INTRODUCTION

With its lofty trees, the tallest on the planet, rugged coastline and crystalline rivers, it's easy to get lost in the beauty of the Wild Rivers Coast and northern California.

Under the eaves of a redwood forest or in a kayak on one of the many streams in the area, visitors come to the area every year to experience what it has to offer.

But for those who aren't sure what to expect when they get here, the Go Wild Rivers Coast recreation guide can be a compass to local attractions, hidden gems as well as amenities like lodging and dining.

In using this guide, where should you begin? While the table of contents is the most logical place, here are some other useful sections in this guidebook to orient yourself and plan your travels.

Perhaps you already have a short list of things you'd like to see and do: the table of contents will guide you to specific articles with more information about topics such as beaches, camping, the redwoods, roadside attractions, golf courses, casinos and more.

Crescent City & Del Norte County Chamber of Commerce located at 1001 Front St., Crescent City, CA

Welcome to the Wild Rivers Coast.

The hidden-away home of some of the most beautiful natural settings in the world.

Visitor centers throughout the region can be helpful for tourists looking for the area's attractions or needing a place to stay, and for local residents eager to take a hike and learn alongside a naturalist.

The dual purposes are appropriate, according to Debbie Savage.

"I just encourage people to explore what's in your own backyard that people travel from around the world to see," said Savage, acting chief of interpretation for Redwood National and State Parks.

GO LANGLOIS

Situated between Port Orford and Bandon

On the beautiful Oregon Coast Highway, Langlois (pronounced “Langless” by the locals) fits the bill of laid back fun.

Known as the “Wild Rivers Coast Windsurfing Capitol,” people flock to nearby Boice-Cope County Park, a small county park on Floras Lake featuring water sports and a campground.

THE LANGLOIS MARKET

Centrally located at 48444 Highway 101, this full service market is the meeting place for tourists, farmers and ranchers who need to stock up. Make sure to stop in to enjoy the market’s famous, delicious hot dogs and “top secret” mustard! Hours are: Monday-Saturday 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., Sundays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 541-348-2476.

U-PICK BLUEBERRIES

This fantastic “U-Pick” location is a blueberry lovers dream come true!

The family-owned farm, located at 46760

Highway 101 (mile marker 291), practices organic farming methods since the 1950s. For the past 10 years, the Jensens have gone nearly exclusively U-pick, allowing customers to come out and fill a four-pound bucket with as many blueberries as possible for $10.

Call the Jensens about picking season dates, admission, hours of operation at 541-348-2473, or e-mail them at jensenblueberrieslanglois@gmail.com.

----- Floras Lake Getaway -----

If you are having any yearnings to “get away from it all,” you might think of the southern coast of France or Tuscany, Italy. To your delight the southern coast of Oregon in Langlois (US101) will yield those same feelings and emotional excitement and release-Floras Lake Getaway.

A picturesque lake house separated from the ocean by the secretive sand beach spiritually forbids and dispels thoughts of COVID-19, Kiev, egg prices, cancel culture, and fuel costs, and even going to the dentist. Cancel your appointment with the psychologist for anxiety depression, adjustment disorder, now order up and treat yourself and loved ones for a few days at Floras Lake Getaway.

This retreat reminds me of more tranquil times. In the mist of the lake’s morning, I thought I saw Henry Fonda On Golden Pond enjoying himself trailing a light weight fishing line from the stern of a small wooden boat. Yes, paddle boards and kayak are allowed. Swimming is possible and fishing is seasonally amazing. Someone well documented the story of the Coho salmon for the local river and streams. Look at their Instagram or go to floraslakerental.com for images. High vaulted ceilings of the main rooms overlook the lake and boat dock. With a 5000 sq ft main house with 6 bedrooms, your group can find repose or congeniality. It is the geographic setting that complements the home's allure. Just a 20-minute walk is the ocean to view and feel the breeze off famous cliffs. I do not know which is more spectacular the morning sunrise or evening sunset.

A return to the main house can set the day with eggs benedict before exploring the region. Christiane has her personal guidebook for each guest. Again, try paddle boarding or kayak from the dock.

Then off to Floras Lake Kite and Windsurfing. Calmer than Hood River on the Columbia – more for beginners and intermediate brave souls, the boys offer instruction too. Years ago, I stayed at the dorms of White Salmon (Hood River) and watched folks from around the world give command performances.

I was only a spectator. This lake could be your level. Maybe go to the ocean. The barrier beach and portions of Floras Creek flow north to create an ecosystem for Coho fry and migrating birds. Floras Lake State Natural Area includes Blacklock Point with trails through dense coastal forest. Kalmiopsis Audubon Society has protected the area from development and logging. Bring your cameras.

Back to main highway (US 101), I cannot recommend the Market's world-famous hot dogs, but otherwise a great country store. Going north for other regional excitement play one of the six courses of world-famous Bandon Dunes or more reasonably priced Bandon Crossing—also an excellent course. At the entrance to the Crossing is a jam shop that will be a morning's reminder from your trip. South is Port Orford and the active fishing fleet of 30 trawlers that must be hoisted daily to the high pier. Also remarkable is The Red Fish with Chris's rather exotic gourmet offerings. Next door is a modern gallery (the other in Big Sur) with contemporary ceramics, sculptures, and oils.

All said and done either staying around the house, exploring the fantastic and memorable regional offerings, preparing unforgettable meals both inside and from an outside BBQ, sip Oregon wine and create those memorable moments with a serene evening along the southern Oregon Coast at Floras Lake Getaway. GO PORT ORFORD

You could easily spend a day or two in the quaint communities of Port Orford and nearby Langlois during your trip along the Wild Rivers Coast.

Nestled along Highway 101 about an hour north of the California border, Port Orford and Langlois offer a wealth of experiences for the outdoorsman, artisan, traveler and treasure-seeker.

Port of Port Orford

Picture a port without a harbor. The Port of Port Orford is one of only six "dolly docks" in the world, where vessels are lifted out of the water by two enormous cranes and then housed on custom made dollies. You would be hard pressed to find another place on earth where you can get such an up-close look at a fleet of fishing boats currently in use. Check out the boats in drydock, then stop in to Grif's on the Dock, the local dock museum, gift shop and eatery. Directions: If you are coming from the south follow Highway 101 north, turn left on Washington Street and follow it down to the dock.

Redfish Restaurant

Diners can view historic Battle Rock and coastline from this renowned oceanfront gourmet restaurant on Highway 101. The restaurant has won national acclaim from Tripadvisor and Wine Spectator and serves up vegetarian, seafood, meat and poultry dishes. When ever possible Redfish buys local produce and fresh fish directly from Port Orford. Visit their extensive wine gallery and check out Hawthorne Museum of contemporary art next door! Reservations are recommended. Call 541-366-2200

Battle Rock Park

Step into history at Battle Rock Park, home of the historic Battle Rock, where Captain William Tichenor and his men used the prominent sea stack to stave off waves of native combatants to eventually settle Port Orford. Directions: Approaching from the south on Highway 101, it's on your left as soon as you get into town.

Battle Rock Wayside Park stuns the senses

By DAVID RUPKALVIS

If you say the name Battle Rock Wayside Park, I would expect few people would know exactly where it is. But if you have ever driven south on Highway 101 to Gold Beach, I promise you have seen it.

When you make that drive from Coos County, almost the entire trip is through the forest. As you move through Port Orford, near the end of town, you make a left on Highway 101. And then to your right, the Pacific Ocean emerges. No matter how many times you have made the trip, the view is breathtaking. That is Battle Rock Wayside Park.

Here's my advice. Stop and spend some time at the park. First, the city of Port Orford, which has the Battle Rock as a city park, does an excellent job maintaining and telling the story of Battle Rock Park. The city has placed extensive signage in the area telling the story of the park, the beach and the animals that live in the area.

There is plenty of parking, clean bathrooms and paved trails to and from the beach. In the spring, the trail down to the beach is surrounded by flowers, adding to the surprise. But the real treat is down on the sand near the water.

A sign I saw leading down to the sand talked about the sea life in the area, listing no less than 26 different kinds of sea life that can be seen in the area. I didn't see them all, but it would be almost a treasure hunt to search for the species one by one.

The different animals, birds and grasses can be seen at different times and locations depending on the tides. They range from surf grass and sea cabbage to anemone, urchins and sea cucumbers. The 26 on the list doesn't even include the birds that are flying in the area.

If you visit the park, go to both sides of Battle Rock. When you walk down to the beach, you will likely be on the left of the rock. On that side, there are miles of beaches in front of you and water as far as you can see.

But on the other side it feels almost like a private beach. Battle Rock serves as a protector, slowing the waves and the water. A small cove has been created, which offers a quiet place to sit or even play in the water.

Every time I visit the rocky beaches, I am surprised by the smooth rocks and pebbles on the beach. As rocks bounce around the ocean, moving the sand and salt, it smooths them almost to a polish. It reminds me of the rocks I used to purchase to put in fish tanks.

Getting to Battle Creek Wayside Park is easy. From Coos County, head south on Highway 101 and drive for about an hour. When you see the Pacific Ocean, you have arrived. From most of Curry County or Northern California, head north on Highway 101. As soon as you hit Port Orford and go down the hill, it will be on your left.

GO SHORE ACRES

By DAVID RUPKALVIS The World

I heard about Shore Acres almost immediately after I arrived in the area, but I intentionally avoided it because I wanted my wife and children to experience it with me the first time.

So, we made our way through Charleston and went to Shore Acres as a group. During the cooler months, it is not overly crowded, so there was plenty of parking and plenty of space to avoid others.

After getting out of the car, you immediately see the Pacific Ocean pounding against rocks. During whaling season, you can also apparently catch glimpses of the whales as you walk by.

As we walked through the trail, we followed my youngest son, who often takes the trail less traveled. Every one of his trails ended with another view of the ocean, with waves pounding into the rocks below.

When we reached the botanical gardens, Shore Acres is most known for, we eagerly went inside. Early March is not the best time to visit the gardens, but it was still amazingly beautiful. Many of the flowers, and the rose garden, will be in full bloom in May, but even in early March there was a lot to see. A variety of trees, complete with signs explaining what they are, stand proudly in the garden. Even in March, some of the flowers were starting to bloom. A group of deer grazed just outside, adding more mystery to the air.

For me, the highlight of the gardens was simply the peace. It was quiet, with only the occasional bird chirping to break the silence. After walking through the gardens, we continued down the trail only to find what on that day was our own little private beach. Simpson Beach is just a short walk from the gardens, but it opens a new world to explorers, especially little explorers.

We hit the beach at low tide, which I highly recommend. With the water out, we got to climb around rocks and find a variety of tide pools to explore. Inside the tide pools, my children found living sea anemones that moved around as the water moved nearby.

There were sea snails and hermit crabs on the edges of the pools and small fish left behind waiting for the ocean to return. A whole area was covered in mussels, which we did our best to avoid as we explored.

My wife and son even ventured up to a cave, looking inside a little, although slippery rocks and the darkness inside drove them away before going in much.

In a brisk March morning, it was chilly with a steady breeze, but we had a hard time leaving. After about three hours, we made our way back out of Shore Acres fully content.

While many areas around are free, there is a $5 per car charge to visit Shore Acres. Believe me, it's money well spent.

Talking to those who work there, it sounds like the best time to visit it probably late May through the summer as the flowers are in full bloom. But even in the winter, it was well worth the visit. If you can, shoot for low tide. It's worth it.

To reach Shore Acres from Coos Bay, follow the signs for state parks and beaches through Charleston. Follow Cape Arago Highway past Sunset Beach and the park will be on your right.

GO PREHISTORIC

Story by Linda Pinkham

Dinosaurs lurk in an old-growth rain forest with 350-year-old trees, lush ferns and foliage plants.

Kids, trailed by parents taking photos, excitedly follow a hand-drawn map from 40 years ago through the park that contains 23 life-size, prehistoric reptiles tucked amidst and sometimes towering above the abundant growth of native plants.

Both plants and dinosaurs have a long history at this place located halfway between Gold Beach and Port Orford on U.S. Highway 101.

Prehistoric Gardens, after 65 years in business, is still a famous roadside attraction that is now owned and managed by Kiki McGrath. The site is a labor of love of McGrath's family since opening in 1955. Her grandfather, Ernie Nelson, at the age of 47, and his wife Kari sold his accounting business and their Eugene home in the early 1950s to purchase the original 77 acres, according to the documentary "Strange Inheritance: Dino Park."

Nelson dreamed of creating a roadside attraction filled with dinosaurs.

"When you have an absolute passion for something, you think other people feel the same way you do," said his daughter Bennie Worthington in the documentary.

The gamble paid off as the U.S. highway system was developed, travel by auto became popular, and roadside attractions were prolific and popular. McGrath says during the summer season, visitors still number 200 a day.

