READERS' CHOICE
THE REVEAL

VOTES ARE IN FOR THE LOVE OF CHARLOTTESVILLE

CELEBRATING CHARLOTTESVILLE'S BEST OF 2020
Since the early '90s, we, The Daily Progress, have polled you, our readers, on which people and businesses make our area fabulous. We christened the resulting publication “Readers’ Choice,” and every year since we’ve struck up the band and rolled out the red carpet to recognize Charlottesville’s most beloved businesses—and the people behind them—for the magic they make.

It’s an annual tradition we’ve come to adore and so has Charlottesville.

As all of us are aware, 2020 is no ordinary year. This publication comes to you in the midst of a pandemic and your favorite businesses, with perhaps a few exceptions, are closed. They are struggling and their futures uncertain. That is a harsh reality. Yet, we recognize and celebrate our winners, since you, our readers, have spoken. We owe them that. With one eye to the future, we’re calling this iteration of Readers’ Choice “The Reveal”.

Because at the appropriate time, Charlottesville will be back in business. And when that happens, our pledge to you is that Readers’ Choice will make a second appearance this year, a publication we have christened “The Return”. We will again celebrate our local businesses, while they are making plans for a brighter future.

Until then, we will not only report, but also support. We will cover the issues that are important to you, and we will continue to support our local business community. Just two weeks ago we initiated a program that will award up to $250,000 in matching marketing grants for local businesses, in an effort to help them cope and survive these difficult times.

Since our inception we have partnered with local businesses across the region to deliver their messages to customers in both times of prosperity and in times of great challenge. Readers’ Choice is a prime example of that commitment.

We do these things because we know that together, we are stronger.

Enjoy Readers’ Choice “The Reveal”, stay safe and healthy, and we look forward to bringing you Readers’ Choice “The Return” later this summer.

Back when Ruckersville was ‘way out in the boonies’, as Ruckersville native Len Lamm describes it, his dad realized even then that real estate was important. Especially, if that real estate was situated on a corner. “He was a very smart man that way,” Lamm said about his dad, who would run The Corner Store convenience store in Ruckersville for a few decades, starting in the early 60s. By 1983 son Len took over the store, which eventually would become The Corner Store Garden Center.

“Back then it was still a convenience store,” Lamm said. “We had a deli counter, sold gas and plants and groceries,” he said. “Slowly but surely, the focus shifted to the gardening side of things,” he said.

By 2000, when The Corner Store was physically moved to its current location, Lamm decided to completely transform the convenience store to a gardening center.

“It felt like a natural move,” Lamm said. “Convenience stores were everywhere and so transitioning to a gardening center felt like the best thing to do. I did discuss it with my dad at the time, and he agreed that it would be a good idea. And so we did it and that’s twenty years ago this year,” Lamm said. Apart from shifting the focus of his business twenty years ago, nothing much has changed otherwise. “I like people to feel at home when they visit,” Lamm said. “My store still has an old feel to it, with original wood floors. A place where you can come in for a chat, even if you’re not buying anything.”

After 37 years of dealing with customers every day, there’s nothing more in this world Len Lamm likes more than helping people out.

“I feel blessed. I wake up every day and I can’t wait to get to work. That’s just how I feel about it. I love giving people great customer service and helping them out with whatever they came in for,” he said.

While doing that, Lamm relies on 4 fulltime employees who he describes as ‘extremely knowledgeable’.

During the current pandemic, Lamm is allowed to keep his business open, for which he is grateful. “There’s nothing I sell that you need in order to survive, but I’m happy I can stay open and serve my customers.”

During the COVID-19 outbreak, the store is closed to all public and Lamm and his employees only prepare pick-up orders and make free deliveries.

“Around this time of year, with spring already here, lots of folks are getting their mulch or their cold crops, like cabbages,” he said. “They also shop for their annual plants. I love this time of year, and normally fill the store with all kinds of new baskets. But every time of year has something wonderful to offer. I also love pumpkin season or selling Christmas trees.”

