

We are asking you to join us for a RALLY FOR OHIO'S FUTURE at the Ohio Statehouse in Columbus on Wednesday, June 21st from 12PM to 1PM.

Here's why: You have been stepping up to give help and hope to your communities at record levels for more than 3 years. Your communities need you again.

In the next two weeks, elected officials in Ohio will decide whether Ohio parents and caregivers, kids, workers, jobseekers, older adults, and disabled residents will be able to count on more staple foods and Ohio-grown fruits and vegetables from their local hunger relief providers.

They have a chance to fully fund Ohio's foodbanks to keep our communities healthy and nourished – say yes to free school meals for more of Ohio's students – expand Medicaid coverage for pregnant women, infants, and toddlers – invest in affordable housing, healthy aging, quality child care and public schools – and so much more.

But some are threatening to do the opposite – limit access to food assistance and health coverage, cut taxes for the wealthy, cut investments in basic services and safety net programs, and endanger revenue that will be needed to pay for basic needs down the road, and strip funding from a variety of programs that support Ohioans – the Ohioans you serve each day.

We are joining in coalition with the Ohio Association of Foodbanks and many other advocates and organizations who care about the real needs that Ohioans are facing to show up for our communities.

Please join us to Rally for Ohio's Future.

We hope to see you there – it's time to show up and speak up, together.