The life-size dinosaurs are constructed with steel frames with metal lathe that is molded over the frame, then they are plastered with cement and painted. The first sculpture Nelson made, and the largest, is a Brachiosaurus that is 46 feet tall and 86 feet long. It took him 4 years to build it and required constructing a scaffold to do the work. "The Brachiosaurus was his pride and joy," said McGrath, pointing to a framed photo of him standing beneath the creature between its front legs.

An interpretive sign informs guests that the largest dinosaur's live weight was estimated to be 85 tons, and he was a plant-eater from the Cretaceous period — about 125 million years ago.

The park signage provides fun facts about each of the sculptures, as well as all the indigenous plants. A spring-fed creek meanders through the grounds, with an accessible path that winds past each vignette.

Nelson engineered the sculptures based on his drawings of skeletal remains and fossils found and placed in natural history museums.

“He always drew,” Worthington said in the documentary. “He came out of the womb with a pen.”

Over 30 years, Nelson constructed 23 dinosaurs.

While the sculptures are scientifically correct, the paint colors were designed to be fanciful, attractive and photogenic as a tourist attraction.

“People would ask him ‘How did you know what colors they were?’ and he said, ‘Well no one knows. It’s the artist behind the paintbrush.’ Birds are very colorful, lizards are very colorful, but we don’t know,” McGrath said.

With an average rainfall of between 6 and 10 feet per year, ferns grow to gigantic size and even the common skunk cabbage develops huge tropical leaves. Known as a temperate zone rainforest, this primeval garden developed because of its location; nestled in a valley pocket and therefore protected from the fierce winter storms that sweep the Pacific.

The landscaping requires a lot of upkeep.

“You don’t have to water anything but we do have to cut things back when it starts growing,” she said. “Some of the skunk cabbage leaves get to be about 7 feet tall.”

The dinosaurs also have upkeep. During a wind storm over the winter, one of the giant trees fell in the park on two of the sculptures. They are in the process of being repaired.

A small gift shop on the property has souvenirs for dinosaur lovers of all ages, from plush toys and coloring books for kids to fossils, agates, apparel and more for “kids” of all ages.

Over the years, family members have helped operate the park. McGrath’s mother worked in the gift shop for a long time, and her uncle helped with building some of the park’s features. McGrath has worked at the park for 40 years.

“It’s a lot of work,” she said. Her grandparents have been gone for 21 years.

According to “Strange Inheritance,” Nelson passed away in 1999 at the age of 91. His wife Kari died soon afterward. The property was left to McGrath, her mother and her uncle. The property was listed for sale, but Kiki decided she didn’t want to sell the park. The acreage was split up, with 33 acres containing the park going to Kiki. The other 44 acres sold for $1.6 million.

“I’d like to keep the legacy going,” McGrath said. She is confident that her daughter and son would keep it going after she retires.

The park is open daily in winter (except during extreme weather) from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and until 6 p.m. in summer. To learn more, visit www.prehistoricgardens.com.

Marine mammals always a delight

By DAVID RUPKALVIS

The World

Exploring the southern coast of Oregon and the northern coast of California allows those of us lucky enough to live here the opportunity to see some amazing things.

We are fortunate to live in one of the most amazing places in the world, a place where Mother Nature makes every day look like a work of art.

As my family and I drive around, it is still common to hear us oohing and awing just because of the scenery. Where else in the world can you see deep into the forest and be on the beach only minutes later?

While I have written repeatedly about the amazing things we can see here, one thing I've seen a few times has left me in awe. As I've traveled the area, I feel fortunate that I've been able to see some amazing marine mammals. Seals, sea lions and more always make me stop every time I see one.

Days after I moved to Oregon, I made a trip to Brookings and Crescent City, California with my boss. While showing me around Crescent City, we stopped at the harbor, and I heard the distinct sounds of sea lions. But despite looking for 10 minutes, I never saw one.

That just made me determined to get closer to the marine mammals. After talking to some people at my office, I was told to the top of Cape Arago and look around. So, of course, I did. At the very top, if you park and go to the right, following the trails as far they go, the trail ends overlooking some rocks in the ocean.

The day I went up, the rocks were covered with seals and sea lions. I admit, I jumped the fence to get a closer look, and it was pretty amazing. While many of the animals were sunning on the rocks, there were many jumping in and out of the water. I stood there for 20 minutes, just watching and listening to the animals living their lives.

But even then, the creatures were a long way off. I could see them, I could hear them, but I didn't get a close-up experience.

A few weeks later, I was back in Crescent City, so I went back to the harbor and back on the hunt for the marine mammals. This time, I found them. At the edge of the harbor, the animals, mostly California sea lions, congregate on man-made rocks to sun. They could be seen clearly, but they were still a ways off.

Since then, every time I go to Crescent City, I head back to the harbor, just in case.

Persistence paid off two times. Once I went to the harbor and got out and started walking around. As I moved around the harbor, I noticed something was in the water, and it was something big.

Before long, I learned what it was. Seals were swimming through the water around the boats in a hunt for fish in the harbor. For close to an hour, I walked around watching as the seals, lots of seals, went up and down in the water. The only bad part is actually getting a good picture of the seals was difficult.

I tried repeatedly, but it felt like every time I hit the button to snap a photo, the seals went down into the water. I tried to guess where they might come up and failed every time there, too.

I was able to get some photos from the top of the harbor, but if the seals noticed I or anyone else, was close by, they quickly disappeared into the depths.

I found out later, schools of fish swim into the harbor as a way of evading larger fish that are hunting. In doing so, they swam right into a trap, with the seals waiting to eat.

It was quite an experience to be that close as seals gorged themselves.

A little while later, I was back in Crescent City and I went back to where I first noticed the sea lions. This time I was in for quite the surprise. Whereas the sea lions had been out in the water before, this time they were sunning on a pier right on shore.

I was able to get so close to the animals, I could even smell them. For the record, it is not a pleasant smell.

But from that distance, I and others stood in awe watching creatures bigger than I am moving easily in and out of the water and scrambling quickly onto the pier. I enjoyed every minute of it, and send dozens of photos to my wife.

I can't give you a specific spot to find marine mammals for certainty, but they are out there. Crescent City seems to have a steady dose, they can be seen and heard around Coos Bay, one time we even saw a bunch of seals sunning in Gold Beach.

If you want to see marine mammals for yourself, just keep your eyes peeled when moving around the ocean. One time I saw a whole herd sunning on the beach between Gold Beach and Port Orford. I would suggest listening, too. You often hear them before you can see them. If you're lucky, you might even get close enough to smell them.

We all know there are animals in the ocean that are bigger than we are. But seeing one is rare, with the exception of the sea lions that seem to enjoy showing off in close proximity.

Turning trash into treasure to teach a lesson

By DAVID RUPKALVIS
For The World

A Bandon art gallery with a mission far greater than just art is growing and expanding in its mission to keep trash out of the ocean. Washed Ashore, with a gallery at 325 2nd Street SE in downtown Bandon has artwork displayed in Bandon, Coos Bay and, frankly, throughout the nation.

Washed Ashore opened in 2010 when Angela Haseltine Pozzi came up with an idea to make art out of trash that washes up on beaches in the area. Pozzi, who also serves as artistic director, joined with artist Steve Wright to create masterpieces that are made almost fully out of trash.

Washed Ashore collects trash that has been removed from beaches through volunteer cleanup efforts as well as trash collected by park rangers. The items are then cleaned and used to make massive sculptures.

"We will definitely pick up whatever they find and turn it into some awesome sea creatures," said former gallery Manager Cameron McGrew said. And by doing so, Washed Ashore hopes to spread a bigger message about keeping trash out of the ocean.

"We're an education-based nonprofit," McGrew said. "Our goal is to educate the public. We've actually done viewings in Canada. We've been all over the United States." Washed Ashore also has pieces in the Smithsonian, Florida Aquarium and different aquariums and zoos across Oregon.

But the home base is and has always been in Bandon. It is there where Pozzi and Wright come up with their ideas and it is there where volunteers help put together the sculptures piece by piece.

After more than a decade of cleaning beaches and creating stunning art from what was collected in Bandon, Washed Ashore added a second operation in Coos Bay.

The nonprofit that uses art to spread the message of keeping plastic and other trash out of the ocean will always call Bandon home, but Washed Ashore will now create its sculptures at a warehouse it recently moved into in Coos Bay.

"We needed a place to refurbish," Executive Director Katie Dougherty said. "The plastic breaks down, so when they come back, we need the space. It's really the launching pad, whether it is a new build or whether it's going to be refurbished and sent on the way."

The end result is larger than life sculptures, all showcasing sea creatures and all made from trash. "We're cleaning the beaches, we're educating the public and trying to engage the community," McGrew said.

While most of the sculptures are made of plastic, some include Styrofoam, nets from fishing boats and more. The biggest problem, though, remains plastic. The issue is plastic never fully degrades, so it can remain in the ocean for years and years. And during that time, it can cause havoc on animals that live and rely on the sea. Washed Ashore is trying to spread the message that most plastic use is not necessary. At the gallery, they offer water in biodegradable milk cartons.

"Plastic is necessary to an extent," McGrew said. "But the single-use plastic is what we're trying to avoid, things like single-use soda bottles, plastic wrapping around food that you'll just take off and throw away."

Wright has been working with Washed Ashore as an artist for four years. He said turning trash into art is a challenge, even for an experience artists like him. He said being in the Coos Bay warehouse was a big step, giving the artists room to store the plastic that was cleaned up and room to create larger sculptures. He also praised the volunteers that help with every piece.

"I can't say how much everyone helps," he said. "All the volunteers are so important to help make this. This is my new home. It's hard to get away from here actually."

Wright said the day Washed Ashore moved in, work on sculptures continued. A tiger rockfish sculpture recently unveiled in Bandon was the first created in the new space. He said when one sculpture is finished, work immediately begins on another one.

"We usually move right into another one," he said. "I already know of two coming up. We're doing a coral reef next for our own exhibit." Wright pointed around the warehouse that was filled with totes of different plastics - bottles, fishing gear, toys and much more. "Everything you see is off our beaches or the ocean," he said.

Brad Parks, the conservation and education director for Washed Ashore, said having a location in Coos Bay is already paying off. "The connection to the community and the businesses that have already welcomed us is amazing," Parks said.

"Even with what Washed Ashore has already done, we have a bigger job in front of us."

He said the COVID-19 pandemic has led to a new wave of trash in the ocean - masks, gloves and medical waste. "Even more than ever, Washed Ashore is in the position where we have so much to do," Parks said.

To make the point, McGrew likes showing a sculpture in the museum. Made largely of plastic water bottles, the majority of the bottles came from the Olympic games in Beijing, China. They washed ashore near Bandon several years later.

"Everything you buy is a vote," McGrew said. "So, if you choose to buy boxed water, for example, you're voting with your wallet every time you make a purchase. If we were to all just stop buying plastic soda bottles, they would get the message." Instead, McGrew said, buy aluminum, glass and paper products that can be easily recycled.

When visitors come to Washed Ashore, McGrew or other docents will start conversations with visitors to showcase the importance of voting with their wallets. And, once again, Washed Ashore is opening and spreading that message. As a nonprofit, the gallery relies on donations, volunteers and grants. It is also now making decent money loaning its finished products to museums and other places around the country.

Inside the gallery is still the best place to get a look at the work. There are over 85 sculptures in the gallery, with the largest probably a parrot fish that is 9-1/2 feet tall, 14 feet long and six feet wide.

The Washed Ashore Gallery will be open from noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Experience the very definition of the Wild Rivers Coast on jet boat tours of the Rogue and Klamath rivers.

Jerry's Rogue Jets & Rogue River Mail Boats

Embark on a Gold Beach-based jet boat tour on the mighty Rogue River — one of the original eight Wild Rivers designated in 1968 for federal protection — with Jerry's Rogue Jets and Mail Boats.

In the 1940s and '50s, the original Rogue River boat tours traveled only 32 miles upriver to the town of Agness. A lunch break at one of the Agness lodges was routine; then the boat traveled downstream back to Gold Beach. In the mid-1960s the advent of Hydro-Jets enabled boatmen to test their nerves in the 20-mile wild section, which is filled with boiling white water rapids.

Jerry's Rogue Jets has been in operation since 1958 and Rogue Mail Boats has been in operation since the 1930s. The two companies joined forces in 2010 and now offer three river tours: the original 64-mile scenic tour to Agness and the more action-filled 80- and 104-mile white-water tours. The 104-mile trip takes the river traveler to the rugged, boulder-filled Blossom Bar rapid, the end of the power-boat-navigable portion of the river.

All excursions return to the small hamlet of Agness for the daily lunch and dinner stop and rest breaks. Three lodges — Cougar Lane, Singing Springs and Lucas Lodge offer a variety of meal service options.

The Rogue River canyon abounds in a variety of native wildlife. All river tours are hosted and narrated by veteran river pilots who spot wildlife and will maneuver the boat for prime photo opportunities. Hydro-Jet technology allows the fully loaded vessels to skim the shallow riffles effortlessly.

