CARS DRIVING INTO HUNTING SEASON!

By Benoit Charette
Auto Journalist

Fall is hunting season and many game enthusiasts will venture off paved highways and onto dirt roads and possibly encounter other types of harsh driving conditions. Here are some important tips to follow before you set off on your hunting adventure.

For starters, make sure your vehicle is able to take on difficult terrain. You'll need an all-wheel drive transmission and, ideally, high ground clearance designed for bush roads. Pickup trucks and SUVs are respectable options. It's also a good idea to get off-road tires.

If you aren't familiar with the trails leading to your camp, it makes sense to do some reconnaissance to avoid unpleasant surprise (such as a fallen tree blocking the road or a flooded trail section). And this might seem obvious, but don't forget to bring at least two-and-a-half gallons of extra fuel, just in case.

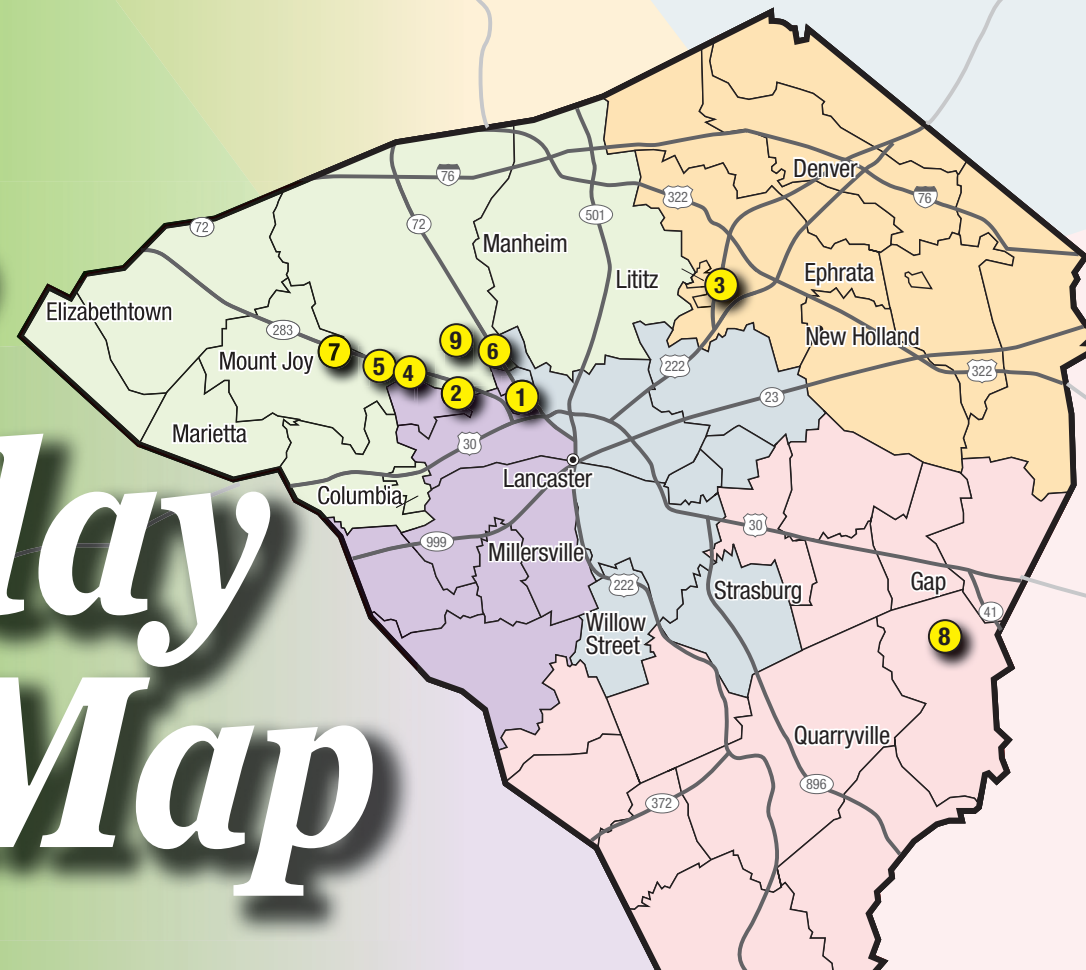

Ideally, you'll head out into the wilderness as part of a group—you don't want to end up stranded alone, miles away from civilization. Bring walkie-talkies so that you can communicate in case of a mechanical problem or if you lose one of your hunting buddies.

A hatchet and shovel may also prove useful to get you out of a sticky situation (if a tree prevents you from moving forward, for example). You'll also need towing cables in case your truck gets stuck. Use a tree or a friend's truck as an anchor point.

Finally, always stay on the trail and follow signage, and keep a change of clothes in your vehicle. You never know what Mother Nature has in store.

“ALL OF YOUR SNOW ESSENTIALS

4 ways to help snow removers get the job done right

Thanks in part to the size of their tractors, snow removal service employees need your help to ensure that they're able to do their job. Here are four things you can do to make certain you get the service you deserve.

1. Keep your driveway clear

Make sure your driveway is free of clutter. Shovels, sleds, hockey equipment and other winter accessories can prevent snow removers from clearing your driveway and may even damage their equipment.

2. Be careful where you leave your bins

Trash, recycling and compost bins should be removed from your driveway as soon as they've been emptied. Avoid leaving them in areas where snowbanks are likely to form. If you can't keep them out of the way entirely, try to position them so they won't be an encumbrance.

3. Move your vehicle

If possible, park your vehicle at least 10 feet away from your driveway so the plow can remove snow from it without having to maneuver around your car.

4. Remove ice

If your driveway is icy, you should use ice melting products or abrasives. Doing so will reduce the risk that you or someone else will slip and fall. It'll also prevent the snowplow from sliding on the ice and potentially losing control. This is especially important if your driveway is sloped.

Snow removal service employees do their best to ensure your driveway is kept free of snow. This winter, help them help you by doing your part.