Being voted best garden center in this year’s Readers’ Choice contest means a lot to the Ruckersville native.

“It really does. It means a lot there are people out there that think enough of me and my business to go and vote for it. Yes, I take that seriously and it means something to me.”

AFTER 37 YEARS OF DEALING WITH CUSTOMERS EVERY DAY, THERE’S NOTHING MORE IN THIS WORLD LEN LAMM LIKES MORE THAN HELPING PEOPLE OUT.

Amy Barnabei
Principal, West Central Primary & Central Elementary School (Fluvanna)
Runner-Up: Best Boss

Green Dogs Unleashed is a non-profit organization committed to rescuing animals in need, rehabilitating them, and professionally training them to become Therapy dogs and then placing them in homes to give back to the community.

“It really takes a village, and we are thankful to each and every member in ours!”

-Erika

When she was in high school, Amy Barnabei, a Louisa County native and Fluvanna County resident, knew without a doubt what her path would be: she wanted to make a difference in kids' lives and enter the teaching profession.

And that's exactly what she did; starting in 1998 she became a teacher, serving students in 6th grade at Fluvanna Middle School. Five years later she was promoted to assistant principal at that school and starting in 2010, she would move on to become principal of both West Central Primary and Central Elementary School.

Whatever she does, whatever the day brings, one thing prevails above everything else: “We do what we do every day for the kids.”

According to Barnabei, going to work feels like a blessing. “It's because it feels like being with family,” she said. “That's what living, working and playing in Fluvanna means. My kids are in this school system and I know it very well.”

Securing the second place in the category “Best Boss” in this year's Readers' Choice is ‘quite the honor’ she said. But, Barnabei is the first one to point out that it wouldn't have been possible without the people around her.

“I work with amazing people every day. They make it possible for me to do my job and do it well.”

Her style of leadership is best described as down to earth, and always respectful toward others.

“It's really quite simple,” Barnabei said. “I treat people as I would like to be treated. And I think the best part of my job is that we all, collectively, work toward the same goal. We are here to make a difference in the lives of the students we serve.”

The biggest change in her field during her tenure, is that the scope of what teaching entails has widened.

“It's not just about the academics,” she said. “We also focus on the social and emotional wellbeing of our students. That's what today's world asks of us teachers.”

For the foreseeable future, Barnabei isn't going anywhere. She is exactly where she wants and needs to be. “I love being part of this team and I love being part of such a family-oriented community.”
Founded in 2007 by Sara Clayborne and Emily Hartka, Charlottesville Ballet is not just the only professional dance company in the Charlottesville area, it also has a proven track record of engaging people from all walks of life and ages into the many dance programs Charlottesville Ballet has to offer.

“Currently, our youngest student is one and a half years old, the oldest student is over 90 years old,” Sara Clayborne, co-director of Charlottesville Ballet said. “It’s safe to say we have something to offer for the whole community.”

Charlottesville Ballet was named best dance studio in this year’s Readers’ Choice contest.

New York native Clayborne and Hartka, who calls Roanoke her hometown, both earned their stripes in the world of ballet and traveled the country as professional dancers with prestigious ballet companies.

By 2007, they decided to team up and start a professional ballet company, with a mission to be more inclusive than they had experienced.

“First and foremost, health and wellness have always been the goal in everything we do,” Clayborne said.

“Through our own experiences, we’ve learned that the world of professional ballet isn’t always as inclusive as we would like it to be. For instance, female dancers have to be a certain weight that isn’t always healthy. We wanted to step away from that and open our company to anyone, no matter the age, experience level or body type.”

Clayborne said that she and Hartka started the company ‘from the ground up.’

“We got our start in a donated space in Greene County,” she said. “It took a few years, but we have always been able to grow.”

Thirteen years later, Charlottesville Ballet consists of three major pillars, said Clayborne, that allow the company to touch the lives of community members from young to old.