Jerry's Rogue Jets and Mail Boats operate between May 1 and Oct. 14 and their office and 60,000-square-foot asphalt customer parking lot is located along Highway 101 at the north end of Gold Beach at 29985 Harbor Way at the Port of Gold Beach. Also featured on their property is a free Rogue River museum, open year-round, which captures the rich history of the Rogue canyon.

For information, call (800) 451-3645 or visit <http://www.roguejets.com>.

Klamath Jet Boat Tours

During the 45-mile, two-hour round-trip excursion along the Klamath River, an experienced captain and narrator describes the river's rich history, local Native American culture, and thriving wildlife. See if you can spot a bear, blacktail deer, elk, soaring osprey, eagles, hawks, otters, mink and many other varieties of wildlife by looking carefully along the riverbanks.

From May 1 to Sept. 30, tours run daily from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m., 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are $47 for adults, $42 for seniors and military, $37 for teens, $27 for children 4 to 11, children under 4 years old are free. Registration is available by phone at (800) 887-JETS or www.jetboattours.com. It also offers shuttles upriver to the Rivers West Lodge.

The journey begins at the Klamath estuary called "Rekwoi," the Indian name for where the fresh water meets the Pacific Ocean.

Gold Beach was named for the sparkling nuggets that were found on the beaches here in the mid-1800s after the mighty Rogue River left the gold as souvenirs. The rush was on!

Today this beautiful seaside town boasts more sandy beaches than any place else in the state of Oregon and is a must see destination point for fishing, hiking, biking, and camping.

Isaac Lee Patterson Bridge walk

Park at the Port of Gold Beach near the historic Mary D. Hume shipwreck and follow the paved path that skirts the edge of the Rogue River and offers breathtaking views of the river and the bay, and a unique perspective of the majestic Patterson Memorial Bridge, built in 1932.

Visitors will spy mud swallow nests on the underneath side of the bridge and catch a glimpse of sea lions basking in the sun, gulls diving for dinner, and proud fishermen holding up their catch of giant salmon.

Agness

Motorists can take a right on Jerry's Flat Road at the Isaac Lee Patterson Bridge and head 35 wandering miles up river to the small rural town of Agness located near the confluence of two Wild and Scenic rivers—the Lower Rogue and the Illinois.

Stop by the historic Cougar Lane Lodge and Store where tasty barbecue and blackberry cobbler await visitors.

Take several trails down to the Rogue River for a swim or to watch kayakers and jetboats zoom by. The Agness-Illahe Museum, 34470 Agness-Illahe Road, open from May through September, offers petroglyphs and Native American artifacts, and information and displays about the history of the Civilian Conservation Corps, fishing, mining and settlement. Call: 541-247-2014.

Buffington Memorial Park

Play hide-and-seek and enjoy a barbecue. The popular park at 94255 Caughell St. is a perfect place to escape the chilly breeze and enjoy amenities such as covered and open picnic facilities, tennis courts, walking paths and a "Kid Castle" play structure.

Captains will provide a fully narrated river trip with plenty of stops to photograph spectacular vistas and wildlife. Bears are often seen feeding along the banks of the river on berries, fish and grubs. Ospreys return in April to their nesting area of the Klamath River from as far south as Brazil.

Klamath mornings and evenings are typically cool or overcast near the coast, so dress warmly in layers. As you travel upriver, be prepared to shed some clothing as the day heats up; hats and sunglasses are recommended.

Blue Creek Guide Service

Blue Creek Guide Service does cultural jet boat tours in addition to fly fishing for salmon and steelhead on the Klamath River. Pergish Carlson will take people about 25 miles upriver to Coon Creek. Along the trip, people can see eagles, bear, deer and turtles.

Blue Creek Guide Service's guided fishing trips are $225 per person for a minimum of two trips and $300 per person for a single trip. Its scenic and bio-cultural tours are $100 per person and its diving trips to view salmon and steelhead are $150 per person.

To book a trip for sightseeing or fishing, you can go to the website at yurokfishingguides.com or call (707) 482-0579 or (707) 951-1284 or e-mail yurokcarlson@yahoo.com.

GO ATTRACTIONS

Just watch for the giant Paul Bunyan and his blue ox.

When you see them, you've arrived at Trees of Mystery, one of the region's premier roadside attractions north of Klamath.

If you want to know what the canopies of Del Norte redwood forests look like and view the amazing ways redwoods adapt to their environments, Trees of Mystery has just what the arborist ordered.

"It's a unique perspective of the redwood forest you can't get any other way, besides being a bird," said General Manager John Thompson, about the Sky Trail gondola ride at the attraction. The gondola follows a nearly 1-mile-long trail through old-growth redwoods and includes signage and audio interpretations of exhibits.

Trees of Mystery attractions also include a world-famous Native American museum and huge gift shop. The End of the Trail Museum includes artifacts from tribes all over North America.

"The End of the Trail Museum is said to be one of the best private collections in the world," said Thompson. "It's broad and very deep in its presentation." The hero of Trees of Mystery is Paul Bunyan, his legends carved out by loggers of long ago. The Trail of Tall Tales is devoted to the myths surrounding Bunyan, as are the mammoth-size statue of his ox, Babe, and himself.

Here is more info about roadside attractions along the Wild Rivers Coast:

Preston Island, a hidden gem

By DAVID RUPKALVIS

Crescent City, California is rightly known as a tourist destination. With miles of beaches to the west, giant redwoods to the east, sea lions and seals that can be seen every day and plenty of things to do between, it is no surprise people plan their vacations around trips to Crescent City.

I have been to Crescent City more than a dozen times over the last six months, and every time I am drawn to something amazing. I have visited the beaches, stared at the sea lions, taken pictures of redwoods and always been amazed at what I can see.

But I am always looking for hidden spots that are a little off the radar. And sometimes you get lucky.

In January, I visited Crescent City during king tides, so I was looking for a place to take pictures of the highest tide of the year. As I drove along with the beach to my side, I stopped a couple of times to take pictures. And then I noticed this little road off to my left that drove down to the beach. So, I followed it down and found a little wonder land.

Known to locals as Preston Island, what I found was different than anything else around. There's a small parking area at the bottom, with beaches on both sides. But directly west, heading out into the ocean is something I've seen nowhere else.

For hundreds of feet, what looks like volcanic rock moves out into the ocean. As you walk out, you have to find your own way as tide pools are everywhere. Many are small, just a few feet across, but some are big enough you have to find a new direction to stay dry.

The tide pools are different than those nearby. While filled with crystal-clear water, there seems to be little in them. I saw no crabs, no fish, no sea anemones, just water. I'm sure someone with an eye better trained than mine could find life in the pools, but for me it felt like walking into a different universe. The real treat was along the edges. During king tide, and again on subsequent visits, the waves crashed into the rocks, creating massive splashes of water pouring onto the rocks.

I desperately tried to take great pictures and mostly failed. Patience is probably not my greatest virtue, so I was always spinning and snapping photos just after the waves hit. For someone with more patience, and a willingness to wait with a camera trained at one spot until the wave hits, there is probably great photos to be taken.

I wandered around the rocks for more than hour before I realized it. Just the sound of the waves crashing, the feeling of the power of the water and the belief that something amazing was just ahead kept me going.

Like many along the South Coast, I am drawn to the ocean. And this spot in Crescent City has drawn me back many times. You feel like you're in a different world when you're surrounded on three sides by waves crashing into rocks. It reminded me how small we all really are in comparison to the greatness of nature.

Preston Island has a long history in Crescent City. Originally Preston Peak, the area was a sacred site for the Tolowa Nation. Years ago, the peak was mined, and the rocks removed from it became the jetty in Crescent City. What was left was Preston Island, its many tide pools and a place that has a allure of its own today.

A couple of notes. While there are sandy beaches on both sides, you will need good shoes to go out onto the rocks. The rocks are sharp and require some scrambling to move around on. I would also advise against getting too close to any of the edges. The power of the waves kept me from getting too close myself.

To get there, follow Highway 101 from Coos Bay through Bandon, Port Orford, Gold Beach and Brookings. After you reach California, continue on Highway 101 into Crescent City. Turn right on Front Street, which has signs for beaches, and continue until the road ends. Turn right onto Pebble Beach Drive and keep a close eye out for the small road that juts off to the left. Crescent City is a little more than three hours away, but there is enough to do to keep you entertained for hours.

HIDDEN GEMS

GO OREGON BEACHES

The Wild Rivers Coast has some of the best beach access anywhere in the world. Not only are the waves and surf a breathtaking experience, incomparable sunsets and beachcombing treasures abound.

Prior to heading for the beach to visit tidal life, check the tide tables. When possible, it's best to arrive an hour prior to low tide, as the water is still going out. Once the tide begins to come back in, it seems to return quickly. Be cautious of waves. You don't want to be stranded on a rock.

The waters off of this coast are not only cold, but there are areas with strong undercurrents. Care too, should be taken with your footing when traversing across the rocks. Many are slippery with seaweed.

The tidepools' environment is delicate. Remember, you're visiting another living society's home. If you lift up a rock to look underneath, return it to its original spot — that minimizes the effect you will have on the tidepool's life.

To find a good spot to explore, search for the rocky areas —there are many in the Wild Rivers Coast.

BANDON STATE NATURAL AREA

Located along Bandon's Beach Loop Road, there are several locations with beach access, picnicking, horseback riding and unsurpassed views. Parking is ample at all locations.

FACE ROCK SCENIC VIEWPOINT

There is an American Indian legend about this spot. Some say they hear a maiden's voice on the wind, and standing on the cliff overlooking the ocean you can easily pick out the face on Face Rock. There is a well-kept trail to the beach, and several rocky intertidal areas to explore at low tide.

BULLARDS BEACH

This large park, located just two miles north of Bandon features a campground nestled among shore pines and protected from the strong ocean breezes. Take a walk or bike ride on the mostly paved pathways to the beach that weaves through the open, grassy fields and lowland forest across a plain to the sandy dunes. All along the path are views of the Coquille River. Across the river is Bandon Marsh National Wildlife Refuge, sporting a variety of wildlife. The historic Coquille River Lighthouse is nearby.

ROCKY POINT

(Two miles south of Port Orford): Rocky Point features good access to tidepools and a clamming area. Be aware of potential red tides when harvesting clams and always check the local rules and regulations.

HUBBARD CREEK

(One mile south of Port Orford): This is a popular spot for surfers who are often seen in their wetsuits in the surf.

BATTLE ROCK

(Location of the Port Orford Visitors' Center): Battle Rock features a wayfinder with plenty of parking and easy trails to the beach. There is also some picnicking available in this day use area as well as restrooms.

PORT OF PORT ORFORD

The fishermen's memorial and a small, protected beach is offered here, framed by the port docks and Point Orford.

PARADISE POINT

(On the north side of Port Orford): Another part of Oregon's State Parks system, Paradise Point has a nice beach for walking.

CAPE BLANCO STATE PARK

(Six miles north of Port Orford): beach access, RV and tent camping spots, cabin rentals and even an equestrian camp are located here, in addition to the lighthouse and historic Hughes House.

HUMBUG MOUNTAIN STATE PARK

(South of Port Orford): Beach access through a trail which traverses under Highway 101. Camping spots, day use area and trail to the top of Humbug Mountain.

FLORAS LAKE

(Located north of Port Orford): This area features a trail which begins at Floras Lake and continues until an expanse of ocean beach is accessible. A county park is located at the area for those wishing to camp.

OLD COAST ROAD

(Five miles north of Gold Beach): There are several areas for beach access along this stretch of one-lane road. They include Otter Point, with trails to the beach and a phenomenal view from Otter Point itself, several segments of the Coast Trail and a trail to Bailey Beach.

BEACH ROAD

In Gold Beach, west of the airport): The beach road area offers multiple areas to access the beach and highlights the Port of Gold Beach Memorial.

NORTH AND SOUTH JETTIES OF THE ROGUE RIVER

Both of these areas have beach access with surfers trying their luck near the south jetty. Driftwood is abundant here.

SOUTH BEACH PARK

(South end of Gold Beach): A small city park with handicapped beach access, this area also features plenty of parking, swings and barbecues, picnic tables and a sand volleyball court.

PISTOL RIVER STATE PARK

(At the mouth of Pistol River): Access to the beach, plenty of parking and a view of Crook Point.

MYERS CREEK BEACH

(Seven miles south of Gold Beach): Part of the Oregon State Parks system and one the most photographed beaches in the world, Myers Creek features prominent sea stacks, tidepools, several turnouts for parking, windsurfing and access through several trails to the beach.

SAMUEL H. BOARDMAN STATE PARK

Just north of Brookings, this 11-mile stretch of coastline offers stunning views and developed park areas. The area includes sections of the Oregon Coast Trail, with smaller trails leading down to isolated, pristine beaches.

HARRIS BEACH STATE PARK

Offers good parking, picnic tables and restrooms, a shower to wash sand off shoes and feet, and long stretches of scenic beaches. A well-marked park entrance at the north end of Brookings provides vehicle access to the beach.

