Way of the Cross event draws hundreds

BY SHANE MONACO
FME NEWS SERVICE

Hundreds of Christians walked through Temple streets Friday during the 20th annual Way of the Cross.

The walk cut through the southern side of Temple, visiting three local Catholic churches and observing the 14 Stations of the Cross.

Participants walked a five-mile path from Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, at 707 S. Sixth St., to St. Mary's Catholic Church, at 1018 Seventh St., before ending at St. Luke's Catholic Church, at 2807 Oakdale Drive, in observance of the Via Dolorosa.

All three churches on the route have helped each year to put the event together, with members of their congregations assisting where they are able to.

According to one of the event organizers, Deacon Barney Rodriguez from St. Mary's, said the three churches got together six weeks before the event to discuss the organization of the event.

"This year has just been so easy to put together because everything was already in place," Rodriguez said. "The committees have grown from five or six people, to now everyone just wanting to do it. Sometimes we just have to say that we have enough people."

CJ Wilde, who has been participating in the event every year for 20 years, said there have not been many changes other than the growing number of participants.

"It's a special thing that we carry the cross through town and pray reverence to Jesus," Wilde said. "When we first started out, we had 300 to 400 people and I know we have way over a thousand now."

As the procession of people snaked through the city streets, many people quietly contemplated their faith and the meaning of this day.

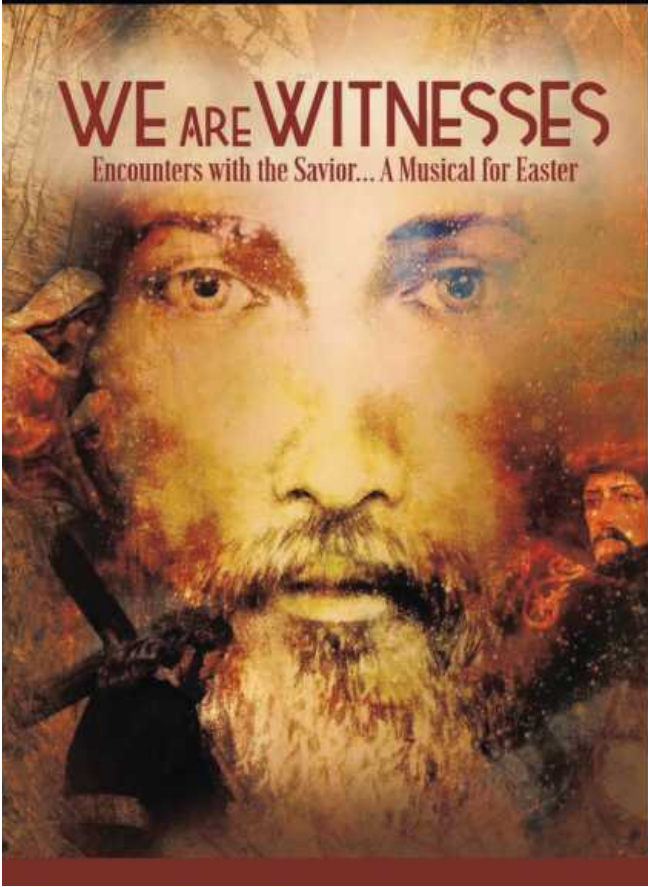

Others, instead silently observing the occasion, prayed and followed along with the words of the deacon broadcast through the loudspeaker on the back of a truck as some people took turns carrying a large wooden cross through the streets.

Many of those walking in the procession brought family and friends along for this journey, such as Nancy Glover of St. Mary's Catholic Church. She was walking for her fifth time and brought her daughter, Keia, for her second time.

"This is just a wonderful day to spend Good Friday, among other Catholics in this really solemn walk through town," Glover said.

"Each year I get a little bit more out of the walk, I'll learn a some other message that God is trying to tell me through the processional," she said. "It really gives you a great feeling of solidarity and pride that everyone else has takes the time out to observe such a wonderful event in Temple."
