

My Dream Career

Every year, millions of tons of plastic enter our ocean. Though we do some to stop it, it isn't enough. My dream is to become a federal Supreme Court judge when I am an adult so I can save the environment. In other words, I want to save the earth through politics.

I want to be a Supreme Court judge for many reasons. I think I would be a good supreme court judge because I am good at listening and arguing. Because of this, it seems like it would be fun to hear others' disputes and decide who is right. The reason I want to be a Supreme Court judge specifically is that I would have a larger impact than I would as a local court judge. Overall I think I would be a good federal Supreme Court judge.

I'm planning on becoming a supreme court judge by making myself known outside of my job. To start off, I'll get my bachelor's degree and law degree. I am hoping to go to Yale for my bachelors degree and Harvard for my degree in law. Once I pass the bar exam I'll get hired by a law firm and work there for some time. I will then become a court judge who specializes in environmental cases. I will slowly get promoted until finally becoming the head judge. While that happens I will write books and make speeches in support of the environment so that I'll become known nationally and hopefully get noticed by the president and selected as a candidate for supreme court judge. Once I have become a supreme court judge I will have fully accomplished my dream and will get to vote in support of the environment in big cases.

In conclusion, I want to support the environment by becoming a supreme court judge. The environment is the most important requirement for the survival of all life so it's important we protect it. I want to save the world, and for me, becoming a supreme court judge is the best way to do it.