“Our professional ballet company is comprised of 15 extremely talented dancers from all over the world,” Clayborne said. “On an annual basis, we perform at The Paramount Theater and PVCC in Charlottesville, as well as in Lynchburg and Fairfax.”

The second and third pillars are geared toward the community; the Charlottesville Ballet Academy (CBA) is the official training school of Charlottesville Ballet, and through a program called CB Moves, the company offers several community outreach programs. “Our academy was founded in 2011 and we have reached at least 600 kids during that time,” Clayborne said. “Through the academy, we offer training in all dance genres, from ballet, to jazz, to hip-hop and tap.”

According to Clayborne, the academy offers 99 classes on a weekly basis. Through CB Moves, the third pillar, the company is able to get out into the community and bring dance to schools, seniors or people who are experiencing movement disorders. “Through CB Moves we also try to cater to the whole spectrum of the community,” Clayborne said. “Through a program called ‘Chance to Dance’, we currently offer after school dance classes at six public schools,” she said. “Silver Swans is another program under the CB Moves umbrella, and consists of a free class once a week at The Center, teaching seniors the basic principles of ballet, with a focus on flexibility, strength and conditioning.”

A last CB Moves initiative Clayborne wants to highlight is ‘Movement for Parkinson’s’, a weekly free class with a focus on people who experience movement disorders, and their care partners.

Charlottesville Ballet employs around 35 people and both Clayborne and co-founder Hartka are ‘filled with gratitude’ looking back on the past 13 years and being named best dance studio in this year’s Readers’ Choice. “We both had a clear idea of what we wanted to create,” Clayborne said. “A ballet and dance company for everyone, no matter your age, experience or body type. Health and wellness, and having fun being part of our classes, were always the main goals. Seeing where we started and where we are now, we are filled with gratitude and just grateful to be part of this community,” Clayborne said.

“CURRENTLY, OUR YOUNGEST STUDENT IS ONE AND A HALF YEARS OLD, THE OLDEST STUDENT IS OVER 90 YEARS OLD.”

Growing up in Charlottesville, Jay Knight, Jr. remembers vividly that dinner at the Knight family was at 6 p.m. sharp every night. It was a time for the family to get together and discuss the day that was. Patriarch John H. Knight Sr., a renowned and well-known dentist at the time, would share stories about his work, and Junior loved every tale he ever told.

“What struck me most about that was that my Dad genuinely loved his work,” John “Jay” Knight, Jr. reflects. “For some people work is just work. For my Dad, dentistry was a calling. For me, it’s a calling as well. It just took me a while to get there.”

Jay Knight, Jr. is now owner of two dental practices in Charlottesville and Zion Crossroads, employs almost thirty people, loves to help his patients with their dental needs, and, like his Dad, genuinely loves his work. He is proud to carry on the legacy started by his Dad. His career path, though, took a detour before Knight, Jr. was where he wanted to be.

“I attended Elon College in North Carolina and majored in business,” Knight, Jr. said. “After I graduated I worked in hotel and restaurant management, as well as in real estate development. I worked with people every day, and in some ways those jobs were fulfilling. But I kept thinking about my Dad, our dinners, his stories and how happy he was in his work. I always had an affinity with dentistry and by my mid-thirties I decided to change careers. I was going to be a dentist.”

Easier said than done. Knight Jr., an Albemarle High School graduate, went back to school to take all the sciences classes he needed and after that enrolled in the Dental School at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

“I was an older student and it had been a while since I had been in school,” he said. “I had to relearn how to learn. It was tough.”

What made it tougher was that Knight Jr. was a single dad at the time, went to school fulltime and waited tables during weekends. "It's the hardest thing I have ever done," he said. "But it's also the best thing I could've done. And having a dentist-Dad was obviously a big help. I could go to him for advice and use him as my sounding board."

