We welcome this renowned physician, researcher and educator to guide our clinical, research, education, innovation and community engagement missions as we strive for more equitable health for all.

Together, we will transform care for our patients through leading research and education, produce the next generation of caregivers, health leaders and innovators, and deepen our commitment to scientific discovery and clinical excellence.

As Wake Forest University School of Medicine expands to become one school with two campuses, in Winston-Salem and Charlotte, and serves as the academic core of the newly formed Advocate Health, we look forward to seeing where Dr. Boulware's leadership will take us!
