

Two months of restrictions

Galveston County officials on Monday announced that businesses in the county could loosen COVID-19 restrictions caused by an increase in hospitalizations related to the virus in December. The restrictions were enacted on Dec. 22 and were lifted on Feb. 20. The local hospitalization rate peaked around the middle of January. (The very high hospitalization rates on two dates in December are likely due to data entry errors, officials said.)

