Watt has been out since Oct. 27 after tearing a pectoral muscle, an injury which required surgery.

"I feel really good," Watt said. "We've worked extremely hard at rehab. We've had a very smooth process and everything's been going extremely well. So I'm really, really excited to back in the field with everybody and to get back out there helping my team and playing for this city."

The Texans will have 21 days from Tuesday to take him off the injured reserve and add him to the active roster. If they plan to play him in their first playoff game during the weekend of Jan. 4-5, they'll have to activate him by 4 p.m. ET the day before the game.

Watt has been working out with the team's trainers and medical staff away for a while and said he's felt good during those workouts. He said he's been wearing a harness during those workouts and that he'll continue to wear that to protect himself during team practices. The harness keeps his arm from being pulled too far backward, but it will not restrict him from moving his arm forward or raising it up.

Watt said that he began thinking he might be able to return for the postseason not long after he was injured.

Marshawn Lynch signs with Seahawks

 $\rm SEATTLE-A$  reunion of Marshawn Lynch and the Seahawks, rumored all day Monday, finally became a reality Monday night.

Lynch's agent, Doug Hendrickson, tweeted a picture of Lynch's contract under the heading "My son @MoneyLynch is back! Boom let's go!"

Lynch himself further confirmed the news with a video posted on his YouTube website, Beast Mode Productions, that was apparently produced before he came to an agreement with Seattle but in which he talked about the possibility of it happening.

Lynch said he would return to Seattle for "this playoff run" and try to help the Seahawks complete some "unfinished business."

Lynch says in the video he may not be the running back he was five years ago but that he wants to "just be able to come in and step in where it's needed."

Cavaliers send Clarkson to Jazz for Exum,

22nd-round picks

CLEVELAND — The Cavaliers traded Jordan Clarkson before he could walk away.

Cleveland dealt the veteran backup guard to the Utah Jazz for guard Dante Exum and two future second-round draft picks on Tuesday. The teams agreed to terms of the deal shortly before their games in Cleveland and Miami tipped off on Monday, and the NBA approved it Tuesday.

Clarkson was in the final year of his contract and was unlikely to re-sign with the Cavaliers as a free agent, so the club made a move to add a young player and future assets to help Cleveland rebuild.

The Cavaliers will get San Antonio's second-round pick in 2022 and Golden State's in 2023. The Jazz acquired those selections in other trades.

Clarkson could be the first of several veterans moved by the Cavs, who have reportedly been open to receiving offers for star forward Kevin Love. Following Monday's 121-118 victory over Atlanta, Love posted a message on Instagram, saying he would miss Clarkson.

Mets, Betances agree to 1-year deal

NEW YORK — The New York Mets have reached an agreement with free-agent reliever Dellin Betances on a one-year contract with a player option for 2021.

The Mets announced the deal with the four-time All Star on Tuesday. Betances is guaranteed $10.5 million under the contract.

The 31-year-old, who is from New York, is staying in his hometown after spending his first eight seasons in the majors with the Yankees.

He missed most of 2019 because of various injuries. Betances' season ended after just eight pitches. He tore an Achilles tendon in his first appearance back from a lat injury that had sidelined him since spring training.

Betances was the first reliever in baseball history to have 100 or more strikeouts in five consecutive seasons (2014-2018). The right-hander led all major league relievers in strikeouts in each year from 2014-2016.

In 2018, Betances made 66 appearances, with a 2.70 ERA and 115 strikeouts in 66 2/3 innings. He has made nine career playoff appearances, with a 3.27 ERA and 17 strikeouts in 11 innings.

Steelers QB Rudolph done for season, Hodges to start finale

PITTSBURGH — Mason Rudolph's star-crossed season is over. The Pittsburgh Steelers placed the second-year quarterback on injured reserve on Tuesday, two days after Rudolph hurt his left shoulder in the third quarter of a loss to the New York Jets.

The move clears up Pittsburgh's quarterback picture heading into the regular-season finale against the Baltimore Ravens. Rookie Devlin "Duck" Hodges will make his fifth straight start for the Steelers (8-7), who are in a tie with Tennessee for the final wild-card spot in the AFC. Paxton Lynch will serve as Hodges' primary backup. The Steelers signed former Ohio State star J.T. Barrett to the practice squad on Tuesday to provide depth.

Pittsburgh needs Hodges to be more careful with the ball. He's thrown six interceptions over his past two games and was pulled in the second quarter against the Jets after tossing picks on two of the Steelers' first three possessions.

While Tomlin stressed he had no issues with Hodges' preparation or his approach, Pittsburgh's offensive limitations at this point require avoiding the kind of mistakes that have forced the Steelers to play from behind during a two-game losing streak that's put their playoff chances in a precarious position.

There's little chance the Steelers turn to Lynch. A firstround pick by the Denver Broncos in 2016, the Steelers signed Lynch to the practice squad in September and he's done limited work with the starting group.

"What he's done to this point hasn't provided a great deal of comfort to him or to us," Tomlin said.

Hodges will have to play without center Maurkice Pouncey, who is out with a left knee injury sustained one snap before Rudolph went down. Running back James Conner is questionable with a quad injury suffered in the first half against New York. Conner, a Pro Bowler last season, has missed extensive time already this year with a lingering shoulder issue.

Watt returns to practice with Texans

HOUSTON — J.J. Watt returned to practice with the Houston Texans on Tuesday, clearing the way for the star defensive end to play in the team's playoff game in two weeks.
