Stay-at-home order starts tonight

County residents must stay home, except to get necessities and for work deemed essential

Denton County and the city of Denton announced a weekend stay-at-home mandate starting late Wednesday night to reduce the spread of COVID-19. The mandate will last for seven days unless ratified or extended by the county Commissioners Court. Denton County Judge Andy Eads said Monday the county has seen a dramatic increase in COVID-19 cases that has resulted in hospitalizations. Eads said the county’s hospitalization rates are at their highest point ever. He said the county is currently at 123% capacity in hospital beds, and state guidelines say that rate needs to be at 95% or below for counties to receive the full allotment of state help containing the COVID-19 virus.

The order means residents can leave their homes only to shop for food and other needs, exercise, care for others, conduct business or work remotely, or if reported for essential business.

School board gives Wilson broader authority during coronavirus crisis

Denton school board members, including Lunto Begaj’s 23-year-old son, said Monday that “gesture” on Tuesday. The meeting was held virtually through the district’s website. Roughly an hour ahead of time. Roughly an hour before the meeting, more than 200 people had signed on to follow along or participate.