CHETCO POINT

Is an unlikely location behind the city wastewater treatment plant, but offers some of the most interesting, accessible and little-used exploring areas. Good trails lead from a parking area to a quiet beach or to windswept bluffs above the ocean. To get there, take Wharf Street off Railroad Avenue.

OPHIR REST AREA

(Eight miles north of Gold Beach): Beach access, picnicking, restrooms.

SPORTHAVEN BEACH

At the Port of Brookings-Harbor is a favorite of local residents. It's a good place to watch boat activity at the Chetco River bar, or to check ocean conditions. The beach also fronts a busy RV park during summer months, and many area visitors enjoy walking the beach there. Local surfers also favor ocean waves in the area of the south jetty. To get there from Brookings, turn right at the south end of the B.A. (Dot) Martin Bridge across the Chetco River. Follow Lower Harbor Road about a mile to the beach.

MCVAY PARK

Is on Oceanview Drive in Harbor, approximately 3.5 miles south of Port of Brookings Harbor. The park features a grassy field with a trail leading down a steep bluff to the beach. A dog park, with a large, fenced area, is available, as are disc golf opportunities. To get to McVay Park, drive south of Brookings on Highway 101 to West Benham Lane. Turn right on Benham Lane, and then left at Oceanview Drive. Follow Oceanview Drive south through lily fields until you see a couple of massive rocks on the right. A gated drive provides vehicle access.

CRISSEY FIELD

Just a half-mile north of the Oregon/California border is the Crissey Field Welcome Center, where trails lead across sand dunes to a wide, sandy beach. To get there, drive south from Brookings on Highway 101 approximately five miles.

The Smith River valley unfurls along Highway 101

near two eponymous communities — a small farming town and a tribal nation that runs a casino 3 miles south of the Oregon state line.

Halfway between the state line and Crescent City, the highway crosses the largest completely undammed river in California. Seven miles north at the mouth of the Smith River, there's a good vantage point to see its cold, clean current make its final plunge to sea.

MOUTH OF THE SMITH

Popular with picnickers and anglers, the mouth of the Smith River also attracts a wild menagerie — diving sea lions, seals, salmon, otters, sharks, crabs, geese and shorebirds.

On one side of a long sandbar the river fills fingers of a meandering slough, while on the other side ocean tides spray wildly, even on calm days.

To access the mouth, turn west off 101 onto the Mouth of the Smith River Road, which runs through the heart of Smith River tribal nation, 3.5 miles north of the townsite and 3.5 miles south of the state line. The road ends at a parking lot overlook with access by staircase to a sand and pebble beach.

BEACHES AND BREACHES

Edging north from the river mouth and still two miles south of the state line, Clifford Kamph Memorial Park is a stellar spot for beachcombing, surf fishing and whale watching.

With three parking spots on a bluff overlooking the ocean, this unassuming county park has drive-up views and convenient facilities nearby, including wheelchair accessible restrooms and a ramp leading to a sandy beach. The campground is hosted year-round, with 12 tent camp sites rented on a first-come first-served basis.

ONE FISH, TWO FISH...

Salmonids are a family of fish famous for their miraculous migration patterns: from freshwater streams out to the ocean depths and back upstream again, to spawn and die where it all began. Glimpse these revered creatures up close at Rowdy Creek Fish Hatchery, which raises steelhead trout and chinook salmon to supplement sport fishing stocks in the Smith River.

Strict regulations protect the Smith's wild stock from overfishing. Hatchery fish, on the other hand, are always fair game, distinguishable from the wild fish by a clipped adipose fin.

The Rowdy Creek Fish Hatchery welcomes visitors during regular business hours and is situated just west of the highway behind the Smith River Post Office on 255 North Fred Haight Drive. Tours are free, though donations to the non-profit enterprise are accepted.

TOLOWA DUNES

More than 4,000 acres of lush forests, rolling dunes, wetlands, meadows and 11 miles of undeveloped beach make up Tolowa Dunes State Park.

The park encompasses Dead Lake, lakes Earl and Tolowa and the mouth of the Smith River. Visitors can explore more than 30 miles of hiking trails. It's also rich in opportunities for surfing, fishing, beachcombing and birdwatching.

Visitors to the park can even get hands-on experience in restoring the dunes to its original habitat. The Tolowa Dunes Stewards and the Redwood Parks Association host excursions to eradicate invasive European beach grass on the first and third Sundays of every month.

For more information visit: redwood-parksassociation.org/tolowa-dunes-state-park or tolowacoasttrails.org.

Opportunities for great fishing on the Wild Rivers Coast are as varied as the rivers. Before fishing, it is mandatory to possess a fishing license and tags (punch cards) for either Oregon or California.

OCEAN FISHING

— California

Sport fishermen without a slip in Crescent City Harbor can get into the water from Citizens Dock and can head out to sea in search of whatever is in season from there.

Bottom fishing for rockfish and lingcod is generally one of the most reliable fisheries in Northern California, where black snappers in particular are always plentiful. The bottom fishing season in California generally runs from about May until the end of the year.

As bottom fishing opens every spring, the ocean salmon and pacific halibut seasons are quick to follow, usually starting in early May.

Usually both salmon and Pacific halibut seasons remain open through September, but in recent years regulators have elected to add in periodic closures (and a full closure for ocean salmon fishing in 2017) to help ease the fishing pressure on both species of fish.

Check with the California Department of Fish and Wildlife for current information on both fishing seasons.

Additionally, several other species of ocean fish are open year round, including California halibut, sharks (except for white sharks), surfperch, sturgeon and tuna (although tuna are generally only in the area for a few weeks in the fall).

Crabbing is also open year round in California but the most popularly targeted species of crab, Dungeness crab, are only open to recreational crabbers from early November until late in the summer.

For information about current and upcoming fishing seasons visit www.wildlife.ca.gov/Fishing/Ocean/Regulations/Fishing-Map/Northern

OCEAN FISHING

— Oregon

There is always something in season for ocean anglers out of Oregon, with bottom fishing open all year long. Anglers out of Brookings Harbor can target rockfish and lingcod all year long and the fishing is generally pretty productive.

In 2017, the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife issued a rare closure of bottom fishing statewide due to the quota for several species being caught much quicker than expected, but the OFDW has since revised the daily catch limits with the hope of once again allowing year-round bottom fishing.

Pacific halibut seasons generally run from about May until November, but can be closed at any time during that season if the area's yearly quota is met.

The ocean salmon season (closed for all of 2017) usually starts sometime in May and runs into the fall.

Ocean seasons for Pacific halibut are usually set in March, while the ocean salmon season is announced sometime in April.

For more information about Oregon's ocean fishing seasons and regulations, visit www.dfw.state.or.us/re-sources/fishing/saltwater.asp

RIVER FISHING

Coquille River

Crabbing for Dungeness can be phenomenal in the Coquille bay at Bandon from the local crab dock in Old Town and near the Bullards State Beach boat ramp. Crabbers use crab pots, crab rings and Pineapple Butterfly Traps.

Chinook salmon start migrating upriver in robust numbers on the first full-moon cycle toward the end of August. This is an upriver trolling fishery. Anglers launch from Bullards State Beach at low tide and start trolling upriver using a Fish Flash and a cut-plug herring. The Rocky Point Boat Ramp is another popular boat launch facility to put in and take out.

A wild coho river fishery has also grown in popularity in recent years, starting in September. Be sure to check the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife for current bag limits.

Fantastic rockfish, lingcod, halibut, tuna and salmon fishing can also be found outside the Port of Bandon, with the primary charter boat operation being Prowler Charters, located in Old Town Bandon.

Crab gear, bait, tackle and excellent seafood dishes are provided at Tony's Crab Shack in Old Town Bandon.

Elk and Sixes Rivers

At the northern end of Curry County are two gems of the Pacific Northwest in the land that time forgot. The Elk and Sixes are sister streams that flow so close together, it would be hard not to mention one without the other.

The Elk River empties into the ocean south of Cape Blanco, while the Sixes River flows into the Pacific just a few miles north of Cape Blanco. Both are relatively short, but don't let their size fool you. Both rivers are known for having some of the latest runs of salmon on the Oregon Coast.

Generally speaking, the first salmon enter the river mouths in September and will progress upriver depending on the amount of rainfall.

Steelhead enter both systems around Thanksgiving and the runs peak around February.

The main float in the Elk is to put in at the Elk River Hatchery and take out at the RV park or float all the way down to Ironhead.

The main drift on the Sixes is to put in at Edson Creek and take out at either Mid-Drift, the Grange, or drift all the way downriver to the Hughes House. But if the winds are blowing downriver, do not drift below Highway 101. Instead, take out at the Grange. To check Elk River water conditions, call (541) 332-0405.

Lower Rogue River

There is something to fish for in the Lower Rogue River almost 12 months out of the year, from Foster Bar down to the mouth.

The first spring Chinook begin entering the mouth in late February and the run gradually builds, peaking into April and May.

The Rogue is famous for its large fall chinook, caught from July to October.

The traditional method used here is trolling a Rogue Bait Rig or a comparable spinnerbait rig, using an anchovy on the back two hooks. Coho salmon are frequently caught in the lower bay in September and October.

Boat launches are available at the county ramp, Jot's Resort and at Lex's Landing. The winter steelhead run is quite prolific, as well. They enter the Rogue around Thanksgiving, depending on the water level.

Chetco River

Perhaps best known for its trophy chinook from 50 to 60 pounds, and for both wild and hatchery winter steelhead exceeding 20 pounds, the Chetco is also known for having the safest bar on the Oregon Coast.

In September, anglers in the estuary below the Highway 101 bridge begin trolling spinnerbait rigs and plug-cut herring for salmon averaging 28 pounds.

The salmon run starts petering out around mid-November, when winter steelhead begin dominating the river. By December a handful of anglers have usually landed several steelhead over 20 pounds. The run peaks in late February, but good numbers can be caught through March.

The wild and scenic section of the Chetco, above Ice Box, will leave you breathless.

The best floats are from the South Fork down to Miller Bar, from Miller Bar down to Loeb State Park, or from Loeb State Park down to Social Security Bar.

Winchuck River

Fishing for salmon and steelhead is seasonal. Check ODFW regulations for updates. www.dfw.state.or.us

Smith River

Barbless hooks are mandatory when fishing the Smith. If the Chetco River gets blown out at about 10,000 cfs and has a chocolate-brown appearance, California's Smith River has an emerald green appearance and is plunkable the same day.

The Smith and Chetco rivers are similar in many ways. Both kick out trophy salmon and steelhead, and both empty into Pelican Bay. Salmon fishing usually picks up around September in spots like The Sand Hole, Cattle Crossing, The Piling Hole and at the mouth of Rowdy Creek.

Bobbers and sand shrimp/cocktails can be deadly. Early in the season, fish the north bank off of the Mouth of the Smith River Road, off Highway 101. Here, it is best to fish the outgoing tide and through low slack, where the river makes a slot.

Klamath River

Barbless hooks are also mandatory on the Klamath River. The Klamath starts fishing well around May for spring Chinook heading for the Trinity River. There is little bank access, so please don't launch here unless you have a sled with a full tank of gas.

GO LIGHTHOUSES

For hundreds of years, seafaring ships have met their demise along the coast of Southern Oregon and Northern California.

Out of Mother Nature's fury along these 100 nautical miles of beautiful, rugged coastline has arisen a string of lighthouses so diverse and compelling in nature that they annually attract hundreds of thousands of admirers.

These lighthouses include the St. George Reef Lighthouse and Battery Point Lighthouse at Crescent City, Cape Blanco Lighthouse near the Sixes River north of Port Orford, Coquille River Lighthouse at Bandon, and Cape Arago Lighthouse near the entrance of Coos Bay.

ST. GEORGE REEF LIGHTHOUSE

Neither cozy nor readily visible, St. George Reef Lighthouse sits precariously on a rock 6 miles off the coast of Crescent City in some of the most treacherous waters on the West Coast. Its construction was inspired by the Brother Jonathan disaster, which claimed the lives of nearly 200 passengers and crewmen. It took 11 years to complete in 1892.

Built on a 70-foot-high concrete pier and equipped with a tower stretching upward to 134 feet, the lighthouse was considered one of the least desirable and most dangerous assignments for lighthouse keepers.

Decommissioned in 1975 and left for a time to fend for itself against battering seas, the lighthouse has now been rescued in stages by lighthouse and history buffs of the region.

Its French-made Fresnel Lens was removed and housed in the Del Norte County Historical Society Museum in 1983. In October 2002, a new light was installed in the rebuilt lantern room atop the lighthouse. The light is powered by a solar panel and wind generator.

Once manned and supplied by boom, derrick and prayer from lifeboats often bobbing dangerously in the sea, the lighthouse now is accessible only by helicopter. On a clear day, it's visible from points all along Pelican Bay, including Brookings, as a gray dot against the horizon.

The Del Norte County Historical Society Museum is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday and Saturdays. Call (707) 464-3922.

BATTERY POINT LIGHTHOUSE

Much closer to shore in Crescent City is the Battery Point Lighthouse, which is accessible on foot when the tide is low. At high tide, Battery Point becomes an island.

