.

Cathy Bryson, a retired real estate appraiser, agreed with Barnes.

“I think it is a mistake to say that everybody that is a non-Curry County resident that owns a property here is a problem,” she said. “You are taking a really small piece, a really small group of properties and you are just lumping them (together).”

Julie Schmelzer, Curry County Director of County Operations, said the complaints they are receiving are from throughout the county.

“We do have properties that are beyond the urban fringe that have a lot of issues,” Schmelzer said. “Sometimes because it is in a remote area people feel they can do more because they feel no one is watching. But we do get complaints on remote properties as well.”

The fee would help pay for the added strain these problem properties put on county services, staff noted.

“This proposal is not to have county resources used to serve as a private security firm, or notify absentee owners of problems, rather it is to offset the added costs the county incurs when addressing the issues associated with vacant and owner-absentee properties,” the staff report stated.

If approved, the commissioners would then set the fee amount. A $100 fee was initially considered.

“Originally a fee was proposed, but people objected to the fee actually being in the ordinance, and they wanted it removed from the code and discussed later,” Schmelzer said, adding that it would be easier for management if the fee was in their “fee schedule” that gets reviewed every year, instead of embedded in the code.

Schmelzer said this ordinance first came to commissioners in November of 2019 and is in alignment with others that are in place around the state and across the nation.

“We are between a rock and a hard place. People tell us not to raise taxes; get creative; don’t rob the Road Fund,” Schmelzer said. “So, we get creative, don’t charge our residents, try not to take money from the Road Fund, and instead propose a code that will save residents $500,000, and we are still challenged. People don’t like transient camps, abandoned RVs, trash, and squatters, and they demand we address these issues. Our residents deserve a better quality of life; most people do not want to live next to a property no one is taking care of. We find a way to address the concerns, at no cost to them, but they still object.”

The county is looking for out-of-town property owners to maintain their property, keep it clean and secure and lock buildings.

- Premises shall be kept free of weeds, dead vegetation, graffiti, trash, accumulated newspapers or other paper or plastic items, discarded personal items, and any other item or condition that would cause a person to form a reasonable belief the property is vacant.

- Property shall be maintained in a manner that does not pose a safety hazard to the public, including trespassers.
- Buildings shall remain secure and locked. Windows and doors may be boarded if damaged or otherwise permitted by code. Damaged windows and doors shall either be repaired or replaced within 30 days’ notice from the county.

Before the code could take effect, two public hearings are required, followed by a 90-day day wait period.

Bryson also was concerned the ordinance would discourage people from buying or owning property in Curry County.

“I don’t think we want to discourage people from owning property in Curry County,” she said. “Why take away the incentive for people to own property here that are good owners. Like I said you are just lumping everything together. They are not all alike properties.”

DIFFICULTY RATING: ★★★★★★

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

Separate sleeping quarters give loving couple peace

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for 45 years. When she moved out of our bedroom, I was shocked. I thought she didn’t love me anymore. Then I realized that both our sleeping habits have changed over the years.

She snores, and I toss and turn. She needs the room dark, while I like a night light so I can see while I walk to the bathroom. I wasn’t around when my parents got old, so I didn’t realize our sleeping arrangement was going to change. We still love each other, but just sleep in different rooms. Is this normal? -- WONDERING IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR WONDERING: The reason for the change is what’s important. In your case, it’s not because of discord or lack of love. While I would have suggested your wife try various kinds of sleep masks to block out your night light, your new arrangement is not an indication that there is trouble in your relationship. Many couples do this. So stop worrying about whether this is normal and be glad you have a solution that works.

DEAR ABBY: My brother and sister-in-law own a golden retriever. “Cookie” is their baby. The problem is, I live in a place where I can’t have pets, plus I don’t have a car. I’m disabled, so it’s harder for me to get around.

I would love for my brother and sister-in-law to visit me for a couple of days. We live 2 1/2 hours apart. Well, my brother won’t come and stay with me at all. He does visit, but only for about an hour or so because they refuse to put Cookie in a kennel.