All his hard work paid off and Jay Knight Jr. graduated dental school in 2001. He joined his Dad's practice and embarked on what he calls 'a unique period in his life'. "At that point my Dad wasn't just my Dad and my mentor, we were now colleagues. Instead of him telling stories at the dinner table about work, we could now share them. I think it's pretty unique to have that kind of relationship with your Dad."

In 2004 Junior took over the Charlottesville practice, and Senior took on a more advisory role. Four yours later, Knight Jr. decided to expand the business. "We had a lot of patients coming to Charlottesville from Louisa and places closer to Richmond," he said. "We thought it would be great if we could offer them a more convenient location. That's why we opened Spring Creek Family Dentistry in Zion Crossroads."

Although construction started during the Great Depression of 2008, the business was able to take off; Zion Crossroads has seen a boost in businesses locating there, as well as many new housing developments that took shape over the last decade or so.

"My vision for that practice was to have a place where the whole family can go for their dental needs," Knight Jr. said. "And although we very rarely have to refer patients, we are what you would call a one-stop-shop."

John H. Knight Sr. passed away in 2012.

"What's amazing is that I still see patients that started with my Dad in the 60s. And I see their kids, and grand kids. In some cases I see the fourth generation of a family that started with my Dad."

John H. Knight Jr. DDS & Associates in Charlottesville, and Spring Creek Family Dentistry in Zion Crossroads took home the number one spot in the category Best Dentist Office and Best Orthodontist Office in this year's Readers' Choice contest. "I'm honored by that. But I feel like a parent in this case; this is all about the wonderful people I work with. They deserve this."

Looking back at his journey that made Jay Knight Jr. a successful health care professional, only one word comes to mind. "Amazing. It's been very rewarding. People say it's not about the destination, but about the journey, and I agree. My Dad always used to say: Do what makes you happy, and do it often. That's exactly what I'm doing."

Best Preschool

St. Mark Lutheran Preschool

Now Enrolling for 2020-2021 School year

www.stmarkpreschool.net
As a kid growing up in Detroit, Christian Argie developed a love for all things computers. He used to watch his dad work, who was a computer engineer in the Motor City, working for the automobile industry. It didn’t take Christian long to venture out on his own and help folks with their computer issues, to earn himself some extra cash.

“By the time I was 19, I started my own computer company out of my basement,” Argie said. He named his business Top Notch Computers and at that time, it was a part time job. By age 22, Argie decided he found his calling and the founder and owner of the new business went fulltime. What started out as a one-man undertaking, has grown into a business with several locations, over twenty employees and a reputation to match. Argie himself is recognized as an authority in IT administration and cyber security, and has been featured on CBS, NBC and FOX in that capacity.

Top Notch Computers & Technology Services offers services to both commercial businesses and residential customers alike. Whether a large, local business is looking for smart IT solutions, or if someone has a laptop that needs repair, Top Notch Computers can handle the task.

“It’s because we have such a dynamic, diverse and talented team,” Argie said. “Whatever the problem we have someone on the team that can handle it.”

Argie is a firm believer in doing business with his clients face-to-face. “It’s the best way to get a good relationship with a client. Getting to know each other is important. To me it doesn’t matter if you own a small business in town, or if you are part of a Fortune 500 company. Everyone deserves the same level of customer service.”

Top Notch has locations in Charlottesville, Richmond and Washington D.C. and running a successful business with over 20 employees in three locations keeps Argie busy, to say the least.

Still, three years ago, Argie and his wife Leah founded Top Notch Family
Pharmacy on Preston Avenue. “That really is my wife’s baby,” he said about the pharmacy.

Leah Argie, a VCU grad with a PharmD degree under her belt, wanted to become a pharmacist as long as she could remember. When she learned that a local pharmacy in Charlottesville was disappearing to make way for a big retail chain, she decided to step in and fill the void; Top Notch Family Pharmacy.