Built in 1856 when Crescent City was becoming a bustling center for export of lumber to San Francisco and import of miners to Oregon gold fields, the lighthouse held its ground against seismic waves from the 1964 Alaska earthquake, which claimed 11 lives in Crescent City and wiped out 29 blocks of commercial and residential structures.

These days Battery Point Lighthouse houses exhibits from its storied past such as artifacts from the Brother Jonathan, the 1964 tsunami and a boat torpedoed in World War II.

Battery Point Lighthouse is open to visitors 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekends, tides permitting. The lighthouse is at the foot of A Street in Crescent City. Call (707) 464-3922.

CAPE BLANCO LIGHTHOUSE

Back on the Oregon side of the border, Cape Blanco Lighthouse holds distinction as the state's oldest continuously operated lighthouse since 1870, and its highest at 245 feet above sea level. The beacon's 59-foot tower beams signals 21 miles out to sea.

The lighthouse opens for tours on selected days from May through October, and volunteer guides from the Bureau of Land Management like to point out magnificent ocean vistas, including seven arch rocks on nearby Blanco Reef and Port Orford Reef.

Back in the pre-electricity days of diesel-fired lighting, Cape Blanco Lighthouse once had a keeper named James Langlois who spent 42 years lugging fuel up a 63-step spiral staircase to the tower. He retired in 1918, taking with him a state record for tenure that still stands.

COQUILLE RIVER LIGHTHOUSE

The Coquille River Lighthouse near Bandon sits just a few feet above the waterline not far from the point where the river meets the Pacific. It had a brief but exciting history of operation. Commonly known to mariners of the day as the Bandon Light, the Coquille River Lighthouse was one of the state's last to go into operation in 1896 and one of the first to leave service in 1939. But during its years of operation, the Coquille River Lighthouse survived a fire in 1936 that wiped out Bandon, and was nearly rammed in the wreck of the C.A. Klose in 1903.

The low-slung lighthouse structure stood abandoned for more than 35 years until restored as a museum in 1975. Because of its picturesque setting, the lighthouse is a popular subject for photographers and landscape painters. It is easily reached by visitors through the entrance to Bullards Beach State Park north of Bandon.

CALIFORNIA

SMITH RIVER CORRIDOR

Many campgrounds popular among locals are located in the mountains along the Smith River east of Crescent City, where daytime summer temperatures, frequently in the 80s and 90s, are much warmer than those near the coast, and the pristine waters in the river make for great swimming and kayaking.

Big Flat is more secluded than the other campgrounds and is bordered by picturesque Hurdygurdy Creek.

Campground is located in Jedediah Smith Redwoods State Park on U.S. 199 just west of the town of Hiouchi.

The campground is situated among towering redwoods on the banks of the Smith River. The campground offers swimming access on the Smith River as well as seasonal campfire programs. In the summer there is a footbridge over the river to access more hiking trails in old-growth redwood groves, including the nearby Stout Grove Trail. There are 86 tent or RV sites, although there are no RV hookups. Hiker/biker sites are also available. Four cabins were added in 2016. The cabins feature an ADA-accessible deck, bunks and a single electrical outlet.

MILL CREEK CAMPGROUND

is located 7 miles south of Crescent City off U.S. 101 in Del Norte Coast Redwoods State Park.

There are 129 sites available, 22 tent-only, situated in a redwood forest, and the campground features restrooms, showers, bear-proof lockers and fire pits.

Campground programs and guided walks are also offered.

ELK PRAIRIE CAMPGROUND

is located a few miles north of Orick in a redwood forest within Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park. The campground is just off Newton B. Drury Parkway (accessible from U.S. 101). This campsite is a great choice for hikers — trails through some of the largest redwoods in the world abound in this area; some have trailheads at the campsite, others are short trips away up Drury Parkway.

There are 69 sites, including four cabins and 21 for tents only.

The campground features restrooms, showers, ADA-compliant toilets and campsites and a visitor center.

Gold Bluffs Beach Campground is on a beach northeast of Orick in Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park, accessed by exiting U.S. 101 onto Davison Road 2.5 miles north of Orick and following an unpaved road for 6 miles. No trailers are allowed due to the rough condition of the road.

The campground has 24 tent-only sites. There are restrooms, showers, ADA-compliant toilets and campsites, fire rings and a campfire center.

GO HIOUCHI

Hiouchi lies in the heart of Del Norte County's tallest redwoods.

Situated on the north bank of the Smith River, a vast expanse of redwood forest park land lies to its south and west.

Some of it straddles U.S. 199 while the rest is opposite Hiouchi on the other side of the Smith, where Howland Hill Road meanders through old-growth stands with numerous trailheads along the way. At the west end of Hiouchi on U.S. 199 there is a Redwood Parks visitor center, and just a short jog down the street is the entrance to one of the larger campgrounds in the Redwood Parks.

Lying just below the Hiouchi Forks, where the Smith River and South Fork Smith River converge, Hiouchi serves as the gateway to the many wonders lying in South Fork Canyon and the secluded wildlands beyond. Below the Forks, the mainstem river widens considerably. Here there is easy tubing and drift boats can put in to fish for salmon and trout.

JEDEDIAH SMITH REDWOODS STATE PARK

This park, like the river that runs through it, gets its name from Jedediah Smith, the first European known to have crossed the Sierra Nevada to the Pacific Coast. Smith and a group of fur trappers who journeyed with him reached the Smith River in 1828. 101 years later, the state park was established, protecting 10,000 acres of ancient forest.

SMITH RIVER

Locals prize the pristine, undammed Smith River for its fishing, summer swimming, kayaking, rafting and tubing. There are a number of beaches located around the Forks, one off the highway, others on South Fork Road, and are marked with road signs.

SOUTH FORK AND BEYOND

Turn off U.S. 199 a mile east of Hiouchi onto South Fork Road to find a more secluded river experience, with several swimming holes and kayak put-ins along the 13-mile, 30-minute drive through the South Fork Smith River's steep canyon.

At the end of South Fork Road, a left turn onto French Hill Road will take visitors through the lush forests along Hurdygurdy Creek and up into the mountains. Near the turn is Big Flat Campground, the kind of place where the night sky is filled with brilliant stars and the only sounds are of breezes caressing the trees and creek water babbling through an adjacent ravine.

HIDDEN GEMS

Historic Hiouchi Cafe — Nestled between the forks of the Smith River and majestic redwood groves of Jed Smith State Park lies the local dining favorite Hiouchi Cafe.

Serving plate-dwarfing pancakes since 1931, the Cafe is the perfect pit stop for travelers of scenic U.S. 199. Local Favorite: Smoked pork chop and eggs. Smoked 30 miles north at Taylor's Sausage in Cave Junction, Oregon, these chops have been converting ham and egg followers since they were added to the menu.

A classic local eatery for a weekend brunch with friends. Fishers of the mighty Smith River often begin and end their day here, complete with tales about the ones that got away.

G-O Road — was intended to be a two-lane, paved segment of a 55-mile road between the towns of Gasquet and Orleans to provide logging access to the area; however its construction was opposed by Native Americans on the grounds that it violated sacred lands, and they took their case to court, ultimately losing an appeal by the federal government in the Supreme Court. Sympathetic legislators then secured wilderness designations that barred the area from logging, and the road was never completed. Nevertheless, there are 16 miles of paved road that begin near the end of South Fork Road and follow a series of ridgetops with mountain views in all directions.

GO SURFING / RAFTING

Despite the growing popularity of surfing and kayaking worldwide, the Southern Oregon and Northern California coastal shores and rivers remain relatively undiscovered by thrill-seekers.

Those who do take to the chilly water will experience an adrenaline rush like no other, not to mention up close and personal contact with the area's natural beauty and array of wildlife.

In fall/winter, the coast is pummeled by powerful storms and giant waves ideal for the more experienced surfer; meanwhile the higher flow in the rivers provide excellent rapids for kayaking.

SURFING

There are many surf spots along Curry County's coastline. Some are easy to get to, such as Sporthaven Beach at the Port of Brookings Harbor and the mouth of the Rogue River in Gold Beach. Others involve a lengthy hike or scramble down a hillside.

South Beach in Del Norte County is widely regarded as the best all-around beach to surf. The flat beach just south of Crescent City is located off of Highway 101, providing a convenient place to park while riding the waves. The long, sandy beach is a fit for surfers of all abilities, including beginners.

Farther north along the California coast, more experienced surfers can try Pebble Beach or Point St. George, which can be rocky and rougher than South Beach.

There are several beach breaks located just north and south of the Oregon/California border, and several more located between Brookings and Gold Beach.

KAYAKING AND RAFTING

As the name implies, the Wild Rivers Coast boasts some of the most pristine and undeveloped rivers in the country, if not the world. The crystalline and jade waters of the Smith River are a holy grail for whitewater rafters and kayakers during the higher flow season from October through May, offering beginner-friendly class I-II and class III runs, Class IV wilderness canyons, expert Class V gorges and everything in between. Drift boats, rafts and kayaks are great craft for floating world-class scenic sections of the Smith that bring boaters under ancient redwoods at any time of year.

Whether you're an outdoors enthusiast just in need of some rental gear or a family of beginners wanting a guided river trip experience, Redwood Rides Adventure Outfitters has you covered for your epic outdoor adventure on California's Wild Rivers Coast. Explore the crystal clear waters of the Smith River, bike through the ancient redwood forest, or paddle an ocean kayak past wild sea lions and a historic lighthouse on Crescent City's scenic coastline.

"We often hear that our Redwoods by River boat tour is the overall highlight of our guests' vacations, which usually cover a substantial chunk of the West Coast from Seattle to San Francisco," said Adam Spencer, co-owner/operator of Redwood Rides.

The Redwoods by River trips are beginner- and family-friendly scenic paddles on the main stem Smith River, where rafters and kayakers float beneath the towering old-growth redwoods of Jedediah Smith State Park, part of Redwood National Park. The tour includes a short hike into the old-growth redwood groves, a stunning transition from the sunny river corridor to the lush rainforest. This river run has class I - II rapids, mild enough for beginners and families, adding more excitement to paddling by the tallest living things on Earth. The Redwoods by River trip is perfect for everyone ages 3 and up, giving you a small taste of whitewater while enjoying incredible redwood views — an unmatched opportunity.

If you're looking for more thrills, Redwood Rides also offers class II-III rafting and kayaking on the Middle and South Fork Smith.

Boating trips on the Smith are available year-round, since the coastal temperatures stay much warmer than inland areas in the winter time. When the weather is cooler, Redwood Rides offers drysuits to keep you warm and dry.

The outfitter's most adventurous trip is on the North Fork Smith, which has been called the best one-day wilderness rafting trip in the country.

Also available are guided bike tours and bike rentals with shuttle service. Enjoy a beginner to intermediate-level, 9-mile ride on Last Chance Coastal Trail, surrounded by jaw-dropping ancient redwoods and cliff-side ocean views, or an easier ride on Howland Hill Road, a 19th century stagecoach route, traversing the magical redwoods of Mill Creek. For downhill mountain biking, you can be shuttled to the top of a few different single-track options, while riders wanting a good climb and descent can see the unique forest diversity of Little Bald Hills Trail.

The dramatic coastline of Crescent City is perfect for ocean kayak tours. Enjoy paddling near the giant sea birds, seals and sea lions of Castle Rock National Wildlife Refuge or explore the scenic headlands surrounding historic Battery Point Lighthouse, built in 1856.

Find some time to get in the forest

By DAVID RUPKALVIS

Usually when I write these stories, the idea is to let my words give you a general idea of where I visited with the pictures telling the real story.

This week is a little different. After all, how can you take a photo that shows a 100-year-old tree that stands more than 200 feet tall? I tried, but I'll be honest, the pictures don't show much.

A few months ago, I wrote about how much I enjoy being in the forests. In my local area, the trees are probably no more than 40 feet tall, but the vast expanse of them has kept me entranced for hours.

Since the day I moved to Oregon, I kept hearing about the mythical old-growth trees. I assumed during my travels around the region, I had seen old-growth forests because, at least to me, many of the trees felt massive and forest looked overgrown and so thick with vegetation it would be hard to even walk through them.

Now I know how wrong I was. Last year, I went to the Coquille area to do a story on work being done to repair the watershed at Woodward Creek. I met with Jeff Jackson, a fish biologist with the Bureau of Land Management, and several other people. Jeff took me back into the forest to show me the work being done at Woodward Creek.

While driving through the forest, we moved from private land to BLM land and back to private land. That's when I realized what I had been missing. On the private land, the forest is being managed to be cut for timber. Most of the trees in the area were about 30 years old as the landowners are using the typical cycle of cutting every 40 to 45 years.

While talking to a representative of the landowner, I asked if he knew exactly where the property line was. He told me if you watched, you could actually see it. I didn't really understand until I did see it.

