

CEOs returns

Last year, nearly 200 students heard the program designed to get students thinking about the world of work and how decisions made now could affect their dreams and ultimate quality of life.

Tony Palm of Bremer Bank, speaks to John Sandberg's eighth grade class last week as part of the CEOs in the classroom program.

Autumn Stull raises her hand in response to Tony Palm asking students if they have an idea of what career they'd like to pursue.

Tony Palm gives Sutton Veillieux $1 to share with the class what Veillieux would like to be when he grows up.