Despite both Christian and Leah being successful business owners, they remain humble and are able to put things in perspective.

“My wife is a hard worker and mostly wants to stay out of the limelight,” Argie said. “I’m the same way. Every day, I just put my head down and do the best possible job I can. There’s no need to get greedy, or to get over ambitious.” That doesn’t mean Argie doesn’t want to grow his business further. “I’m a terrible planner,” he laughed. “The vision for Top Notch Computers is to expand and to continue to deliver a great service to businesses and residents. When you work hard, those possibilities will come.”

For Argie it comes as no surprise he works with a dedicated and highly professional staff. Just how dedicated, he learned during times of a global pandemic.

“In a time when most people were staying home because of COVID19, folks might have seen our vans driving around town,” he said. “That’s not because I was somehow demanding that my staff kept working. We were going to close, but the state of Virginia threatened to sue me if I did. We are an essential business and had to stay open. Thankfully, most of my staff volunteered to stay on the job. For those who couldn’t, we made sure there was a way for them to work remotely. That says a lot about how dedicated my staff is.”

Meg West, a Baltimore native, professional painter and nature lover, has called Crozet home for the past 34 years. It has become her hometown. For the past 20 years, West has been a professional landscape painter, taking her blank canvas to wherever Mother Nature beckons her.

With great results. Not only has West been able to make a living as a professional artist for two decades, she was voted 'Best Local Artist' in the Daily Progress' Readers' Choice contest.

“I was always attracted to the arts," West said. She attended the Philadelphia College of Art, where she majored in graphic design and minored in painting. After working as a graphic designer for several years, West decided to become a fulltime painter around the turn of the century.

“I am what's called a plein air painter," West explained. "It's a French expression that means the act of outdoor painting. I love being outdoors and I love painting landscapes."

Renoir and Monet, to name just a few, were plein air painters as well.

West paints everyday and for most of the time, it's a job that requires her to be alone. "Like many other people, I sometimes like the solitude," she said. "And the work itself comes with challenges, like the weather, dealing with sunlight and shade, and bugs as well. There are things in nature that are always moving and that can be difficult to capture."

In times when West enjoys the company of likeminded individuals, she relies on a solid network of local painters, who get together and venture out to paint together.

Some of these outings are sponsored by local galleries, who will exhibit the paintings for a month or so, and take a percentage of the sales for their efforts. Participating artists are usually invited by the gallery.

One such outing is in Lexington, West said.

“It's always in the Fall and obviously was canceled this year. But in previous years friends of the gallery there will volunteer a bedroom, or two, for local artists to stay in when they are there for the painting and opening night. To me, that showcases how the arts can bring a community together."

It's hard to say how many paintings West sells on a yearly basis, since she paints both big and small paintings. Her husband, a carpenter, often helps out for a finishing touch.

“We make our own frames for my paintings," West said. "We use Virginia grown Cherry wood for that. It's great to have a carpenter for a husband." West said she is 'very honored' to be awarded first place in the category 'Local Artist'.

“It's wonderful to know that my work is known with at least some of the Daily Progress readers," West said. "It makes me very happy that my work is making an impact."

West is a member of the Crozet Artisan Depot, Cville Arts and some of her favorite spots to paint are the many local vineyards in Western Albemarle, the Blue Ridge Parkway, Garth Road and Chiles Peach Orchard in Crozet.

"THE WORK ITSELF COMES WITH CHALLENGES, LIKE THE WEATHER, DEALING WITH SUNLIGHT AND SHADE, AND BUGS AS WELL."

Creatures Great and Small, the boarding and pet grooming business in Charlottesville, won two categories in this year’s Readers’ Choice: Pet Day Care and Pet Grooming.

“I’m shocked, and I’m honored,” owner Katie Emanuel said.

Creatures Great and Small started in 1992, when Emanuel’s mom took over the Berkmar Park Pet Center. She moved here from Maryland, where the family lived on a horse farm, and would take care of their dogs.