While driving through was felt like a full, deep forest, all of a sudden the property line became clear. Driving through the 40-foot-tall trees, there was a small clearing, and I could see massive giants in a straight line as we hit the BLM land. And what a difference it was. I have been in a lot of forest in my life, but I'm not sure I've ever seen what we drove into when we hit the BLM land that, according to rules in place now, will never be cut for timber again.

And the scary part is the forest wasn't technically old-growth. Jackson explained that the land had been cut for timber one time, likely 80 to 100 years ago. But the difference 50 or more years makes was stunning.

In the area, the BLM is working to make the forest as close to old growth as possible. And the best way to do that is to leave it alone. And leaving it alone has produced amazing results. It's hard for me to out in words the majesty of seeing trees towering up to 200 feet tall as you are underneath them.

Under the trees, enough light filters through to have hundreds of smaller trees and bushes thriving. I didn't see any on my trip, but Jeff said they have seen deer, bears and other animals while in the area. With Woodward Creek emptying into Evans Creek in the area, it is a location that is ripe for all kinds of natural life.

I have always been a supporter of the timber industry. I admire how the companies and landowners work to ensure there are trees to be cut down while still having a vibrant, growing forest around us.

But I think there's room to support the timber industry while still saying there are spots that should never be cut. Maybe the land owned by the federal government and managed by the BLM is the place to do that

While this trip was for another reason, the highlight for me was spending a little time in the massive trees that have been untouched for decades. Jeff did tell me about some places that have true old-growth trees that have never been cut, so I am planning to make my way there soon to experience the majesty of Mother Nature deep in the forest.

Usually, I would tell you here how to get to this spot. But in this case, the land is bordered by private property and the road leading in is fenced off due to damage done in the past by off-road vehicles. So, I'm making an exception and keeping it private.

But I will say this. If you have the opportunity to get into an old-growth forest, take it. Take some time to sit and look and listen. You will be glad you did.

GO GASQUET

Nestled in a green canyon along the banks of a tumbling river, Gasquet (pronounced “GAS-key”) is the gateway to the Smith River National Recreation Area, which encompasses much of the mountainous Smith River watershed.

Although Gasquet began as a mining community in the 19th Century, its value as a travel destination was quickly realized, and its founder, Horace Gasquet, built up the town as a health resort.

Gasquet continues to draw nature lovers to its beauty: to hike and bike the many trails that cross steep and scenic Siskiyou Mountain ridges and descend into the range’s characteristically lush, narrow canyons; to kayak and raft down the Smith River’s rapids and swim in the river’s pristine waters; and to take driving tours into its secluded wildlands.

For those wanting to get the most out of their exploration of the Smith River NRA, stop at its visitor center on U.S. 199 in Gasquet to find information and maps, enquire about campsite availability and acquire campfire permits

THE RIVER

Fed by clear mountain streams, the Smith River is the only undammed river in California, and it is prized by visitors and locals alike for its recreation opportunities: fishing, boating and swimming.

Because the Pacific Ocean remains cold year-round due to prevailing currents from the Gulf of Alaska, the best place for swimming and sunbathing on the Wild Rivers Coast is at its rivers, where summer temperatures in the canyons are typically in the 80s and 90s, and the waters provide a refreshing delight. No river in the region offers more campgrounds, swimming holes and kayak/raft launches than the Smith.

River accesses, many of which have restrooms, are marked with U.S. Forest Service signs at numerous places along U.S. 199 both east and west of Gasquet.

Interested in more than swimming? The river is a great place for tubing, rafting and kayaking. If you don’t have your own boat, local company Redwood Rides offers kayak rentals and guided kayaking excursions to experience the river’s many rapids. Redwood Rides also offers mountain bike rentals. Find out more at redwoodrides.com or call (707) 951-6559.

SCENIC DRIVES

Sweeping mountain vistas can be found in every direction from Gasquet, and though some roads may be in rough condition, most are navigable by two-wheel drive vehicles.

Little Jones Creek Road is the best of the bunch for accommodating vehicles with low ground clearance. The drive offers close views of the Siskiyou Crest with the Marble Mountains in the distance, and you can visit the Ship Mountain Fire Lookout, which has commanding views in all directions, including the ocean to the west. Little Jones Creek Road intersects U.S. 199 12 miles east of Gasquet at a marked exit. Take the road for 10 miles to Ship Mountain. Vehicles without 4-wheel drive will need to park at the toilet and walk up the last few feet to the lookout.

HIDDEN GEMS

Carnivorous plants — Due to the area’s seismic history, the Siskiyou region has an unusual “serpentine” geology that makes it home to a number of rare and endemic species of flora, the most notable being the carnivorous darlingtonia. Also called cobra lilies, it’s not hard to see how they got this nickname: the pitcher plant stands upright with a flared neck, head-shaped cap and forked flowers hanging down, resembling fangs. The easiest place to see them is by taking a short wheelchair-accessible trail that leads to a bog (darlingtonia’s habitat) surrounded by cedars and azaleas. Find it 3.5 miles east of Gasquet where a sign says “Botanical Trail!”

Patrick Creek Lodge — Eight miles east of Gasquet on U.S. 199, this historic lodge in operation since 1926 is a sight to behold with its log beams large stone fireplace. It offers fine dining and private cabins. If you can’t stay long, the excellent bar at least is worth a visit for your passengers.

U.S. Highway 101 bypasses some of Crescent City's most beautiful places – rugged beaches and ancient redwood groves, islands alive with birds and sea lions, historic lighthouses and epic murals. Most pass unseen unless you stray from the beaten path.

POINT ST. GEORGE

Turn seaward from the north end of Pebble Beach Drive to Point St. George Heritage Area, the third-most western promontory in the lower 48. Infamous for shipwrecks, St. George Reef juts out to sea from these high grassy bluffs and an off-shore lighthouse marks the edge of reasonable navigability. Panoramic views of reef, open ocean and coastal mountain ranges make this area a local favorite. A trail from the parking lot leads to grassy paths and the beach.

To access Pebble Beach Drive's northern section and Point St. George Heritage Area from the north end of Crescent City, exit Highway 101 at Washington Boulevard and go 3 miles. At a stop sign surrounded by ocean views and pastureland, go straight another mile for the Heritage Area parking lot. From central Crescent City, turn west on 5th Street or 9th Street and go one mile to Pebble Beach Drive.

THE HARBOR

Famous for fueling Californians' love of Dungeness crab, Crescent City Harbor produces the highest commercial value of seafood of any California port north of Monterey. Situated on the south side of town among numerous hotels and restaurants, the harbor hosts over 200 commercial fishing boats — and lots of brash sea lions and seals.

These bulbous creatures laze over the docks and walkways in the harbor. Slipping into the water, they become swift and elegant. To view sea lions and harbor seals up close (but not too close!), turn west on Anchor Way at the harbor's south end. Look for a pile of pinnipeds on your right, near the Chart Room restaurant.

GO ORICK

Situated halfway between Eureka and Crescent City on Highway 101, Orick is a former logging town that became the heart of Redwood National and State Parks 40 years ago.

Orick boomed and busted along the banks of Redwood Creek, which is more like a raging river than a babbling brook. Its 282-square-mile basin contains much of the world’s remaining old-growth coastal redwoods, trees that can grow taller than 30-story buildings.

Besides superlative height, coastal redwoods can live nearly 2,000 years, longer than the Roman Empire existed. Old-growth trees around Orick have been quietly growing since Roman armies were marching across Mesopotamia. Here are some highlights:

MOUTH OF REDWOOD CREEK

Like the mouth of the Smith River 60 miles north, Redwood Creek plunges dramatically into the Pacific along an easily accessible beach. Gargantuan logs sent out to sea during high creek flows are strewn across the sand by tides, offering a different view of the redwoods.

To access the mouth of Redwood Creek, turn west off of Highway 101 two miles south of Orick, toward the Thomas H. Kuchel Visitor Center. From there, follow a boardwalk to view the creek’s slough and go north ¼ mile across the flats to view the mouth.

ELK VIEWING

Orick’s human residents are outnumbered by Roosevelt elk, the largest species of elk in North America. Most often seen grazing contentedly in dewy meadows near the coast, elk attitudes change radically during the “rutting” season in late summer and early fall, when 1,000-pound bulls armed with six-, seven- and eight-point racks spar one another for dubs on the does. It’s a spectacular display.

Elk are many things. Majestic. Powerful. Graceful. Wild. Friendly they are not. Elk do not appreciate paparazzi and have been known to charge overzealous people. They can be spotted all over the Orick Valley.

REDWOOD TRAILS

Davison Road is an access point for some incredible trails as well as the only tent camping spot in the area, Gold Bluffs Beach, located 6 miles down a dirt road that connects to Davison Road at Elk Meadow. For those interested in a short jaunt, the 2-mile Trillium Falls loop can be accessed by a foot path south of the Elk Meadow parking lot, winding through giant redwoods and culminating in a waterfall. Lady Bird Johnson Grove is another easily accessed and popular spot for viewing old growth redwoods. About a mile north of Orick and a mile south of Davison Road, turn east on Bald Hills Road for 2 miles. The trailhead parking lot is on the right after a footbridge.

HIDDEN GEMS

Verdant walls — Entering Fern Canyon, it’s easy to imagine a stegosaurus picking its way over the fallen trees that litter the creek bed. With 50-foot walls draped in seven different kinds of ferns, the ravine provided a prehistoric backdrop for Steven Spielberg’s “The Lost World: Jurassic Park.” Visitors with sharp eyes will be able to spot a plethora of creatures including giant Pacific salamanders, banana slugs, garter snakes and birds. Turn west on Davison Road, 3 miles north of Orick and go 7 miles to the end of Gold Bluffs Beach Road.

Rare minerals — The Orick hills have other secrets, such as rare minerals found nowhere else in the Western Hemisphere. Orickite is a rare mash-up of copper, iron, hydrogen, oxygen and sulphur. Only a few grams have ever been found. The first sample came from Coyote Peak, overlooking Orick, and was sent to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., for further study and safekeeping.

BRIDGES OF CURRY COUNTY

By Diana Bosetti, Curry Coastal Pilot

Bridges can be utilitarian - connecting one place to another over an obstacle of water - or they can be timeless, like the Bridges of Curry County. "People are drawn to beautiful places," said Spirit Meller, a Brookings-based architect who drives over one of the nine Curry County bridges on his way to work each day.

"These bridges, most of them built in the late 1920's and early 1930's, are almost 100 years old," he added. "They remind us that multi-generational structures are not just about function, they are an investment."

According to the site Bridgehunter.com, there are nine functioning bridges in Curry County, dating as far back as 1924 and the most recent to 1998. From the Reinhart Creek Bridge with its warren deck truss bridge - which is an industry-specific way of saying it employs weight-saving design elements based upon equilateral triangles - to the Isaac Lee Patterson Bridge over the Rogue River in Gold Beach - the varying design styles don't disappoint. "The bridges are an undiscovered part of the Oregon Coast," said Robert Hadlow, a historian with the Oregon Department of Transportation and author of Elegant Arches, Soaring Spans: McCullough, Oregon's Master Bridge Builder.

Much of the credit to the impressive design styles of many of Oregon's bridges goes to Conde B. McCullough. The Dakota-territory native moved to Oregon in 1916, where for 18 years he was head of bridge design and construction for the Oregon State Highway Department, and is credited with building hundreds of custom-designed spans using efficiency, sound economics and architectural elegance, according to Hadlow.

"He was a force to be reckoned with," said Hadlow. "In terms of engineering, he was really pushing the envelope." Four of the nine Curry County bridges were designed by McCullough. They include the bridges of Euchre Creek; Hunter Creek; Myers Creek and the Isaac Lee Patterson Bridge - sometimes referred to as the Wedderburn or Rogue River Bridge.

According to Hadlow, the Isaac Lee Patterson Bridge is considered to be among the six major bridges designed by McCullough, and was part of a broader push to span the three bays and three river estuaries that relied on outmoded ferry service along the highway.

A quick read on the Bridgehunter.com website describes the bridge as: Consisting of seven reinforced concrete deck arches. It was the first structure in the US constructed with the Freyssinet method of arch ring decentering and stress control, named after its French inventor. The American Society of Civil Engineers designated the bridge a National Historic Civil Engineering Landmark in 1982, and the success of the bridge led to the widespread use of prestressing techniques in concrete construction. The structure is dedicated to Isaac Lee Patterson, the Oregon governor who promoted its construction.

The Isaac Lee Patterson Bridge also features obelisk monuments - design styles that can best be described as the Art Deco included in the construction of the New York Empire State Building. Driving along the idyllic coast line, where Redwood trees meet rocky, turbulent shores, it might be easy to go over the crossings of the other five, lesser-known bridges of Curry County with hardly a notice. But that, said Meller, would be a mistake. Take, for instance, the Thomas Creek Bridge - which bills itself as the highest bridge in Oregon at 345 feet - and is located eight miles north of Brookings. "It's a super cool bridge," said Meller. "My girls say that when we cross it, it feels like we are driving to the end of the world."

