Indianola School Board Initiates Independent Search for Next Superintendent

INDIANOLA, IOWA — The Indianola Community School District School Board has partnered with McPherson & Jacobson LLC to assist with finding and hiring the district's next superintendent.

The board is searching for a leader to replace Ted Ihns, who is retiring at the end of the school year. The selected candidate will play a pivotal role in advocating for educational excellence, engaging with the community, and advancing the overall development of the Indianola school system.

"The decision to partner with McPherson & Jacobson with the search for our next superintendent underscores our commitment to finding the best possible candidate to lead our district forward," said Mack R. Rankin, Board President. "We believe that our close involvement in the process will allow us to select a leader who not only possesses the necessary skills and experience, but also embodies the spirit of our community."

The application process for the superintendent position will be opened soon. Interested candidates are encouraged to visit the district's website, at www.indianola.k12.ia.us, for more information on how to apply.