What should I say to him without causing him to get mad at me? I feel he’s putting that dog first, before his own sister. I miss seeing him and his wife. -- DOGGONE IT IN MICHIGAN

DEAR DOGGONE IT: Your brother and sister-in-law’s goldie is also a member of their family. Demanding they put Cookie in a kennel is tantamount to telling them they must put their child in foster care for the duration of their visit with you.

If your brother is willing to drive 2 1/2 hours (each way) to visit with you for a few hours, he IS showing his love for you. Can you suggest he arrange for a neighbor to look after

One of her favorite memories was greeting veterans at the local airport as they returned from service in the Gulf War. She enjoyed reading books to students with Jerry through the SMART Readers program and sponsoring children at Washington School. A past board member of Medford Providence Hospital, she was also involved with the Providence Festival of Trees, RV symphony Guild, Republican Women, Westminster Presbyterian Church, Medford Chamber of Commerce, Medford Rogue Rotary, Medford Alba Sister City Association, Pear Blossom Festival, Medford Jazz Jubilee, Children's Advocacy, a member of PEO and Junior League. She also took an active role working in the family business, Kogap. She loved music, playing the piano, reading, and playing Shuffleboard, Chinese Checkers and Dice. Always competitive and usually the victor. She enjoyed the Oregon coast and their cabin at Rocky Point. After Jerry's cancer diagnosis and the many years of illness and disability that followed, Donnis devoted herself to his care, with admirable strength, optimism, faith and love. A memorial service will be held on Friday, February 21 at 1 pm. Westminster Presbyterian Church, 2000 Oakwood Drive, Medford. A very special thank you to all of Donnis' loving and kind caregivers. Lisa, Michelle, Kelly and Beverly; all the wonderful staff of RV Manor Memory Support Center, and to Nancy and the Providence Hospice group. Your TLC made such a difference in her life, your support is so appreciated. Donations may be made in memory of Donnis to the Alzheimer's Foundation of America. Arrangements will be handled by Perl funeral home 541-772-5488 www.perlfuneralhome.com

The street address and other common designation, if any, of the real property described above is purported to be: 234 FREEMAN STREET CRESCENT CITY, CA 95531-1658 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address and other common designation, if any, shown herein. The undersigned or its predecessor caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (800) 280-2832 or visit this Internet Web site WWW.AUCTION.COM, using the file number assigned to this case 087072-CA. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. FOR SALES INFORMATION: (800) 280-2832 CLEAR RECON CORP 4375 Jutland Drive San Diego, California 92117

With the 2020 Census scheduled to hit mailboxes in just 1 month, in mid-March, the Del Norte Association of Realtors*, together with the National Association of Realtors*, are encouraging all of our members and their clients to complete all forms quickly and accurately. While the primary purpose of the U.S. Census is to ensure that all states and communities are properly represented in Congress, the once-a-decade exercise also directs $1.5 trillion in federal funds that support critical public policy programs in communities across the country. What matters to you? Schools? Transportation? Hospitals? Data from the U.S. Census Bureau help inform planning efforts for all these important community resources. In fact, U.S. Census results alone drive the allocation of $93.5 Billion to Federal Direct Student Loans; $19.3 Billion to Section 8 Housing Choice Vouchers; and $12 Billion to the National School Lunch Program. So, if you're marketing your town as a great place to live with plenty of reliable services and amenities, the upcoming 2020 census should matter to you. And because the Census Bureau will for the first time ever be accepting responses online in 2020 - it is important to note that it's against the law for any employee to disclose or publish any census information that identifies an individual. Bureau employees take a lifelong pledge of confidentiality to handle data responsibly and keep respondents' information private. The Del Norte Association of Realtors* and National Association of Realtors* want to be sure that our members - along with their friends, clients and neighbors - complete the Census form accurately and as soon as possible after receiving. This process is quick & secure - and responding takes less time than finishing your morning coffee. Realtors* throughout Del Norte County; California and across the nation are a force 1.4 million strong - and we have a tremendous ability to make a difference in getting the word out to their customers. Our participation will help secure public services and funding for schools, hospitals, and fire departments while catalyzing infrastructure improvements that will support new homes and businesses. In the end, responding to the 2020 Census is our civic duty - impacting public resource funding, determining how we plan for the future and securing our voice in government. As community leaders, Realtors* can help drive the cause. For more information about the upcoming census, visit www.2020census.gov.
