

Statement from Cedar Valley Medical Specialists Physician Leadership

It is with profound disappointment and heartbreak that we announce the conclusion of operations at Cedar Valley Medical Specialists (CVMS).

For decades, our physicians and staff have dedicated themselves to caring for patients throughout the Cedar Valley and surrounding communities. The inability to continue providing that care as we have for so many years is devastating, particularly knowing the uncertainty and disruption this creates for the patients and families who have placed their trust in us.

Throughout this crisis, our physicians have remained committed to their patients, even demonstrating a willingness to continue working without compensation to preserve access to care. Our dedicated staff have shown that same extraordinary commitment, with physicians and employees volunteering their time to help patients continue receiving care during this difficult transition.

The conclusion of CVMS does not mean that all physician practices are closing or that patient care has come to an end. Many of our physicians and care teams are working to continue serving patients through new or independent practices. In the meantime, we are doing everything possible to maintain access to care, support continuity of treatment, and minimize disruption.

While we are deeply disappointed by this outcome, our focus remains on what matters most: our patients and our community. The relationships we have built over decades do not end with the closure of an organization.

Although CVMS is coming to an end, our commitment to caring for this community is not.
