DUMMY: NO POINTS, BUT USEFUL CARDS

George Bernard Shaw said, "A life spent making mistakes is not only more honorable but more useful than a life spent doing nothing."

At the bridge table, we make a lot of mistakes. But with luck, as we gain experience, we make fewer of them. This week, we have been handling the trump suit. Here is one last example — let's get it right!

West leads the diamond king against six spades. How should declarer plan the play?

The South hand is very honorable, with, in Chicago and rubber-bridge scoring, 150 in aces and 150 in spades. It also has 11 winners. Can partner produce an extra trick or two?

In this auction, South's jump to three spades showed a solid suit, set that suit as trumps, and asked partner if he had anything. North's raise to four spades denied an ace or a king. South's leap to six spades was understandable, although risky with those two losing diamonds.

South must discard one diamond from the dummy on his third top heart and ruff his last diamond in the dummy. He wins with his diamond ace, cashes the three top hearts, and exits with a diamond. He takes the next trick and ruffs his last diamond with dummy's spade eight, so there's no risk of an overruff. Then he draws trumps and claims.

Finally, note that this is one deal in which the very bad trump split was lucky. If West had been able to lead a trump, and the defender who took the diamond trick could have led another trump, the slam would have failed.

HEADING TOWARD ELEVATED HEIGHTS

Phyllis Diller said, "We spend the first 12 months of our children's lives teaching them to walk and talk and the next 12 telling them to sit down and shut up."

At the bridge table, some players are scared of 12 — the number of tricks needed for a small slam. Others zoom that high whenever there is the faintest aroma of slam in the air. But the ideal is between those two extremes. This week, let's study some of the factors for accurate slam bidding.

First, when two balanced hands face each other, combined point-count is a surprisingly reliable indicator. Some years ago, I ran a computer analysis. I gave the partnership's hands no five-card suit and no 4-4 fit. I found that when the total point-count was 33, six no-trump was a favorite; but when it was only 32, that slam was an underdog.

Here is an easy example for the bidding, but not so simple in the play. How can South make six no-trump after West leads the club 10?

South's two-no-trump rebid shows a balanced hand with 18, 19 or a poor 20 points. It is in principle forcing to game and does not deny four spades. South cannot risk a nonforcing one-spade rebid with that strong a hand.

South has 11 top tricks: three spades, four hearts, two diamonds and two clubs. The clubs might split 3-3, but that is unlikely both mathematically and given the opening lead. However, the contract is assured if declarer takes trick one, unblocks dummy's diamond ace-king, returns to his hand with, say, a spade, and leads the diamond jack to drive out the queen. The diamond 10 is trick 12.
