Willing to try new things. What you learn will open doors to all sorts of new and exciting pastimes and people. Make your space user-friendly.

— Sit tight and let whatever is happening around you unfold naturally. Focus inward and pay attention to relationships and how you can connect in ways that will help you get along better.

— Play by the rules and pay attention to detail, and you'll make headway. Be wary of anyone using manipulative tactics to push you in a questionable direction.

— Put your best foot forward and rise to whatever task requires your undivided attention. Be bold, do your best and refuse to let anyone's negativity or ego stifle your glory.

— Refuse to let anyone put demands on you. Question, communicate and change what isn't working for you. Do your best and expect the same from your colleagues. Pay attention to high-pressure situation.

— Keep your emotions in check and your eye on what you want to achieve. Be the go-getter, the one to ask questions and put everything in its place. The bolder you are, the more respect and help you will receive.

— Refuse to let excessive behavior and procrastination win when you have so much to gain by pitching in and making a difference. Socializing and networking can lead to promising opportunities.

— Learn through observation, and don't be afraid to ask questions or walk away. A change of heart will encourage you to find a path that better suits your preferences and your budget.

— Sort through investments, financial and legal documents, and any medical issues that need attention. A couple of healthy lifestyle changes can make a difference to your mobility, clarity or longevity.

THE DECLARER MISSED A TOUGH CHANCE

This was the deal in last week's final column. Chen Yuechen from China won the 2013 Richard Freeman Junior Deal of the Year from the International Bridge Press Association for his defense against six no-trump. Chen (West) had guessed to lead his club three. South had taken East's nine with his ace, played a diamond to dummy's jack, and run the heart jack. West had won and found the killing return of his remaining diamond. South won in his hand, cashed his club king, and led a spade, planning to finesse dummy's 10. He needed two dummy entries: one to repeat the heart finesse and the second to cash the 13th heart. But Chen put up his spade jack, a textbook entry-killing play that defeated the contract.

If West returned a club, South could get four tricks in the suit by playing low from the dummy to collect three spades, one heart, four diamonds and four clubs. Or, if West shifted to a low spade, declarer would win with dummy's 10 and have his second dummy entry. He would win three spades, three hearts, four diamonds and two clubs. This is called a Dentist's Coup -- extracting the safe exit card(s) from a defender's hand.