The Thomas Creek Bridge includes a triple span deck truss that sits over the ocean, along coastal route 101, and is often covered in a blanket of heavy fog. The Bridge was built by engineer Ivan D. Merchant, who also designed the North and South Umpqua River I-5 bridges and the Astoria-Megler bridge over the mouth of the Columbia River.

The only drawback is that the Thomas Creek bridge can be difficult to photograph from below because most of the trails end towards the end of a precarious cliff. There is parking on both ends of the bridge, however, with trails to the south side.

There is also the Bush Creek Bridge, which is the work of engineer Robert Kaspari and is located in Humbug Mountain State Park. As the most recently-constructed of the Curry County bridges, it is the first bridge in Oregon to use stainless steel reinforcement in the deck and beams, and microsilica modified concrete for general construction - a plus considering the debilitating salt-winds that can rust and crumble apart some of the older bridge designs.

Lastly, there is Lobster Creek Bridge, which was designed by senior engineer Henry R. Angwin in 1959 utilizing a riveted, 10-panel Parker through truss reminiscent of an elevated railroad crossing.

Author Robert James Waller wrote in his book, The Bridges of Madison County, "First you must have the images, then come the words."

Words...whether they describe elegant arches with soaring spans, Gothic or Art Deco-infused designs, or stainless steel reinforcement, the images of the Curry County Bridges are spectacular from one to the next.

BANDON DUNES GOLF RESORT

Known the world over as one of the premier golf resorts in the United States since its opening in 1999, Bandon Dunes offers an experience unlike any other. Beautiful coastal vistas are the backdrop for five courses designed with golf's Scottish roots in mind. Beautifully crafted, these courses are revered by golf experts around the world, with four of them garnering critical acclaim from the golfing elite. Pacific Dunes, Bandon Dunes, Old Macdonald, and Bandon Trails are all consistently rated among the best courses in the nation by top golf publications.

Another unique experience in every way, the Bandon Preserve is a 13-hole, par-3 course that delivers a level of enjoyment matched only by the spectacular views.

Opened in 2012, Bandon Preserve begins high atop a sand dune and rolls down toward the beach. The Pacific Ocean provides the backdrop to every hole. All net proceeds go directly to the Wild Rivers Coast Alliance, an organization that supports conservation, community and economy on the southern Oregon Coast. The Punchbowl, a 2.5-acre putting green used to set up a 18-hole putting course was added in 2014, providing another exciting opportunity to challenge your golf skills.

Bandon Dunes Golf Resort's courses offer stunning, yet challenging coastal holes, steep and intimidating bunkers, and expansive greens set along the gorgeous southern Oregon coastline. Each course offers something different than the other, though all are spectacular in their own right.

Bandon Dunes' courses were designed with the history of golf in mind, as their layout and structure harken back to world-famous courses in golf's birthplace, the British Isles. Keeping with that mindset, the courses are walking courses with a caddie service available (call in advance for a reservation). As a crown-jewel of golf courses worldwide, a Bandon Dunes golf getaway should be on every golf fanatic's bucket list. Bring your soft-spike cleats and passion for the sport because this is "Golf as it was meant to be played."

SALMON RUN

Salmon Run, an 18-hole championship golf course nestled in the forest 3.5 miles up the Chetco River in Brookings is in the center of Oregon's "banana belt," where the Mediterranean weather is mild year-round.

Val and Gary Early of Early Management Team are pleased to share their 182-acre facility with the world.

"We love the wilderness that surrounds it," Val Early said.

"You feel like you're on an outing on a private course. We love that the wait time might just be to wait for deer to clear the green."

Wildlife often sit in the gallery and salmon and steelhead can be seen when they swim up Jack Creek to spawn.

Salmon Run offers a course for every skill level in a setting that you will never forget.

There is a pro shop with a PGA teaching staff and driving range, all of which are open to the public. There are four sets of tees stretching from 5,433 yards to more than 6,400 yards. And tournaments abound in the summer months.

"There are lush fairways and greens with a challenging layout that helps hone the accuracy game instead of relying on the long ball each time," Val said. "Challenges vary from hole to hole. It's a course where the rewards are great if targets are hit!"

GO WILDLIFE

Creatures that fly, crawl on land, swim in the sea or roam the forests and meadows can be found on the Wild Rivers Coast, for those who know where to look.

ELK

Roosevelt elk are among the largest deer in the world, second only to the moose in size. Overhunting nearly decimated the herds on California's North Coast, but since an elk reserve was established at Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park in the 1930s, their numbers have rebounded.

Elk are among the most hazardous animals to the public at Redwood National and State Parks, Park Ranger Michael Poole said. Visitors should admire them from a distance.

Elk can be especially dangerous during the fall rut when males grow their antlers and fight each other for females. In the spring, female elk can also be dangerous if they have calves to defend. About 450 elk roam Redwood National and State Parks. The best place to view them is at the junction of Davison Road and U.S. Highway 101 north of Orick and at the end of Davison Road near the trail to Fern Canyon.

Closer to Crescent City, a herd of about 53 animals can sometimes be seen wandering south of town near U.S. Hwy 101 along Humboldt Road and Enderts Beach Road.

Another elk herd can be found in the town of Smith River, often hanging out at a field near Ship Ashore Resort on U.S. Highway 101.

Spotting elk in Curry County is challenging. Most herds stick to the county's forested areas. But some herds have been spotted occasionally near the Brookings Airport, at 17330 Parkview Drive and the Salmon Run golf course up the south bank of the Chetco River. Elk may also be spotted on the north bank of the Rogue River east of Gold Beach.

TIDEPOOLS

During minus tides a garden of sea life can be seen clinging to the rocks and trapped in the tidepools on Del Norte County's rocky beaches.

The best place to explore tidepools within Redwood National and State Parks is at Enderts Beach, said Park Ranger Michael Poole.

Critters include the Pacific sea anemone, which are found from Alaska to Baja California and resemble giant flowers. The purple and orange ochre sea star, webbed bat stars and the occasional sunflower starfish, which can have 16 to 24 limbs, can also be seen. Mussels and barnacles adorn the rocks and folks may even see tiny fish swimming in the pools, Poole said.

People should also be careful not to crush anything when moving rocks around, Poole said.

"What you really want is a minus tide during daylight hours," he said, explaining that a minus tide is an especially low tide that occurs roughly twice a month around the full and new moons (tide tables can be found on pages 8-10).

Folks should park at the Enderts Beach overlook 3 miles south of Crescent City at the end of Enderts Beach Road off U.S. Highway 101. They can then hike down the trail to the beach and turn right to find some of the best pools.

Other good places to view tidepools include the rocky beach north of Battery Point Lighthouse, the coastline northwest of Crescent City between Pebble Beach and Point St. George, and northwest of Klamath at False Klamath Cove off U.S. Highway 101.

North of the Oregon border in Curry County is McVay State Beach, another good place to see tidepool denizens. Other good places to tidepool in Curry County include Mill Beach, a hidden beach in the heart of Brookings behind Fred Meyer.

Tidepools at Harris Beach State Park can be accessed from the first parking lot by taking the South Beach Trail to the beach and turning south toward the sea stacks and hiking on the beach for about a quarter of a mile.

At the campground entrance, before descending to the lower parking lot take the Rock Beach Trail. It's a short trail requiring some exercise, but has tidepool life in abundance around the arch rock and rocky shores.

However, tidepooling is not without its hazards. Folks should keep an eye on the ocean, expect sneaker waves and take a friend — two- or four-footed.

BIRDING

With the area's pristine rivers, lagoons, rocky shoreline and lofty forests, even a novice birder can spot something interesting.

Oregon's Curry County hosts 376 bird species, according to the Kalmiopsis Audubon Society. Birding hotspots include the New River near Langlois, Cape Blanco State Park north of Port Orford, Floras Lake and the Sixes, Chetco and Rogue rivers.

Since the Southern Oregon Coast is the state's balmiest spot, birds normally only seen in California can often be spotted in Curry County too.

For example, the Allen's hummingbird, once rare in Curry County, is now abundant. These birds can be viewed at New River near Langlois, Cape Blanco State Park, Euchre Creek between Gold Beach and Port Orford and the mouth of the Rogue River in Gold Beach.

Short-eared owls, who hunt mostly at night, but can be seen during the day and at dusk, can also be seen at New River. They can also be seen at Lake Tolowa in Del Norte County hunting low over the fields.

Vagrant warblers on their way from the eastern U.S. to South America sometimes wind up at Cape Blanco.

In Del Norte County, ducks, loons, grebes, gulls, terns, the endangered marbled murrelet and other shorebirds can be seen at the Crescent City Harbor. At Point St. George there are rock sandpipers, harlequin ducks, shearwaters and marbled murrelets.

The Castle Rock National Wildlife Area west of Pebble Beach houses the second-largest seabird colony in California, according to Brug.

From Pebble Beach Drive, folks can see tufted puffins, common murrelets and pigeon guillemots with a spotting scope or binoculars. Castle Rock also hosts Aleutian cackling geese, which roost in the thousands before making their way to Alaska.

The geese also congregate on pastureland between Lake Earl and the Smith River. Wetlands in that area are habitat for gulls, ducks and raptors like bald eagles, peregrine falcons, merlins and the rare golden eagle.

Mountain birds like quail, Cassin's finches, Townsend solitaires, sooty grouse and white-headed woodpeckers can be seen on the GO Road in the Smith River National Recreation Area.

SEALS & SEA LIONS

Visitors to Wild Rivers Coast can see four species of pinniped — harbor seals, elephant seals, California sea lions and Steller sea lions — though they should keep their distance.

In Southern Oregon, seals and sea lions can be spotted at the various ports along the coast. They often sun themselves on the docks and swim among the fishing boats at the Port of Brookings Harbor.

In Gold Beach, seals and sea lions can be spotted on docks and along the shoreline and can be seen surfing the waves at the mouth of the Rogue River.

In Port Orford, favorite viewing sites include Battle Rock Park, Port Orford Heads State Park and on the docks. The many sandy beaches near Bandon and the port itself offer good vantage points to view sea mammals.

They can also be spotted in coves and isolated beaches from viewpoints along the Oregon Coast Trail within the Samuel Boardman State Park, between Brookings and Gold Beach.

Harbor seals are the most commonly seen, can reach 6 feet in length, weigh up to 300 pounds and have spotted coats ranging from a silver-gray to a black or dark brown.

The second largest seal in the world, the northern elephant seal, so named because of the proboscis found in the male, are only on land during breeding season.

Males can reach 13 feet in length and weigh 4,500 pounds, while females grow up to 10 feet in length and weigh in at 1,500 pounds. The best way to view elephant seals is through a spotting scope or on binoculars as they breed on offshore islands.

California sea lions, which use their large flippers to propel themselves on land, frequent the Crescent City Harbor near the Chart Room on Anchor Way. Ranging in color from chocolate brown to a lighter golden brown, males can grow as large as 7 feet in length and weigh 1,000 pounds. Females grow up to six feet in length and weigh up to 220 pounds.

Larger than the California sea lion, Steller sea lion males reach 11 feet in length and weigh 2,500 pounds while females grow to nine feet and weigh 1,000 pounds. Steller sea lions spend much of their time offshore and only breed on unpopulated beaches. Stellar sea lion pups are born from mid-May to mid-July.

Folks may be able to catch a rare glimpse of Steller sea lions on Castle Rock through spotting scopes and binoculars.

GO REDWOODS

The redwood forests of Del Norte and Humboldt counties boast some of the most magnificent and accessible old-growth redwood trees in California.

The region's rich history is inextricably tied to these ancient giants through the timber industry. Now, the trees are being preserved for current and future generations to inspire awe and wonder at any age. Compared to these aged, towering forests, we are all mere children.

Here's just a sampling of the adventures that await you:

STOUT GROVE

This easy trail boasts some of the largest and most impressive redwoods to be seen. The trailhead is located off Howland Hill Road east of Crescent City. Parking and restroom available.

The loop trail meanders alongside the sparkling blue-green Smith River. Ferns and clovers blanket the ground, giving the grove an other-worldly feel. The trail is short, but some longer options are available.

Check at a park information station for ranger-guided walks through Stout Grove.

SIMPSON-REED GROVE

This easy and highly accessible trail is one of the first that drivers come to after leaving Crescent City on U.S. Highway 199. Be cautious when driving this stretch about 5 miles from U.S. Highway 101, because there are often people crossing the road here.

In fact, the area is so congested that park officials have moved the Simpson-Reed Grove trailhead to a location off nearby Walker Road, which also leads to other old-growth redwood trails and a stretch of the Smith River.

Informative placards along the path educate hikers about redwood trees and other vegetation found there. The Peterson Memorial Loop can be taken to extend the hike through Simpson-Reed Grove.

After crossing bridges over a babbling brook and experiencing the wonders of an ancient redwood forest, hikers can join back up with the main trail and finish the trek.

BOY SCOUT TRAIL

Off Howland Hill Road, the Boy Scout Trail (5.6 miles round-trip) is known for its forest of majestic redwoods as far as the eye can see.

