Chief Logan Announces Retirement

Chief Arthur "Joe" Logan released the following statement today:

It has been an honor and a privilege to serve as the Honolulu Police Department's (HPD) 12th Chief of Police.

Over the last three years, crime has gone down; and we have made significant progress in moving the HPD forward. This would not be possible without the hard work, commitment, and creativity of our officers and civilian employees. Your dedication to serving and protecting the people of O'ahu is inspiring and unequalled.

And so, it is with a heavy heart and to avoid distracting from the HPD's important work, I will be retiring at the end of this month.

Leading a large police department is tough and demanding, and it requires constant balancing of competing needs and wants from all sectors of the community. Getting the job done is only made possible with the support of many.

I would like to thank our sworn and civilian employees for all that they do, every day, and often while under pressure. The community needs you. Please keep up the outstanding work.

Mahalo to the members of the Honolulu Police Commission for their trust and support. Your time and dedication are greatly appreciated by the department and the public. Personally, I have especially appreciated the insight shared by the Commissioners who have served as former city executives.

Thank you to the many individuals, community organizations, and law enforcement agencies that work closely with the HPD. We appreciate your time, knowledge, and expertise. Mahalo for helping us to make O‘ahu safer for our residents and visitors.

Lastly, my heartfelt gratitude goes out to my wife, Gaylene, and our family for their support over my decades of public service. Thank you for your love and sacrifice. I could not have done it without you.
