Community services

Natural Resources

LaGrange County is predominantly an agricultural community, with more than 70 percent of its land used for crops, pasture or hay. Cropland use varies throughout the county. Because the county has a large number of dairy operations and a large Amish population, much of the land is in hay or pasture. Corn, soybeans and wheat are the major crops. LaGrange County has a number of organic farms producing organic dairy products, chickens and eggs. LaGrange County also has more than 16,000 acres of woodlands and 15,000 acres of wetlands. The Pigeon River Fish and Wildlife Area, maintained by the Indiana Department of Natural Resources, provides more than 11,700 acres of land for fishing, hunting and other recreational activities. LaGrange County offers a robust park system featuring forests, rivers, lakes and a restored fen.

Lakes Council

The LaGrange County Lakes Council is a membership group for people interested in the present and future welfare of the lakes and watersheds in LaGrange County.

Board meetings are on the fourth Thursday of each month (except November and December) at 7 p.m. in the LaGrange County Annex Building, 114 W. Michigan St., LaGrange. The public is invited to attend. To contact the lakes council, go to lagrangelakes.org.

The council and its programs are governed by a board of directors made up of representatives of many of the populated lakes in the county.