And like a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow, Fern Falls treats hikers who make it to the end of this trail with the sight of cascading waters (more or less, depending on the season). The rainy winter season provides more of a rushing waterfall than the drier summer.

The Boy Scout Trail is not an easy trek, but it's well-maintained, making the hike only moderately difficult.

The feather in the cap of the Boy Scout Trail is the Boy Scout Tree, which is located off a short, unmarked side trail at 2.4 miles into the hike. So keep a sharp eye, because hikers do not want to miss this double-trunked giant! A small wooden sign is nailed to the tree, labeling it as "Boy Scout Tree."

Back on the main trail, hikers will enjoy (besides redwoods) the many varieties of fern, bigleaf maple, vine maple and Douglas firs.

HIOUCHI TRAIL

This easy hike (4.2 miles round-trip) through Jedediah Smith Redwoods State Park follows the pristine Smith River. The trailhead can be found just before the Hiouchi Bridge heading away from Crescent City on U.S. Highway 199. Parking is beside of the road.

The Hiouchi Trail explores some of the most beautiful old growth redwoods in the park while giving the hiker prime views of the turquoise waters of the Smith River.

REDWOODS FROM YOUR CAR

How can you see the best of the redwoods on one short drive that'll barely nudge your gas gauge? Three words: Howland Hill Road.

This unpaved but relatively sedan-friendly roadway is your route to old-growth redwood bliss whether you're looking for long, medium or short hiking paths. Or, don't even bother getting out of the car. The views from the road are that good.

South of downtown Crescent City but north of the harbor, turn east off of U.S. Highway 101 onto Elk Valley Road. Then turn right on Howland. The region's rich history is inextricably tied to these ancient giants through the timber industry. Now, the trees are being preserved for current and future generations to inspire awe and wonder at any age. Compared to these aged, towering forests, we are all mere children.

Here's just a sampling of the adventures that await you:

MORE INFORMATION

In Del Norte County, two parks, Jedediah Smith Redwoods State Park (accessible from U.S. Highway 199) and Del Norte Coast Redwoods State Park (accessible along U.S. Highway 101), contain most of the redwood hiking trails. In northern Humboldt County, Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park (accessible from Newton B. Drury Parkway off Highway 101) contains many more old-growth trails.

GO KLAMATH

The Klamath area is home to many things:

the headquarters of California's largest Native American tribe and the place where a 263-mile-long river flows spectacularly into the Pacific, to name a couple.

The village — relocated after a devastating flood in December 1964 — and Yurok tribal headquarters are both on the inland side of U.S. Highway 101 just north of its bridge over the Klamath River. The most spectacular scenery, however, is reached by turning west off the highway onto Requa Road.

HISTORIC REQUA INN

On your right less than a mile up Requa Road is the Historic Requa Inn, which you could consider either a big bed-and-breakfast or a small hotel.

It was built as a 22-room inn in 1914 after a fire destroyed an older hotel built on the same site in the late 1800s. Its views of the river are as scrumptious as the multiple-course gourmet meals served in the dining room.

MOUTH OF KLAMATH OVERLOOK

Continue up Requa Road to a parking lot on your left that overlooks the Mouth of the Klamath River to the south. During salmon season, fishermen amass on the water and sandy spit.

If you think the view is good from here, walk down the Coastal Trail about half a mile, and turn left on another trail that meanders for an additional half-mile to a wooden observation platform jutting over the ocean. From here, the Mouth of the Klamath can be seen in all its splendor, and if you're lucky you might see the spouts of gray whales at sea.

Retrace your steps to the parking lot, or continue north a little farther on a memorable stretch of the Coastal Trail.

HIDDEN GEMS

World War II relic — If they look sharp, visitors exploring Redwood National and State Parks' coastal drive will come across an old radar station from World War II.

The U.S., fearing an attack from the Japanese, built a series of these stations on sloping hillsides, said Park Ranger Michael Poole. Because of their exposed locations, the stations were often disguised. The radar station off Coastal Drive appears at first glance to be a farmhouse.

"They had two buildings, the power station and the operations station, but they're just cinderblock concrete," he said. "Around one of them they built a fake farmhouse and around the other one they built a fake barn."

Coastal Drive can be accessed at the end of Klamath Beach Road off U.S. Highway 101. Visitors should then travel down Alder Camp Road, which will reconnect them with Klamath Beach Road, forming a one-way loop.

Newton B. Drury Parkway — Visitors taking this scenic drive will plunge through an old-growth forest of coast redwood, western hemlock and Douglas fir.

Prairie Creek protects some of the world's tallest trees, including Big Tree. Accessed from the parkway via a short paved trail, Big Tree is 304 feet tall and 21 feet wide.

Near the south end of the 10-mile drive, folks will travel through a grassy meadow where Roosevelt elk often graze; a visitors center and campground lie to the west.

The main road through Prairie Creek Redwoods State Park, the parkway connects to U.S. Highway 101 4 miles south of Klamath and again 5 miles north of Orick.

Klamath Glen — Up for a little side trip? Head east on Highway 169 for about 5 miles to the village of Klamath Glen, where you can enjoy some upriver views of the Klamath.

The Wild Rivers Coast has some of the best beach access anywhere in the world.

Not only are the waves and surf a breathtaking experience, incomparable sunsets and beachcombing treasures abound.

CLIFFORD KAMPH PARK

Just south of the Oregon border, is a Del Norte County facility. Long sandy beaches stretching almost as far as the eye can see are there for visitor enjoyment. The park also offers limited camping and bathroom facilities.

POINT ST. GEORGE

Four miles northwest of Crescent City is the westernmost point on the California side of the Wild Rivers Coast. Several trails lead away from a large parking lot, some to coastal bluffs with commanding views of the coastline, mountains and St. George Reef Lighthouse offshore to the northwest. Walk down a gated road to Kellogg Beach, which stretches all the way to the mouth of the Smith River, several miles away. Much of the beach is within protected areas, which feature miles of dunes, coastal forests and lakes Tolowa and Earl.

PEBBLE BEACH DRIVE

In Crescent City, the oceanfront is often overlooked by visitors whizzing through town on U.S. 101, but the spectacular beaches, from rocky to sandy, are available to the public all along this drive. To get there turn west on almost any street from downtown Crescent City and follow your nose. You will soon be rewarded by scenic craggy rocks jutting up from the swirling Pacific. Here and South Beach periodically offer excellent whale watching opportunities.

SOUTH BEACH

The long crescent beach which gives Crescent City its name and is located just south of town. U.S. 101 runs within a stone's throw of the beach here for people who don't want to walk far to get their feet wet. The beach is a popular spot for surfers, who often can be seen riding the waves.

CRESCENT BEACH

A broad beach nearly two miles long at the foot of redwood-covered hills south of Crescent City. At its northern end it doglegs into South Beach. Much of Crescent Beach is within Del Norte Coast Redwoods State Park, and it is accessible from Enderts Beach Road, which intersects with U.S. 101 approximately 2 miles south of Crescent City. There is a picnic area with bathrooms. The beach is set back far enough from the road to offer a pristine, secluded experience, particularly the farther south one wanders, where tall cliffs rise above the beach.

ENDERTS BEACH

Accessed from the southern end of Enderts Beach Road, it is all but unknown to visitors but a place locals treasure.

At the end of the road is parking lot atop Crescent Beach Overlook. At the southeast end of the area is the gateway to paradise. Embarking on the scenic one-half mile trail leads the visitor along a high bluff to the bottom of the hill where a sign at a fork in the path gives directions to the location and a campground.

Once at Enderts Beach, the beauty of it all is overwhelming. Standing on top of the small, rocky bluff that juts onto the sand, a glance to the east reveals a small, narrow canyon lined with ferns and trees. Nickel Creek, cluttered with huge drift logs that winter storms have crammed into the ravine, slowly filters through the mighty tree trunks, winds around the bluff and merges with the sea.

FALSE KLAMATH COVE

Two miles northwest of Klamath, U.S. 101 passes right by this small, scenic beach, which offers up-close views of heavy surf, rocks and seastacks around the edges of the cove. There are turnouts at the north and south ends of the beach, which is divided during high tides. Park at the front of the northern turnout during high tide to have the unique experience of feeling like your automobile is over the water. Not far past the southern turnout as the highway turns inland, there is a rest area with flush toilets, picnic tables and benches. along the edge of a picturesque pond.

KLAMATH BEACH

Is a driftwood-strewn sandbar at the mouth of the Klamath River. Providing a protected entrance to the river, it's a popular site for fishing. The lower Klamath River is home of the Yurok Tribe, and according to their religion a large rock on the north side of the river overlooking Klamath Beach is the spirit Oregos, who took the form of a woman wearing a basket cap and carrying a baby basket on her back.

Oregos likes people, so each year she swings her leg — the sandbar — to let fish enter to feed the people. To get there, exit U.S. 101 just south of the river onto Klamath Beach Road. After passing two RV parks, the road narrows, so RVs and vehicles with trailers are not advised. Park at the gated road and pass through the gate.

Several traditional Yurok plank houses, part of a ceremonial grounds, are adjacent to the road. Visitors are welcome to look but asked to treat the sacred grounds with care and respect.

GOLD BLUFFS BEACH

Is well off the beaten path. After exiting U.S. 101 onto Davison Road, 2.5 miles north of Orick, there is a winding 4-mile drive on unpaved road to get from U.S. 101 to the beach (RVs and trailers are prohibited). But for those who make the effort, there is ample reward at the other end. The road follows the beach for 3 miles, flanked on the inland side by steep bluffs. The beach is a great place to find elk in a particularly photogenic setting. At the far end of the road lies Fern Canyon, a narrow ravine with verti-

A stream runs through the ravine, so expect to get your feet wet if you visit. Gold Bluffs Beach also features a campground with 24 sites. Note: Gold Bluffs Beach requires a day use fee, payable at a booth where the road meets the beach.

FRESHWATER LAGOON BEACH

West of Orick is a mile-long beach adjacent to U.S. 101 with sweeping views of the ocean and Redwood Coast. At its northern end can be found the Redwood National and State Parks Thomas H. Kuchel Visitor Center, which offers exhibits, a bookstore and backcountry permits. Near the visitor center is the Redwood Creek Picnic Area, with covered tables and restrooms. The shoulders along the highway are broad, offering plenty of room to park cars and RVs. On the other side of the highway is Freshwater Lagoon, which has a boat launch at the northern end.

What everyone can do to protect the world's oceans

The world's oceans are facing significant challenges. According to the United Nations Regional Information Center, each year the oceans absorb 23 percent of human-caused carbon dioxide emissions and capture 90 percent of the excess heat created by these emissions. These developments are overwhelming the oceans, which are vital to the global ecosystem.

Anyone can join in the effort to protect the world's oceans. That includes people who live in coastal communities and those who live in landlocked locales hundreds, if not thousands, of miles away from the coast. Oceana, an international advocacy organization dedicated to protecting and restoring the world's oceans, touts the power of collective efforts to save the oceans. Though the task may seem overwhelming, that does not mean oceans are beyond saving. In fact, Oceana notes that various lifestyle choices individuals can make every day can help to protect the oceans and restore their futures.

- Help reduce demand for plastics. Oceana estimates that 17.6 billion pounds of plastic leaks into the ocean every year. To put that in perspective, one researcher at the University of California, Santa Barbara estimated that, if the flow of plastic into the oceans does not stop, there will be more plastic than fish in the oceans by 2050. Of course, much of the demand for plastic is driven by consumers, who can protect the oceans by purchasing plastic-free alternatives and emphasizing the need for more such alternatives to be made available. Avoid using plastic cutlery, plastic water bottles, plastic bags, and other convenient yet harmful plastics.

- Reduce your carbon footprint. Oceana notes that carbon dioxide is making oceans more acidic, which contributes to a loss of coral that serves as an essential source of food and shelter for marine life. According to the Reef-World Foundation, loss of coral threatens the existence of many marine species, producing a domino effect that ultimately decreases marine biodiversity by a significant amount. That's problematic for marine life, but also humans, as estimates from the United Nations indicate as many as one billion people across the globe depend on coral reefs for their food and livelihoods. The threat posed to coral reefs is substantial, but the efforts to reduce your carbon footprint aren't. Riding a bike to run errands on a warm day instead of driving a car; turning off the lights when leaving a room; and dressing warm on cold days to reduce reliance on home heating systems are some easy ways to reduce your carbon footprint.

- Eat sustainable seafood. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration notes that sustainable seafood is managed under a system of enforced environmentally responsible practices. These systems help to prevent overfishing and conserve essential fish habitats. Knowing which seafood is sustainable and which isn't can be hard, so individuals can visit Seafoodwatch.org to quickly identify and locate sustainable seafood options where they live and travel.

- Leave nothing behind. Make sure you leave nothing behind when visiting the beach or even a park. Doing so increases the chances that trash will end up in the oceans, which are already overwhelmed by plastics.

The threat posed to the world's oceans is significant. But that threat can be overcome by a collective effort to embrace lifestyle choices that take the health of the world's oceans into consideration.