“We would be grooming our dogs all the time; it was a natural process for us. It was an easy transition to start grooming other people’s dogs.”

In the 28 years that Creatures Great and Small has been in business, the connection with the local community and her customers have been the most rewarding part of Emanuel’s job.

“Taking care of animals is obviously our calling,” Emanuel said. “We board and groom all dogs that come through our doors, but we have specialized in taking care of dogs that have issues. Dogs that tend to bite, have been abused or are elderly. That’s what we love to do. In doing so, we have cultivated wonderful relationships with our customers. Our customers become our family.”

That became apparent two years ago when Emanuel’s mom suddenly passed away.

“Our customers organized a sit-in in our lobby and they mourned with us,” Emanuel said. “That’s what I mean when I say that our customers become our family. Without those wonderful customers, we wouldn’t be here.”

Emanuel said the same thing about her employees. She calls them dedicated and family members as well. Creatures Great and Small has around 10 employees.

It’s safe to say that Emanuel’s life revolves around animals. When she’s not working at Creatures Great and Small, she cares for her 15 Anatolian Shepherds on her farm. She travels the country showing her dogs in dog shows and has even participated in the Westminster Dog Show.

With Emanuel’s daughter now helping out at her store, a third generation of the family is now involved in day-to-day operations.

“We are a small family-owned business,” Emanuel said. “And we are proud of it.”

SPOTLIGHT

PJ NETWORK COMPUTER SERVICES
WINNER (TIE): BEST COMPUTER REPAIR
For the 6th year in a row, PJ Network Computer Services in Charlottesville has won the category “Computer Repair” in the annual Daily Progress Readers’ Choice contest. But don’t think for a moment owner and CEO Phil Jaderborg will rest on his laurels to enjoy that success. It’s not how he’s wired. Complacency has no place in Jaderborg’s work and personal life.

“A reputation is the most important thing to a small family-owned business,” Jaderborg said. “And you have to work hard everyday to make sure that reputation stays good.”

Jaderborg is a Central Virginia native, who ventured out to California for about a decade, but couldn’t resist the call of the Blue Ridge Mountains. He returned and in 2005 started his own business; PJ Networks. With that company, he set out to provide businesses in his community with first class computer support.

“We really offer a broad range of services for businesses,” Jaderborg said. “If I were to highlight the most important ones, it would be remote workplace solutions, business networks and managed services.”

That last one is particularly important in the business world, Jaderborg said. “In times past, a business like us would get a phone call whenever there was a problem. We would come out and then fix it. That might still happen, but with managed services, we monitor our clients’ systems in real time and can act pro-actively before a problem arises.”

Not long after Jaderborg got his business off the ground, with his wife Kelly by his side as Administrative Director, the business owner noticed another need in the community and decided to fill the void.

“A lot of the computer repair places in town were disappearing,” he said. “But at the same time, we really noticed a demand for these services. So we decided to expand our services.”

Now, PJ Networks supports mostly small to mid-sized companies streamline their computer network environments, but residents who have issues with their equipment, from a broken laptop screen to computer viruses, have a place to go for expert help.

“Whatever the case, I am a strong believer in face-to-face contact with our clients,” Jaderborg said. “It’s how you build good relationships. We are not a company that solves a problem and sends an invoice. That’s not how we work. We also make sure that we assign a primary engineer to a specific business. That way, the business gets to know their point person on a personal level and help is always just one phone call away.”

The 14 employees at PJ Networks Computer Services are like family, Jaderborg said.

“For me, it really is unique. They are always willing to step in and help out when needed. If a certain primary engineer is not available to help a client, someone else steps in, makes sure he or she knows the client, the issues, and gets the job done.”

Finally, in a world that is more and more characterized by automated phone menus or online forms to fill out, Jaderborg is adamant about making sure when someone calls his business, that person gets to speak with a live person.

“That is a guarantee,” he said.
