Friends and family, we are inviting you to help support a precious 5-year-old boy named Maddox. On July 10, 2019 Maddox was taken into the doctor by his parents Tyler and Ashley Rehn for what they thought was just a virus that was causing him to have severe stomach pains. Much to their surprise, they were informed that little Maddox was diagnosed with B Cell Acute Lymphocytic Leukemia. Immediately decisions had to be made without consideration for the cost as Maddox was to begin treatment the next day. Since then, Maddox has needed transfusions of blood and platelets. Treatment for Maddox is going to be a very long journey that will take about three years. Little Maddox is currently in what is called the "induction" stage of his chemotherapy. Tyler and Ashley have been told that the next 6 months for Maddox will be the most difficult. Maddox will continue to make frequent trips to the hospital for check-ups and blood draws, as well as twice a week visits for chemotherapy treatments and spinal taps. From their insurance agent, their policy does not cover chemotherapy drugs and they were told the amount could get over a million dollars. While an exact figure cannot be provided, they were told the cost of the prescription drugs little Maddox will need monthly will barely be covered under the insurance they have.
