Indus quilt show set for May 14

INDUS SCHOOL REPORT

Indus Community Education is once again calling call quilters to the annual quilt show set for May 14 at Indus School.

As in the past, quilts will be on display in the library from 5 to 7 p.m. Quilters are encouraged to bring their handiwork and creativity to Indus School for display. Antique and heirloom quilts are also sought for display. Response in the past years has been overwhelming and organizers are hoping for the same this year.

In addition to the quilt show, a small craft fair will take place in the library area. In addition, Lois Lewis and the Family Consumer Science students will sponsor a freewill baked potato supper from 4:30 to 6:30 in the FACS room.

To finish off the evening, Indus music teacher, Stacy Ottemann, will direct the spring music concert beginning at 7 in the commons area.

Call Karen Anderson, Indus School secretary, at 285-3479 or 218-634-2425, for more information concerning the quilt show or to sign up for a craft fair table.

Newspapers Can Make a Positive Difference in Students Reading Abilities

The Journal with the help of our sponsors, Boise and Essentia Health, has started a Newspapers in Education program for our local schools. We believe we can make a difference by helping students to develop their reading ability, increase social awareness, build character, enrich their civic education and so much more. Over 20 teachers are utilizing our papers in their classrooms, over 700 papers each week are supplied free of charge to the schools. If not for the generous donations of our sponsors this program would not be possible. Together we can make a difference in the quality of the education our children receive. Together we can offer our students access to the only textbook that is updated twice a week: The International Falls Journal newspaper.
