STEBEN COUNTY LAKES & BEACHES

Steuben County might be best known for its lakes, of which there are more than 100 (for tourism marketing purposes, the number 101 is used). The county's lakes range in size from a few acres to 1,034 acres, which is Lake James, one of the state's largest natural lakes. A majority of the lakes are in Jamestown and Pleasant townships. That's where the Lake James chain is located, which includes Big and Little Otter lakes, Snow Lake, Lake James and Jimmerson Lake.

Other major lakes in these two townships include Lake George, Barton Lake, Crooked Lake, Fox Lake and Loon Lake.

Clear Lake in the northeastern corner of the county at 800 acres, is considered to have some of the best water quality in the state, according to authorities with Indiana University and the Indiana Department of Environmental Management.

Lake Gage

a round, kettle-shaped lake near Orland, is about 332 acres and, like Clear Lake, has extremely high water quality.

Hamilton Lake

which is practically surrounded by the town of Hamilton in the southeastern corner of the county, has 802 surface acres.

With all of the lakes, along with Pigeon River, Fish Creek and Fawn River

Crooked Creek

it shouldn't come as a surprise that Steuben County has a lot of water. In fact, about 9 percent of the county's surface acreage is water. Some of the county's lakes are highly developed, such as was one of the earliest in the county to be developed for recreational use. There once were passenger trains that carried visitors to Crooked Lake and Lake James.

Lake James and Crooked Lake.

Crooked Lake

Lake James

hilly, wooded shoreline is dotted with lake cottages and homes. However, about one-fourth of the natural shoreline of James, in Pokagon State Park, remains much as it was when it was created by the glaciers.

Pokagon's shoreline extends to its northern boundary on Snow Lake. There, a steep, tree-covered hill drops off sharply to the water's edge.

Some of the county's lakes remain natural wonders, with minimal human encroachment. Those include the Seven Sisters Lakes at Trine

State Recreation Area surround the shoreline. The Seven Sisters, the largest of which is Gentian Lake, are some of the most pristine lakes in the Midwest.

Somewhat more accessible is Loon Lake, west of Angola. Much of Loon Lake is preserved by the Nature Conservancy, a private, international land conservation group. Loon Lake is home to many different species of rare and endangered plants and wildflowers, including carnivorous plants.

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources maintains a fish hatchery along the Fawn River in Orland. There, DNR Fish and Wildlife biologists raise fish for stocking in Indiana lakes and also use the facility as a base from which to conduct research.
